SEARCH RIVER FOR BODIES OF 21 VICTIMS OF BOAT TRAGEDY

Steamers and River Men on Lookout 16 Miles Below Memphis, Where the Norman Capsized.

2 ST. LOUIS DIVERS ORDERED TO SCENE

Only Two of Those Who Perished on Outing of Engineers Accounted for —Inquiry Immediately.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 9.—The Mississippi River for many miles below Coahoma Landing, Miss., tonight was picketed by river men searching for the bodies of 21 victims of the capsizing of the United States Government steamer M. E. Norman. The swift current that races around Coahoma Bend and on toward Helena, Ark., was expected to carry any bodies not caught on the superstructure of the ill-fated craft down stream, perhaps for many miles.

While the pickets kept watch, Government steamers were searching and watching the vicinity of the disaster which cost the lives of 23 persons, 18 of them members of a party of engineers and their families out for an afternoon on the river in connection with the convention here of the Midsouth Association of Engineers. The other five were members of the crew. The steamer Chisca, arriving here at noon today after searching all of last night and this morning, reported that no bodies had been found.

Divers to Enter Cabin.

Two expert divers were ordered here from St. Louis. They will arrive tomorrow morning. They are to go down and attempt to penetrate the cabin of the Norman, in the hope that they can recover bodies of any persons who may have been caught in the sudden overturning of the steamer after her wild, staggering just before the end. Meanwhile, derrick boats were dispatched to Josie Harry Island, at the end of which the Norman is lodged, to endeavor to hook onto the cabin and tear away enough of the superstructure to release any imprisoned bodies. Divers from the Government fleet planned to cut a hole in the steel hull, two feet under water.

Investigation of the causes of the accident will be started at once by steamboat inspectors and officers of the Army Engineering Corps. Major D. H. Connolly, in charge of the work out of Memphis, said today. "We are going to find out what caused the boat to roll over," he said.

Connolly, who was in charge of the party that so gayly went down the river to Cow Island at noon yesterday, but which was suddenly and dramatically broken up at 2:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, has been working unremittingly since he was pulled out of the stream after the accident. He remained at the scene all of last night. Coming to Memphis at noon, he left again for Coahoma and at 1 p. m.

Many Stories of Heroism.

Stories of heroism involving virtually every member of the party that was hurled into the water in one of the swiftest stretches of the lower Mississippi continued to be heard today. How men placed life preservers on women, neglecting themselves, and how others worked to save persons of lesser strength until they themselves were overcome were frequently told.

The death list was fixed at 23 today, when Mayor Rowlette Paine announced that a careful check by city officials and members of the Mid-South Association of Engineers had established the fate of those on the list given out. The list of dead follows:

Prof. R. M. McNeilly, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, who last night was reported saved; Prof. and Mrs. Walter G. Kirkpatrick of Oxford, Miss.; T. Waters Fox, Paducah, Ky., transportation engineer; Paul Norcross, Atlanta consulting engineer; C. H. Miller, Little Rock, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Board of Memphis and their son, Edgar; E. H. Bowser, C. E. Shearer, William Hamon, G. L. Anderson, Maj. William Gardner, Mrs. Stella Hidinger and Mrs. Lonnie Sidwell, all of Memphis; Mrs. J. Darroh, Oxford, Miss.; W. O. Shaw, resident engineer of the W. Nelson Co., Fulton, Ky.;

Pilot Phones From Nenana He Walked 3 Days After Craft Was Forced Down.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, May 9.—Noel Wein, aviator, who was reported lost near Rampart Wednesday with two passengers, telephoned today from Nenana that he and the passengers were safe after having made the farthest north flight recorded. He said a storm forced him to land and he walked three days and nights to Nenana.

VISCOUNT LASCELLES' UNCLE KILLS RIMSELF WITH SHOTGUN

Kinsman of Princess Mary's Husband Deliberate in His Method of Suicide.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 9.—The Honorable Francis John Lascelles, uncle of Princess Mary's husband, the Viscount Lascelles, shot himself dead with elaborate ingenuity in his smoking room at Lees House, near Romsey, today. He was alone.

The body was found by a maid seven hours later. Lascelles had drawn apart the leaves of an expanding table, firmly fixed a shotgun between them, and attached a rod to the trigger. He then sat in a chair a few feet away, with the gun pointed at his head, and pulled the rod. The discharge from a single barrel entered his head, killing him instantly.

Lascelles was born in 1871, and was half brother to the present Earl of Harewood. It is supposed that temporary insanity caused the suicide, as he was confined in a Canadian nursing home some years ago, until brought home by relatives after killing a Chinaman.

INGE SAILS, SECOND CLASS, EAGER TO SEE HIS CELLAR

London Dean Says He Managed to Survive Three Weeks of Prohibition.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Very Rev. W. R. Inge, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, ending a three week's lecture trip in the United States, today sailed for home in second-class quarters on the Samaria. Dean Inge's only grievance while in the United States, he told interviewers, concerned the constant use of "Gloomy Dean," as a sobriquet applied to him.

Discussing fundamentalism, he remarked that it had been his experience to find that fundamentalists were often very silly people. An expressed opponent of prohibition, he said that he had survived it for three weeks, but that he would be glad to get back to his cellar.

PRESIDENT GOES ON CRUISE

Attorney General and Others Among Guests on Mayflower.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—President and Mrs. Coolidge left Washington today on the Mayflower for a week-end crusie down the Potomac River.

They had with them Attorney General Sargent; Postmaster General and Mrs. New, Mr. and Mrs. Ewin Emison of Vincennes, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor Backus, and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor of Washington. Mr. Emison was in charge of President Coolidge's pre-convention campaign in Indiana.

STILL KEEPS HUSBAND AT HOME

Woman Operating Moonshine Plant Offers Explanation to Raiders.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 9.—When the police liquor squad found a 25-gallon still in a South Boston residence today, a woman who was operating the plant explained that she was manufacturing liquor in order to keep her husband at home nights. "I know his capacity," she said, when officers expressed surprise at the size of the still.

Another woman who was surprised in the act of tending a large still at her home said she was preparing liquor for a wedding feast.

AN ALDERMAN'S BRUISED CHEEK REVEALS A PARTY

Wimer of 27th Ward Says It Is His, Not Public's Face and Refuses to Discuss Incident.

THERE WERE GAMES AND REFRESHMENTS

Miller Was at Gathering, but Won't Talk and Neun Says Whatever Went on Was "Personal."

It is likely nobody would have known about the little party the Board of Aldermen had last Wednesday if Alderman Wimer of the Twenty-seventh Ward hadn't come away with a souvenir. The souvenir was hard to hide. It was a bruise on the Alderman's cheek, which provoked embarrassing questions.

In reply to some of them Wimer intimated he had scratched his face on some cinders. To others he laughingly confided that he had talked out of turn. When a reporter made inquiry, he said it was his face, and not the public's face, and, obviously, with that distinction in mind, it was none of the public's affair what happened to it.

Others, however, bore no souvenirs and were not so reticent. The party, it seems, took place at Butchers' Grove, set well back from Telegraph road, two miles south of Jefferson Barracks and well beyond the city limits.

Mayor at Picnic.

A meeting of the board adjourned at 10 o'clock that morning. Most of the members went from there to the "grove." Mayor Miller was not conspicuously present at the city hall after that hour. President Neun of the board said that he and the Mayor went to the picnic together.

A lunch on was served and with it a beverage which tasted and felt to some of the Aldermen as though it carried a regular kick. After refreshments there were games. Not drop-the-handkerchief or tiddley-winks, but it is said poker, craps and, for the bucolically inclined, horseshoes. Then came the winning souvenir.

That morning President Neun had offered a resolution calling for a survey of every department to determine whether personnel could be reduced. Alderman Wimer, the story goes, tried at the picnic to remind Edgar S. Nicolai, clerk of the board, that he had mentioned something of the sort earlier than Neun had, and hence was entitled to be named as author of the resolution.

Argument Started.

Nicolai failed to recall precisely that. His recollection was that President Neun was the only one who had mentioned such a resolution. That started the argument.

President Neun told a reporter last night that he thought whatever went on down there was "personal." A question about the beverage brought the reply, "Well, I haven't had any beer for a long time." When it was suggested that Wednesday wasn't such a long time ago, he said his own greatest indulgence at the party was to smoke. The others? Neun smiled.

A reporter telephoned to Mayor Miller. After identifying himself he began, "Mr. Mayor, were you out at the Aldermen's entertainment at Butch"——

"I'm busy," the Mayor said. "Can't you let a man alone at his home?" and the receiver was banged on the hook.

WOMAN GETS VERDICT FOR $4000 FROM PULLMAN CO.

Miss Pearl Simon Sued for $40,000 Damages, Alleging Failure to Protect Her.

Miss Pearl Simon of 825 Leland avenue was awarded $4000 damages in Federal Court yesterday against the Pullman Co. for alleged failure to protect her from the unpleasant behavior of a porter.

She testified that she was traveling on a Pullman car from Los Angeles to St. Louis in March, 1921 and that the porter, claiming to act as an intermediary for a white man, made an improper suggestion. She asked for $40,000 damages.

Noted Old New York Hotel Passes.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Hotel Netherland in Fifth Avenue, overlooking lower Central Park, considered one of the city's finest hotels 35 years ago, closed today. The building will be converted into stores and apartments. The hotel was owned by the Baron William Waldorf Astor estate and was sold a few months ago for $2,100,000 cash.

'MILLION TO FIGHT ALIENATION CASE,' COL. BELL, 82, SAYS

'Case Is a Lot of Smoke,' He Declares in Giving His Deposition in Suit of Daughter-in-Law.

URGED SON TO GO TO WIFE, HE AVERS

Neighbor Testifies Christian Bell Appeared at Home of Father With a Black Eye and Bruised Chin.

"I've got a million dollars for defense, but not one cent for tribute," vehemently declared Col. Nicholas M. Bell, 82 years old, of 4442 West Pine boulevard, as he vigorously pounded a table before him in the law offices of Case & Miller yesterday. His deposition was being taken in the suit of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Daphne Doyle Bell, the fourth wife of Bell's son, Christian Peper Bell, who is suing Bell for $100,000, charging he alienated the affections of her husband.

Col. Bell, a prominent Democrat and former Excise Commissioner of St. Louis, became a little angry when attorneys for the plaintiff attempted to obtain information as to his wealth. It was then he told them of defense and tribute, amplifying his statement with the information that he would, in all probability, be able to pay any judgment that might be assessed against him.

Plaintiff a Hat Designer.

Mrs. Darhne Doyle Bell, who is 23 years old, sat near her counsel wearing a tan gown, with modish hat of the same color. Her shoes were of patent leather and tan, with silk stockings to match her clothing. She is a hat designer and was employed up to yesterday at the Levis-Zukoski Millinery Co. She announced she was on her way to a train for New York to take a better position.

The plaintiff married young Bell Sept. 21 last, in Texarkana, Tex., but has not lived with him since shortly after Christmas. Bell, she says, disappeared from St. Louis about three weeks ago. She filed her suit against his father Jan. 3.

The elder Bell proved a rather refractory witness and it was with difficulty that his counsel, former Circuit Judge Thomas L. Anderson, could get him to heed his objections. Col. Bell wanted to answer all questions and on several occasions expressed sorrow that "that kid over there" (meaning Anderson) objects.

"Lot of Smoke," Colonel Says.

"This case is a lot of smoke," soliloquized the Colonel, drawing forth a long-stemed corn cob pipe. "So I guess I'll smoke my pipe and cause a little smoke, too," he mused, "if there is no objection."

Bell declared that he never had heard of the plaintiff until about Nov. 24, after he had sent his son money to come to St. Louis to attend his eighty-second birthday celebration. He said the son was supposed to get to St. Louis for the birthday party Nov. 2, but didn't arrive until Nov. 8. He said when he did come he showed signs of having been drinking. He said his son was here two weeks before the latter told him he was married. He said when his son told him of his marriage he asked him where his wife was. He said the son said she was at a hotel at Sarah and McPherson avenues. The witness said he then told his son that he couldn't stay at his home, to go to his wife.

Home Closed to Fourth Wife.

The defendant was asked if there was any conversation between he and the son about not bringing the fourth Mrs. Bell to his house. Bell answered there was not; that his son had written him about Oct. 27 from Shreveport, La., that he was contemplating marriage and that he had entertained three of his wives in his home, but would not entertain a fourth.

Bell also admitted he had said to his son in a letter that, if he married again, he would think seriously of disinheriting him. He denied making any reference to the son of disinheriting him after the marriage. On the contrary, he said, he at all times urged his son, as he had again married, to go to his wife.

Col. Bell placed Karl D. Umrath of 4418 West Pine boulevard, his next door neighbor, on the stand to show that on one occasion he had refused his son money and had told him to go home to his wife.

Umrath fixed the time as the Sunday before Thanksgiving. He said he had been told that young

DILLON STILL REFUSES TO TELL OF HIS WHEREABOUTS NIGHT OF FATHER'S MURDER; KEPT IN JAIL

MRS. DILLON SAYS SON AND FATHER WERE REAL PALS

Tells of Acquaintance With Former Husband After Divorce and of Boy's Relations With Him.

ASKED FATHER FOR MONEY IN LETTER

"I'm Not Averse to Asking You to Donate to Me What Might Otherwise Buy Liquor."

Mrs. Anna H. Dillon, former wife of the late Dr. William A. Dillon, and mother of Edward G. Dillon, talked with a Post-Dispatch reporter last night at her home in University City, of her acquaintance with her former husband, since their divorce a year ago. She talked also of her son's relation with Dillon, declaring that his detention in the murder inquiry, was an outrage.

The separation and the divorce were forced upon her, Mrs. Dillon said, by Dr. Dillon's drinking, and his "disgraceful actions in public."

"But I told my son," she said, "that he was to behave toward his father as if there had been no divorce. Toddy (the boy's nickname) agreed with me in this, for he loved his father as much as he loved me. They were pals. I did not wish the unhappiness that had come into my life to alienate my boy from his father."

Mrs. Dillon was asked as to telephone calls which she had received from Dr. Dillon since the divorce.

"Own Worst Enemy."

"Dr. Dillon was his own worst enemy," she replied, "and when he was drinking he would frequently call me by telephone and talk abusively. That is well known—it is public property, almost.

"But there were other calls when he would make the most kindly and solicitous inquiries as to how I was getting along, and would inquire about Toddy. He would say that I was the finest woman in the world, and that he wondered how God had let me leave him. Then, a few hours later, after having drunk too much, he might call me again and talk in the most abusive and insulting way. A week or so later, he would call up again and beg me to forgive him, and would say he had been on a terrible bender.' His apologies at such times seemed most sincere. This course of events was repeated, until our friends came to know of it."

In answer to questions, Mrs. Dillon said there was no telephone conversation between her home and Dr. Dillon, at the Fairmont Hotel, on the night of the murder, April 30. She said "Toddy" was in Lawrence, Kan., on that night.

Mrs. Dillon was told of a statement made by a guest at the Fairmont Hotel, who told of having heard Dr. Dillon say in a telephone conversation, "Well, what do you want me to do? Come out there and drink tea with Andrew?" The remark was made in a heated tone, and the question seemed to refer to Andrew O. Cunningham of 6528 Washington avenue, Mayor of University City.

Mrs. Dillon said she was reared in the Cunningham home, and that Dr. Dillon had been friendly with the Cunninghams. "I don't believe the doctor would talk insultingly to any of the Cunningham family," she said.

Letter Made Public.

The police made public yesterday a letter written by Edward Dillon to his father Feb. 23 last, from Lawrence, Kan., while he was a student in Kansas University. The letter was found in Dr. Dillon's downtown office. No letter dated after March 7, the day when young Dillon quit the university, was found.

The letter seemed, on the whole, in a friendly tone, though the requests for money were in a sharp and cynical tone. Young Dillon, at one point in the letter, said plainly that if his father would drink less, he, the son, might have

Questioned About Father's Murder

EDWARD G. DILLON.

RELEASED, THEN REARRESTED TO COMPLY WITH LAW

Youth Can Now Be Held for Questioning Until 7 P. M. Today When Procedure May Be Repeated.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE FACTOR IN INQUIRY

Two of Three Policies Totaling $25,000 and Naming Son Beneficiary Were Taken Out Recently.

Edward George Dillon, 19 years old, held as a suspect in the inquiry into the mysterious murder of his father, Dr. William A. Dillon, was released from Clayton Jail shortly before 11 o'clock last night, and was immediately rearrested, outside the Court house, and again placed in jail.

This action was merely a formal compliance, on the part of the county officers, with the law which forbids holding a prisoner on suspicion, on one arrest, longer than 20 hours. Dillon had come into the hands of the county authorities at 3 a. m. yesterday. The second arrest will make it possible to hold him until 7 o'clock this evening, when, if the authorities still wish to keep him in custody, the formality of release and rearrest may be repeated.

But Dillon did not understand, when he walked out of the Courthouse, that he was not being set free in good faith. He claimed his watch, his money—about $4—and his overcoat, in the Sheriff's office, and called "Goodbye" to the officers in charge. He asked permission to call a taxi-cab, but was advised to go across the street and call one.

Taken in Custody Again.

As he walked down the Courthouse steps, smiling, and started down the sidewalk, a deputy sheriff stopped him with, "Is your name Dillon?" This was followed by "I want you," and a command to return to the Sheriff's office.

Still seeming not to understand the procedure, the youth went back upstairs, and his belongings were again taken in charge. He asked permission to telephone to his mother or to his lawyers, but this was refused. "An outrage," he said in a trembling voice as he was led back to the jail.

"Well, you wouldn't talk to us," said a Deputy Sheriff, referring to the young man's refusal, in a long course of questioning, to tell where he was on the night of the murder, April 30, and alluding, also, to the refusal to let the prisoner use the telephone.

In the brief space of time that he was out of custody, young Dillon said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he did not care to make any statement. "I'm going to see my mother," he said. "I think she wants to see me."

Soon after Dilon had been taken back to jail two young men called and asked permission to see him, saying they wished to "cheer him up." The request was refused, but a Deputy Sheriff asked their names and found that one of them was a youth who was reported to have seen young Dillon in St. Louis at a time near to the night of the murder. The deputies took both youths to the Sheriff's office for questioning. They said they had not seen Dilon in St. Louis since about Easter. Both were released.

Silent On Whereabouts.

Dilon could have obtained his release yesterday or last night by showing his questioners that he was at any other place than the vicinity where the murder was committed, at a time assumed to have been about 11 p. m. April 30. However, no proof that he was there, or that he was in St. Louis at the time, has come into the hands of the officers.

Dr. Dillon's $25,000 accident insurance policies, of which the son was beneficiary, have become an important feature in the murder inquiry. The circumstances of the death of Dr. Dillon appear to have fulfilled the condition of the policies, which require, for payment, proof of "loss of life by external and violent means." Dr. Dillon

THELMA MADILL NOT TO WED NOBLEMAN

Engagement of St. Louis Girl to Vicomte Boislecomte of Paris Is Broken.

The engagement of Miss Thelma Madill, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. Madill of St. Louis and Paris, to Vicomte Joseph de Boislecomte of Paris, which was announced recently, has been broken, according to communications to friends of Miss Madill in St. Louis.

Miss Madill and Vicomte Boislecomte were to have been married in October and planned to live in Paris, according to the original announcement. No explanation for the breaking of the engagement was given.

Miss Madill is a member of the Junior League and is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Academy and Washington University. She made her debut here three years ago, before going to Paris with her mother and sister to study music.

The family formerly lived on Lindell boulevard and at the Westmoreland Hotel.

PROHIBITION DRIVE IN GERMANY ON TODAY

Offensive of 1918 Failed Because Soldiers Became Drunk, Dry Speaker Says.

By the Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Germany, May 9.—A nation-wide drive with the ultimate object of putting Germany in the dry column will be launched tomorrow with a series of addresses from pulpits of all denominations. The leaders of the movement say they hope to have 15,000,000 votes pledged to the cause before September.

The National Executive Committee for Local Option, encouraged by the response given to the movement in Koenigsberg, has designated the week beginning May 10 as a period in which to mobilize the dry sentiment.

The national committee comprises 40 members, each of whom represents an influential political, civic, religious, social or labor organization. Its chairman is Dr. F. H. Otto Mecke director of the German Preachers' Seminary of this city, and a pioneer in the dry crusade. Women figure prominently in the movement.

"Can't Contradict It"

Did the big German offensive on the Western front in 1918 fail because the German armies ran amuck among the huge stores of wines and liquors left behind by the allies?

This question was raised by one of the speakers in the Koenigsberg local option week, which closed today.

Referring to an allegation by Dr. Schmidt, professor of theology at the University of Geissen, to the effect that German soldiers became intoxicated on looted alcohol, one of the speakers at the numerous meetings held throughout the city in the past week declared that Gen. Ludendorff, when confronted with the statement, exclaimed: "I can't contradict it."

Failure to obtain prompt and efficient legislation through the national Parliament and local district courts has prompted the leaders to adopt the local option device as a quicker method of gauging public sentiment as regards prohibition.

Look to Effect Abroad.

Not only do they believe local option better suited to deal the liquor traffic a decisive blow, but they believe that a substantial dry vote will have a favorable effect abroad.

YOUTH SHOWED KANSAS TOWN A REAL SPLURGE

Girls, Automobiles, Money, Clothes and Boastful Manner Made Up Dillon's Life at Lawrence.

SLEPT DURING DAY, PLAYED AT NIGHT

After His Dismissal, He Posed as Student Trying to Make Up Credits, Unwilling to Go Home.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAWRENCE, Kan., May 9.—"Cake-eater." "Sheik." "Gilded youth." These are terms descriptive of Edward G. Dillon as he lived in Lawrence from the opening of the present semester at the University of Kansas until the murder of his father in St. Louis on April 30 called him home and resulted in his arrest for questioning in the case.

Girls—especially one, for whom his infatuation was hopeless—automobiles, money, clothes, boastful posing—these things made up the round of pleasure seeking that was his life. The pursuit of knowledge as a student bothered him not at all, and his dismissal fro mthe university after two months because his entrance credentials were forged fazed him not at all, but relieved him of the annoying obligation of occasional attendance at classes.

Dillon, at Lawrence, led the sort of existence that preachers condemn as an evil of a modern age. In him adolescent vanity and premature sophistication were mixed.

Showed Campus a Splurge.

It was a real splurge that this 19-year-old man of the world showed the campus. Money made the wheels go 'round for him. Where he got it no one here seems to know. He had it in a considerable quantity and splurged with it in a way that made to look twice a community bored by the ordinary antics of students with more money than they needed.

Dillon registered at the university on Jan. 27, presenting a letter of recommendation purporting to be signed by Supt. Charles E. Dryden of the University City (Mo.) schools. He was told he must have credits from St. Louis University, which he had attended. The next day a telegram purporting to come from the Rev. S. H. Horine, dean of the college of St. Louis University, was received by the registrar, recommending Dillon's admission to the University of Kansas and explaining that deficiencies in his work at St. Louis University were due to illness.

The registrar suspected something wrong and learned by correspondence that the letter and the telegram were forgeries. Dillon then admitted that they were, saying friends at Washington University, St. Louis, had done them for him. With his typical romantic manner he declared: "I will not peach on them; it is an affair of honor." He was dismissed as a student on March 7.

Arched eyebrows, a superior look, carefully chosen cravat and breast-pocket handkerchiefs—that is the Dillon Lawrence knows. He has few associates and no intimates. Sometimes he was "broke" but usually his supply of cash was large. His landlady once saw him with two $200 checks. He represented himself as a wealthy student, unwilling to confess his scholastic failure to his family and seeking to make up his studies.

Dillon became acquainted here with Miss Agnes Robertson, a university student and daughter of former District Attorney Fred Robertson of Kansas City, Kan. She was engaged to J. Robert Sowders, a member of Sigma Chi and cashier of the Capital Building & Loan Association, Topeka, Kan.

Roses and a Poem.

The engagement meant nothing to Dillon. One day not long ago he sent to her sorority house 24 dozen roses, a poem telling how the flowers expressed his love, two five-pound boxes of candy and a book. She wasn't here at the time, but the other girls enjoyed the roses. Miss Robertson and Sowders were married last Tuesday and are expected back from Chicago tomorrow. On the day of the wedding Dillon had wired the bride to the effect that her marriage would make no difference in his pursuit of her love.

Dillon appeared to be devoted to his mother and on good terms with his father, whom his mother had divorced. He used to telephone to her at University City frequently.

Taxicab drivers became well acquainted with Dillon, for he rode in cabs habitually, even to go the comparatively few blocks from boarding house to postoffice to mail a letter.

Dillon's departure from Lawrence was no more dramatic than his presence here was colorful.

Henry Petticord Sought.

Henry ("Bud") Petticord is being sought by policewomen in St. Louis on a letter from relatives at Bowling Green, Ky., which stated that his mother was critically ill and not expected to recover.

Skill in Parrying Questions Sheds Light on Character Of Eccentric Young Dillon

Known From His Past Record as a Lawless Youth—Adroitly Avoids Queries Bearing Directly on Father's Death.

Edward G. Dillon, known from his past record as a lawless youth with a touch of his late father's eccentricity, gave a fuller view of his character and personality in his answer to the questions put to him in the examination conducted Friday night and yesterday by city detectives and county officers, in the Magnolia Avenue Police Station and in Clayton Jail.

His skill in avoiding a direct answer as to questions bearing on the murder of his father, and his own whereabouts at the time of the murder, caused Prosecuting Attorney Mueller of St. Louis County to declare him "the smartest fellow I ever questioned."

It was his second experience of severe police questioning, in the course of inquiry into a serious crime. The first such experience, a little more than a year ago, came after Dillon's chum, George Wesley Barnett, was killed by a city detective after committing four highway robberies. Barnett's companion in the robberies fled when the policeman fired, and the police, though they detained young Dillon and caused the issuance of a warrant against him, were never able to prove that he was the other robber.

"Picked Up" Autos.

It was shown, in that investigation, that Dillon, as well as Barnett, had followed the practice of "picking up" other people's automobiles and using them for pleasure drives, then abandoning them. He stole a Stutz car in Portland place, drove it to Columbia, Mo., with another youth, and abandoned it at Foristell, St. Charles County, on the return trip. Young Dillon was arrested, but his mother pleaded with the owner of the car, Marion Niedringhaus, and persuaded him not to prosecute the boy.

At the time of the Barnett killing, an odd incident as to young Dillon was recalled by police officials. He went into the Page boulevard police station one night in June, 1923, and asked the desk Sergeant, "Do I look like a user of narcotic drugs?" The Sergeant said he thought not, and young Dillon then declared that he had lost his memory and could not tell his name or address. He was sent to the city hospital, where the superintendent, Dr. Scharff, recognized him and had him taken home.

The questioning of young Dillon at the Magnolia Police Station Friday night was conducted by Police Lieutenant Aylward, with Mark Dodd, Chief Deputy Sheriff of St. Louis County, Acting Lieut. Heggeman and Detective Sergeants Martineau and Egenreither. It continued five hours.

He was asked first as to his schooling, and told of being in a series of public and private schools, the latest being the University City High School. St. Louis University and Kansas University at Lawrence.

There was a "mixup over credits" at Kansas University, he said, and he left the university in March, but remained in Lawrence. He lived at different boarding places, and in a fraternity house, the name of the fraternity being Sigma Chi, he said. He was not a member, but a "pledge," and it appeared that he left the "frat" house after he ceased to be a student of the university, but he refused to answer a question as to just when his connection with the fraternity ceased. He explained the difference between a "pledge" and a fully accepted fraternity brother by saying that a "pledge" was in somewhat the same position as a probationary policeman.

Refuses to Answer Questions.

When asked as to the names of others in the fraternity and as to the time when he removed from the fraternity house, he replied, "I don't get the point of this questioning. I hate to wreck your system of questioning, but I won't answer," and "I don't see what you're driving at. I refuse to discuss anything more."

After leaving the university, he said, "I engaged in independent studying to better my mind." This studying, he said, consisted of "philosophy, psychology, logic and a little history and English literature." He said he got books from libraries for this study course. Also, he said, he was "writing quite a bit," but he preserved only one of his writings, a piece of poetry.

At his latest rooming place in Lawrence, he said, his rent was paid to June 1. The address was 1319 Tennessee street.

At this point, the questioning began to bear directly on young Dillon's whereabouts on the night of April 30, and he began a series of refusals to answer.

Asked when he was last at his Tennessee street room, he declared, "I'll be damned if I see any point to all this. It's tommyrot. This is all for tonight. I'm not willing to help you."

Says Charge Is Ridiculous.

Asked when he last left St. Louis, when he learned of his father's death, and whether he was in Kansas City at that time, he refused to answer, saying "What difference does it make?" Later, however, he told of receiving a telegram in Lawrence, saying that his father was "seriously injured," and of going to Kansas City, where he read in a newspaper of the murder. Before going to Kansas City, he said, he telephoned to his mother, but she did not tell him his father was dead, saying instead that he was "in a hospital."

To the question, "What difference does it make?" Lieut. Aylward replied:

"You are suspected of causing your father's death."

"That's ridiculous," said the prisoner, laughing.

Lieut. Aylward then reminded the youth that he was the beneficiary of his father's $25,000 life insurance, and was asked whether he knew of the insurance policies, especially those taken out recently. Dillon replied that he heard of the policies after his father's death, and had previously known only in a general way that his father carried some insurance.

To the direct question, "Where were you the night of April 30?" Dillon's reply was, "I don't care to answer." He was asked whether he committed any violation of the law that night, and said, "I'd be a damned fool if I told you. Suppose," he continued in reply to a further querry, "that I did commit something terrible or degrading, do you think I'd tell you?"

Nor would he say where he was April 29. "Ask me if I was in Burma in 1920," he suggested.

Question of Credits.

The inquiry went back to the cause of his leaving Kansas University, and the questioners accused him of forging his entrance credits. "Am I here for forgery?" he countered. "Do you think I'd be such an ass as to tell you about that?"

When asked at this point as to when he learned of his father's death, he told of the telegram and telephone message to Lawrence, and of seeing the news in a Kansas City paper. It was noticed that he showed no sign of emotion.

He said he got to the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City at 5 p. m. May 1, on his way to St. Louis, and that he took a short nap, then went out on the street at 6, and that he then saw the newspaper article. The headline, as he recalled it, was "Noted St. Louis Physician Slain."

"I don't know why I did it," he said, "but I rushed into the manager's office and said, 'My father's killed.' I don't know why I should do that, but I did, and I asked him for a drink."

Asked About Whereabouts.

The direct question was then asked, "Where had you come from from when you received the telegram (at Lawrence)?" He replied:

"I refuse ot tell. I don't want to tell you what my actions have been in Lawrence or in Kansas City."

Further questioning brought the statement that "there might be six reasons" for his refusal to answer questions. One reason, he said, might have been an affair with a woman "in New York, or Chicago, or Kansas City." A second reason might have been—he framed all this in the language of conjecture—"that one were in some criminal predicament."

"And the other four possible reasons?" his questioner suggested. "I'm a damned fool for telling you so much as I have," was the rejoinder. "I'll tell you now, I'd just as soon be shot as tell you where I was the night my father was killed." Pointing to a detective who had suggested an affair with a woman, Dillon added, "He came damned close to hitting it."

He was then asked about his arrest in Lawrence, for a fight with a garage proprietor in Lawrence, but he told little.

Relations With Father.

Questions as to his visits to his father followed. He said the relations between them were cordial, and said that his father never told him of his affairs with women "unless I found it out, and then he was very frank." As for himself, he said he was "in love with four or five girls." He said he had visited his father at the Coronado Hotel, where Dr. Dillon formerly lived, and later at the Fairmont, and that he frequently called him by telephone.

The final questions were as to ownership of a revolver. He evaded most of these questions, saying he did not see the "bearing" of the questions.

"Do you think, Lieutenant," he asked, "that I'd have so little guts as to shoot a man in the back of the head? I could no more shoot an unarmed man than—than fly."

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller was impressed by Dillon's answer in one instance. "Gentlemen," Dillon said, "do you want me to answer as I have done before, or remain silent?"

When told to do as he pleased, Dillon remarked, "Well, silence is golden." To questions which followed, Dillon said, "You just agreed with me that silence was golden."

DILLON RETURNED TO LAWRENCE DAY AFTER MURDER

Landlady of Students' Boarding House Declares He Was Away on Night Father Was Slain.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAWRENCE, Kan., May 9.—Whereabouts of Edward G. Dillon, who is under arrest in the investigation at St. Louis of his father's murder, in the period of several days preceding the murder is as much a mystery in Lawrence, where young Dillon had been staying, as it is in St. Louis, where this is a moot point in the inquiry.

His refusal to tell the St. Louis detectives where he was on the night of the murder and previously caused his detention for questioning. This action has had the effect here of stirring up discussion of the brief but "flashy" career of this 19-year-old lad as a University of Kansas student, and subsequently as an idle pleasure seeker.

After being dismissed as a student at the university here, because some of his scholastic credits had been forged, and, consequently, the revocation of his pledge to become a member of Sigma Chi fraternity, Dillon went to reside at the students' boarding house at 1319 Tennessee street, conducted by Mrs. E. L. Garrett.

The correspondent was told by Mrs. Garrett that Dillon had left the house on Monday or Tuesday of the week of the murder, either April 27 or 28. Her husband maintained that it was Monday, because he remembers that was the day he mowed the lawn and stopped to watch Dillon depart in characteristic fashion.

Thursday night, April 30, Dr. Dillon was murdered, and it is assumed at about 11 o'clock and at the Washington University stadium, St. Louis, where his body was found early on Friday, May 1.

Young Dillon has refused to tell the St. Louis detectives whether he had a revolver in his room here, saying: "I won't answer; that makes no difference; it has nothing to do with the case."

On either the Monday or Tuesday in question, Mrs. Garrett said, she saw in Dillon's handbag in his room what she thought was the handle of a revolver or pistol. That was the only weapon she ever saw there. This probably was the day of Dillon's departure from the house.

No Idea of Movements.

Mrs. Garrett had no idea of Dillon's movements after his departure, until he returned on May 1, the day his father's body was found. Inquiries elsewhere have failed to show where he was in this period.

It would be possible to leave St. Louis at 11:55 p. m. or 12:30 a. m. and arrive here by train as early as 9:36 a. m. or at about the same hour by bus from Kansas City.

The hour of Dillon's arrival here on Friday, May 1, could not be stated definitely by Mrs. Garrett, but she thought it posible it was about 10 a. m. At any rate, she was sure it was before luncheon, for she was cleaning house when he arrived and that is a task she performs in the morning.

About 8:30 or 9 a. m., she said, the Western Union office had telephoned that there was an important telegram for Dillon about his father being "seriously hurt." It was after this word was received that Dillon came in—she thought, incidentally, that he arrived in a taxicab, as was his custom—and when she told him about the call he said he had heard about the telegram.

It was learned that word had been left for Dillon at the Sigma Chi fraternity house about the telegram. Asked by the St. Louis detectives after his arrest how he had heard what happened to his father, Dillon declared: "I got the notification over the 'phone at 1319 Tennessee that the Western Union had a telegram for me and went to the office and got it. Later, I went back to get the exact wording. It was: 'Father seriously injured; take train home.'"

He telephoned to his mother at University City, Mo., who had sent the telegram and, Mrs. Garrett said, he left the house that Friday afternoon, saying he was going home.

A discrepancy is caused in the statements about notification of receipt of the telegram by the assertion of Western Union employes here that they had no recollection of notifying Dillon over the telephone. They said he had come to the office about 11 a. m. that Friday and asked for the message.

Dillon went to a Kansas City automobile agency about four weeks ago and said he wanted to buy a special model car, asking to have a stock model sent here for a demonstration. The agent thought the youth was bluffing. April 22 Dillon telegraphed the agent that he was called out of town unexpectedly but asked to have a car held for him. An actual order was not placed.

$1,000,000 Loss in Lumber Fire.

GROVELAND, Fla., May 9.—Fire that started in the planing room of the J. Ray Arnold Lumber Mill tonight completely destroyed the plant, causing a loss estimated by the owner at $1,000,000. No lives were lost in the fire.

Dillon Released, Then Rearrested in Murder Inquiry was killed by a revolver wound in the back of the head, and his body, with this wound and another in the left knee, was found the morning of May 1 on the cinder path of Francis Field, Washington University.

The insurance is in three policies, two of which were issued within the last few weeks. They are: Commercial Travelers' Mutual Accident Association of America, $10,000, issued April 22, or eight days before Dr. Dillon's death; Union Mutual Casualty Co. of Des Moines, $5000, issued March 18; and Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Springfield, Ill., $10,000, issued Dec. 6 last.

Policies Found in Office.

These policies, discovered in Dr. Dillon's office since his death, are in possession of Public Administrator Hampe, who says there is question whether he should handle the money, since Mrs. Anna H. Dillon, Dr. Dillon's divorced wife, at Clayton Friday, had herself appointed guardian for her son, who is a minor.

An important adjunct to the local investigation is the inquiry being carried on in Lawrence, Kan., where Edward Dillon was, until a few weeks ago, a student in Kansas University, and where he remained after quitting the university.

Mrs. E. L. Garrett, whose boarding house at 1319 Tennessee street was Dillon's latest place of abode in Lawrence, said to a Post-Dispatch staff correspondent that Dillon had left the house on the Monday or Tuesday preceding the murder, which occurred on a Thursday night, and that he did not return until some time between breakfast and luncheon Friday. She was not told where he was in the meantime, and Dillon has refused, in a questioning by city detectives and county officers, to say where he was in that space of time.

Train Schedules.

Train schedules show that a person could leave Union Station, St. Louis, at 11:55 p. m. or 12:30 a. m., an interval of an hour or more from the hour when the murder is believed to have occurred, and could reach Kansas City at 8 a. m., in time to take any of three trains which arrive in Lawrence between 9:36 and 10:05 a. m. There are also bus and trolley lines from Kansas City to Lawrence.

Two Pullman porters, who had told of seeing a young man going to Kansas City on the Burlington-Alton "Night Hawk" train the night of April 30, viewed Dillon in jail yesterday, and said they could not identify him. After looking at a scar on his left arm, one of the negroes said he was sure Dillon was not the passenger in question, as he saw his passenger's arm and noticed no such scar.

Mrs. Garrett, the Lawrence landlady, said that on Friday morning, May 1, between 8:30 and 9 a. m., a telephone message came from the Western Union telegraph office, that there was an important message for Dillon, "about his father being hurt." As she did not then know where Dillon was, she could do nothing about it at the time. But some time in mid-forenoon—possibly about 10 a. m., she thinks, from the progress she had made with her housework at the time—Dillon appeared at the house, and she told him of the telephone call. He then said he had seen the telegram.

Dillon went to the Western Union office at Lawrence and received the telegram, before communicating with the Fraternity house and the place where he roomed. How he learned that there was a telegram for him has not been explained, but it has been suggested that he went to the telegraph office expecting a message from another source on another subject.

Telegraphed Mother.

Dillon left the house and Mrs. Garrett said she understood that he telephoned to his mother in St. Louis, received money by telegraph, and left on an afternoon train. Dillon said, in the course of his questioning here Friday night, that he talked to his mother by telephone, but that she did not tell him in so many words that his father was dead, and that he first learned what had happened when he read a newspaper in Kansas City, about 6 p. m.

Young Dillon, who is known among his associates as "Toddy," was arrested at 8 p. m. Friday the home of his mother, 726 Heman avenue, University City. Mrs. Dillon was present, and when she went, the youth said, "This doesn't amount to anything, they'll only hold me a few hours, then I'll be back." Mrs. Dillon invited the officers to remain at the house and question her son there, but they refused.

Employs Attorneys.

The arrest was made by Chief Deputy Sheriff Dodd of St. Louis County, the murder of Dr. Dillon having taken place in the county. St. Louis detectives who accompanied him were Lieut. Aylward, acting Lieut. Heggeman and Detective Sergt. Martineau.

As he was leaving the house, Dillon asked his mother to engage an attorney for him, and she engaged Harvey & Baer and W. D. Chapman. The officers took him to the Magnolia Avenue Police Station, on South Grand boulevard, as reporters were deemed less likely to call there than at stations where the inquiry has centered heretofore. There he was questioned from 8:30 p. m. Friday to 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

Stubbornly, through the whole period of questioning, the youth refused to tell where he was between the time when he left the Garrett house in Lawrence, on a Monday or Tuesday, and the time when he returned before noon Friday. Another line of questioning to which he made no response was as to his possession of a revolver. Dr. Dillon was killed by a .38-caliber bullet.

Mrs. Garrett of Lawrence said yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that she had seen what she thought was the handle of a revolver in Dillon's handbag, in his room, last Monday or Tuesday.

He made only partial admissions as to knowing of his father's accident insurance in his favor. He had known that there was some insurance, he said, but he supposed it, or most of it, had lapsed—not an unreasonable supposition, in view of Dr. Dillon's lax financial methods.

Bold, Blustering Tone.

He took a bold, almost blustering tone, when asked about his movements in the period in question. With the air of a man of the world, who is expected to have his little affairs that will not bear publicity, he informed his questioners that they need not expect him to tell them about some rendezvous he might have had, or some minor offense against the law that he might have committed, on the night of April 30. All this was vague, and afforded nothing that might be checked up.

William Baer, one of the attorneys engaged for Dillon by his mother, consulted with Prosecuting Attorney Mueller of St. Louis County yesterday morning and Mueller proposed to him that Dillon immediately make a statement as to his movements on the night of April 30, with details which would permit investigation and checking up. Baer refused to agree to this, and Mueller then denied him permission to see the prisoner at that time.

Chief of Detectives Kaiser said yesterday that a witness had been found who told of having seen young Dillon in St. Louis two days before the murder of Dr. Dillon. On further inquiry, it developed that the witness questioned had seen young Dillon a day or two before Easter, or about April 10, and was not sure of having seen him since. Dillon has said that he was in St. Louis at Easter.

Elmer Wessler, a probationary patrolman, told reporters yesterday of hearing a young man, whom he believes to have been Edward Dillon, talk abusively and threateningly, in a telephone conversation, to Dr. Dillon. He told this story to Chief of Detectives Kaiser May 2, the day after the finding of Dr. Dillon's body but was not permitted to make it public at that time.

Wessler in 1924 was assistant manager of the Fairmont Hotel, Maryland and Euclid avenues, where Dr. Dillon lived, and he frequently handled the telephone switchboard in the evening.

"About a year ago," Wessler said, "Dr. Dillon asked me to listen in on telephone conversations when he talked with his son. He said the boy had threatened him. I said I would. One night soon after—I remember that it was a rainy night in spring—Dr. Dillon called from his room and asked me to get his wife's telephone number. As he had asked me to do, I listened in, and heard a young man's voice answer.

"I'm Going to Get You."

"Dr. Dillon asked the young man to call Mrs. Dillon, and the youth said he would not. They talked angrily, the boy doing most of the talking, and I heard the young man apply an offensive term to the doctor. 'I'm going to get you,' the young man also said.

"After the conversation, the doctor came down into the lobby, and called the house again from a telephone booth. Again the boy answered, and again he refused to call Mrs. Dillon, and said, 'I'm going to come right down and get you.'

"Dr. Dillon was so agitated that he came out of the booth without hanging up the receiver, and I went in and hung it up. He said to me, 'Can you beat that? That was my own son Toddy.' He asked that I call a cab for him, and then said not to call the cab, and he went out in the rain, and did not return that night.

"No one came to see the doctor that night, and I never saw young Dillon at the hotel. But two weeks later, I listened in on a conversation of much the same sort. The doctor seemed solicitous about his former wife, and asked the young man to call her, but he would not. Once, when I called the house for Dr. Dillon, Mrs. Dillon responded. As Dr. Dillon had not asked me to listen in on conversations with his wife, I did not listen on either time."

Attaches of the hotel said young Dillon had visited his father three or four or five times in the past year. On one visit, about last Christmas, he was permitted, by the father, to telephoned request, to take Dr. Dillon's key and go to the physician's room. Last Tuesday he called there with a relative and obtained his father's clothing and personal effects, which were given to him on authorization of the Public Administrator.

"My Dear Governor:

"I was pleased to get your [illegible] for I thought you had forgotten about me. I forwarded your [illegible] to mother, adding that what I said seemed to truly express my sentiments and in my own heart know that I wrote only the truth. You did not tell me much about [illegible] but then I suppose you can only spare a very little of your time to write to me.

"If you saw the Kansas game you must have seen Ackerman, our captain, in action. He plays fullback and is considered worthy of a place on an all-Kansas team. He was on the all-Western team picked this year and is the most wonderful basketball player I have ever seen. He is a Sigma Chi and president of the student council. He had a C[illegible] letter for scholarship, and is a prince of a fellow. The ladies all adore him. Quite a boy, eh?

"Two other members of the [illegible] that played Washington were fraternity brothers of mine.

"I got my suit from Schwartz. I think it a knockout. I suppose you did not like the way it was cut. I think you might send me a piece of mazuma once in a while, however.

"God knows I am not mercenary, but I think you might realize that ladies are essential to every man's life, and they do not like poor [illegible] so much as they do those who have other things than keys jingling in their pockets.

Asked for Money.

"Of course, I do not want to take the bread and butter out of your mouth or deprive you of the necessities of life but I am not averse to asking you to donate me what might otherwise purchase a couple of quarts for the edification of your numerous friends.

"Now be a good boy, Governor, and write me soon, at the same time telling me what you think of Ackerman, and slipping a jack in the letter.

"From your cute little baby,

AWARD OF GIRL TO MOTHER REVERSED BY APPEALS COURT

Mrs. Minnie Burckhalter Had Registered as Unwed Mother When Child Was Born.

ANOTHER WOMAN ADOPTED INFANT

Real Parent Later Began Fight to Regain Daughter —$100,000 Estate Also Involved.

DALLAS, Tex., May 9.—Doro- Ada Conyer, fortune baby, who was given in custody to Mrs. Min- Burckhalter of Des Moines, Ia., January, will change hands again if the opinion reached by the Fifth District Court of Civil Appeals here today is upheld by the State Supreme Court.

The District Court of Civil Appeals has just reversed the decision of Circuit Judge Watkins here who held that Louise belonged to Mrs. Burckhalter. The case must either be tried again in a lower court or taken on appeal to the Supreme Court.

L. A. Conyer, a traveling salesman of San Antonio, is Mrs. Burckhalter's opponent in the contest for possession of the little girl. A fortune of $100,000 also is at stake. The why of it is this:

Registered as Unwed Mother.

In July, 1919, Mrs. Burckhalter, who had just been married, came to Bethesda Hospital in St. Louis and registered as an unwed mother. When the baby was born "Miss Burckhalter" signed all right to Louise away and agreed in writing that the child be given out for adoption. Miss Elise Schroeder, superintendent of the hospital, has records to establish proof that "Miss Burckhalter" abandoned her baby.

After she had returned to her husband in Iowa, a Mrs. Pauline Conyer, wife of L. A. Conyer, the contestant in the present litigation appeared at the St. Louis institution in search of a baby girl to adopt. She was given Louise, and duly adopted the child as her own. Then she went back to Fort Smith, Ark., with Louise.

In two years Mrs. Conyer, who was separated from her husband, died. She turned her estate valued at $100,000 into the hands of Mrs. Eva L. Smith of Eldorado, Ark., friend, to whom she entrusted baby Louise. Mrs. Smith agreed to rear and educate the baby as her own, and to use the $100,000 to that end.

Then Mrs. Conyer's husband came forward with the statement that he should have custody of Louise. He said his wife had told him the little girl was their own child. The Smiths, believing his story, surrendered Louise to him and he took her off to Texas.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Burckhalter, back in Des Moines, had repented of her hasty act. She wanted Louise, and resolved to find her. A long search followed, which resulted in the mother's discovery that L. A. Conyer had custody of the baby and that Mrs. Smith had charge of the $100,000. Louise's foster mother had left her.

Burckhalters Bring Suit.

The Burckhalters—her husband also co-operated with her in the effort to redeem the child—brought suit for possession of Louise at Dallas. She denied that she had signed away her baby, declaring that she had been tricked. The judge, after hearing her story, decided that she should have another chance and awarded custody of Louise to her.

Now the case once more is thrown over by the Appellate Court's reversal of this verdict. Mrs. Burckhalter may appeal to the Supreme Court or else may get to have a new trial. Nothing has been done about the money which Mrs. Smith is holding. Attorneys in the case think that no matter whether Conyer or Mrs. Burckhalter ultimately win possession of Louise, they will have another long fight on their hands to get hold of Louise's fortune. Mrs. Burckhalter has a suit pending against Mrs. Smith for return of the $100,000.

TWO MEN ARRESTED FOR FISHING WITH TRAMMEL NET

Ambrose Merriani and James Murphy Taken at Creve Coeur Lake by Deputy Warden.

Ambrose Merviani of 5216 South Kingshighway and James Murphy, guest at the Beers Hotel, are to answer before Justice of the Peace Boeschoche at Creve Coeur next Wednesday to a charge of using a trammel net in the waters of Creve Coeur Lake. They were arrested at 4 a. m. Friday by Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner William J. Wiemeyer of St. Louis, who confiscated their net, which will be destroyed. The men furnished bond for their appearance.

Under the Missouri law trammel nets may not be used in any lakes but only in the Mississippi, Missouri and Osage and Gasconade rivers, in those rivers the months of April and May are closed against such nets. Wiemeyer returned and was recently reappointed.

'BOOKIES' BOOKED ON POLICEWOMAN'S BET

Places Marked Money on "Dancing Fool" in Cigar Store; Raid Follows.

A policewoman, Mrs. Josephine Stapleton, was pressed into service yesterday in the police campaign against handbook makers.

She was sent to a cigar store at 3609 Olive street yesterday afternoon with two $1 marked bills. Under the assumed name of "Agnes Burke" she placed the money on "Dancing Fool" in a race at Pimlico track.

Her visit to the cigar store was followed by a raid of the gambling squad. Chett Ivers, 40 years old, with whom Policewoman Stapleton says she placed the bet, and Isaac Lande, 51, of 505 North Spring avenue, on whom the marked money was found when the raid was made, were arrested. Several marked racing form sheets were seized by police.

The two men were booked on charges of being custodians of bets, in pursuance of a policy adopted Friday in the campaign against gambling to charge the alleged "bookies" with being custodians of bets instead of being vagrants. Lande told police he got the marked money from Ivers in payment for a loan.

Police succeeded yesterday in obtaining warrants against three men charging them with being custodians of bets, as the result of probationary patrolmen placing bets prior to raids Friday.

'MILLION TO FIGHT ALIENATION CASE,' COL. BELL, 82, SAYS

Bell and his fourth wife had had a fight at the Bell home the day before and that Christian Bell was expected that evening, and he was asked to be present. He said when Bell came home he appeared to have been drinking. He talked incoherently and had a blackened eye and a bloody chin. He said he wanted money to buy leeches to take the discoloration from his eye. Umrath said Col. Bell refused this money; told his son he could not stay at his house and told him to go to his wife.

Bell said he did not know the whereabouts of his son at present and was not responsible for the fact that he was not with his wife. He reiterated on the stand that he had no intention of ever entertaining the latest Mrs. Bell in his household, as he had warned his son of this before the marriage. He paid a tribute to his son's first wife, who he described as a very estimable person and one who had recently been entertained at dinner in his home.

KIEL CONCERN TO ERECT THEATER

Construction of 22-Story Building of Skouras Brothers to Be Begun Soon.

The Boaz-Kiel Construction Co., 4030 Chouteau avenue, of which former Mayor Henry W. Kiel is president, has been awarded the contract for construction of the 22-story office building and theater to be erected at Seventh and Locust streets by Skouras Bros. owners of the Grand Central Theater, according to announcement yesterday.

Construction of the building, to be known as the Ambassador Theater, will be begun as soon as the wrecking of the old structures on the site is completed. The cost of the building and site has been estimated at $5,500,000. The theater will be an ornate auditorium containing 3500 seats, and the completed structure will be one of the most pretentious of its type in the West.

The contract is the first major award to the Boaz-Kiel concern since former Mayor Kiel's retirement from office. The other officers of the company are Bert Boaz, vice president, and Elmer Kiel, son of the former Mayor, secretary.

Miss Mary Jane Roach and Justin Faherty Successful in Essay Contest.

Miss Mary Jane Roach, 6023 Westminster place, and Justin Faherty, 3508 Brompton square, Maplewood, were announced as winners in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney essay contest for the Melville L. Wilkinson memorial college scholarships, at exercises yesterday afternoon in Vandervoort's Music Hall. Chancellor H. S. Hadley of Washington University and the Rev. Charles A. Cloud, S. J. of St. Louis University, gave brief addresses, and the scholarships were awarded by Frank M. Mayfield, president of Vandervoort's Honorable mention was given to Miss Mignon Solomon, 2317A Russell avenue; John Thompson Heberer, 776 Yale avenue, University City; Clarence Collin Beardslee, 5899 Clemens avenue, and John F. Schofield, 3636 Arsenal street.

Judges in the contest were Former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, Judge Moses Hartmann, W. Palmer Clarkson, John J. Maddox and David R. Francis.

Choice was given the winners as to colleges they wished to attend, and Miss Roach chose Washington University, and Faherty, St. Louis University. Each is 16 years old and they will enter college in the fall of 1926. Miss Roach is a student at Mary Institute. Faherty is a student at Christian Brothers' College.

ORTHODOXY OF JESUS WAS LOVE, SAYS DR. FOSDICK

Modern Christianity Is Making People Worse Instead of Better, He Asserts, Speaking Here.

'FUNDAMENTALISTS ARE LIKE PARROTS'

Declares Religion Must Change With Times; Preaches at Second Baptist Church Today.

"Modern Christianity is not making people better, but is making them worse, what this country needs most is a kind of Christianity that will bring people together in a religion of brotherliness instead of tearing them apart in strife over sectarianism and orthodoxy. It should be remembered that the orthodoxy of Jesus Christ was principally love."

These were the declarations which formed the central theme of an address on "The Need for Religious Leadership," delivered by the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, internationally noted clergyman and author, of New York, before a dinner gathering of the Round Table Club at the University Club last night.

Dr. Fosdick, who is a professor in Union Theological Seminary, is visiting St. Louis as a guest of the Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, and will occupy the pulpit of that church at morning and afternoon services today. Dr. Fosdick is a Baptist minister himself, although for five years previous to his resignation March 1 he was associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New York.

Thrusts at Fundamentalists.

In his address last night there was no direct reference to the campaign of opposition and charges of heresy which led to his resignation, but there were numerous thrusts at the fundamentalist faction, characterized as "some of us who insist on taking the abiding expressions of Scripture and repeating them like a parrot instead of endeavoring to present Christianity in terms that the new generation can comprehend."

"If it be heresy," he asserted, "to present Christianity intelligibly to the youth of the country and in the terms of the age in which they live, then let us make the most of it."

Referring to the effect of religion on men's lives, the speaker declared that "belief in a God is one of the most dangerous practices people have ever indulged in."

"I mean it," he added. "If a man's God is small and warped then he undoubtedly will follow the same pattern. If a man's God is a cruel divinity who is going to send his children to eternal torture then the follower will also be cruel and mean. Some appear to believe in a strictly Catholic God, who dislikes Protestants, or a strictly Protestant God, who hates Catholics, and each believer convinced that his particular sect is sanctified and confirmed. What a preposterous fiction of Christ it is. Why, but it would be a good thing if Christians could be baptized with the love of Christ instead of the love of creeds. A man doesn't commend either Christianity or his own convictions by his readiness to fight his fellow man for believing something different.

"Now, when we liberals attempt to sidestep inconsequential creeds which in the light of modern knowledge are antiquated and absurd, the Fundamentalists say we are trying to destroy Christianity." the speaker continued. "Instead we are trying to interpret it in a way that does not appear ridiculous to anyone who has the rudiments of a scientific education.

"In religion, garments are continually changing, but the main substance, all that really matters in religion, changes but little. One thing we need to take notice of is that religion is like the crustacean which from time to time must escape from his old shell and build a new one in order to live. Why can't people see that in surrendering its shell it does not surrender life? A multitude of persons still are unable to distinguish between a belief in God and a belief in such things as a whale swallowing a man. Thank Heaven that is not reproducible experience. Neither are any of the other things that are now being fought over reproducible. Let us remember that reproducible experiences are the things that count."

Speaking of religious dissension in other countries, Dr. Fosdick said Great Britain was 50 years ahead of the United States in its theological thought and had ended its modernist-fundamentalist fight half a century ago. In England a man who denies evolution now would be an absolute freak, he said.

CITY BUDGET OF $24,764,000 FOR NEXT FISCAL YEAR

Amount $43,000 Greater Than Originally Fixed by Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

ALDERMEN TO TAKE UP BILL TOMORROW

If Measure Is Then Passed City Employes Will Be Paid This Week for First Time Since March 31.

After another session behind closed doors, with Mayor Miller present part of the time, the Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Aldermen yesterday reported out the amended budget bill appropriating $24,764,445.50 for the current expenses of municipal government during this fiscal year.

The Board of Aldermen as a whole will consider the bill Monday afternoon. If it is passed then without further delay, it will be ready for the Mayor's signature and 6500 city employes will be paid, Tuesday or Wednesday, for the first time since March 31.

An Increase of $43,000.

As amended, the budget bill calls for $43,150.68 more than the original bill which was presented to the committee a week ago last Friday. In order to save jobs for certain other employes, the committee decided Tuesday to eliminate the appropriations for the Psychiatric Clinic, Free Legal Aid Bureau, Municipal Lodging House and a staff of smoke inspectors, but protests by numerous organizations and individuals caused the three bureaus to be restored, the inspectors remaining out.

The original bill specified the number of jobs alloted to each class of city employes and the salaries to be paid them, but the amended bill omits the number of jobs. Another difference is that appropriations amounting to $63,241.68 have been tacked on to the original bill and $20,061 have been taken away.

One of the increases which has occasioned criticism, particularly by street cleaners, appropriates $10,930 more for the street cleaning department to be expended for more foremen. Last year there were 44 foremen and this year in response to criticism the Board of Estimate and Apportionment reduced the number to 12. The Aldermanic committee thereupon increased the appropriation, and the number of foremen to 24.

Building Commissioner's Pay.

Originally the bill appropriated only two months' salary for the Building Commissioner, and it was predicted that at the end of two months the Director of Public Safety would also be the commissioner. The amended bill provides for a whole year's salary by adding $15,266.68 to the commissioner's office appropriation.

MOTHER SEEKS RECOVERY OF $12,640 FOR SON'S SUPPORT

Suit Is Against Mrs. Julia Brokmeyer, Mother of Former St. Louisan.

Suit to recover $12,640 for caring for Henry Brokmeyer, 17 years old, has been filed in the Circuit Court by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Brokmeyer of Kansas City, as administrator of the estate of her father, Eleazar H. Haywood. The suit is directed against the estate of Mrs. Julia Brokmeyer, mother of Eugene C. Brokmeyer, father of Henry, and seeks to subject the support claim as a lien against the father's one-half interest in his mother's estate, which was appraised at $13,533. Mrs. Julia Brokmeyer, who lived at 1914 Forest avenue, died last August.

Among the items listed in the claim are $9000 for board and lodging and $1090 for surgical, medical and hospital expenses. Other items for incidentals complete the bill. It is set forth in the suit that the boy, by reason of physical defects acquired at birth, was in need of extraordinary medical and surgical attention, some of which, it was stated, was the undergoing of plastic surgery. According to the petition, the boy's father left this city 16 years ago without providing for him, and has failed ever since to contribute to his support, though requested to do so by plaintiff's attorney, E. M. Grossman. Consequently it devolved upon Henry's maternal grandfather to take care of him, which he continued to do until his death last January, the petition shows.

Eugene Brokmeyer formerly was a St. Louis newspaper man. He is now said to be a lawyer in Washington, D. C.

Milner and Marshal French Ill.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 9.—Some fears were expressed this morning for Viscount Milner, former War Secretary, who has been suffering some time from a mild form of sleeping sickness. His improvement, it was announced this morning, "has been checked." The condition of the Earl of Ypres (formerly Field Marshal French), who underwent an operation on March 19, also was declared to be not so satisfactory.

High School Instructor Is Held to Grand Jury For Teaching Evolution

Text Book on Biology, Upholding Darwinian Theory, Is Submitted at Hearing of Tennesseean for Violating State Law.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Tenn., May 9.—Prof. J. T. Scopes, athletic coach and head of the department of science at Dayton and Rhea Central High School charged with violating the newly enacted Tennessee law against teaching evolution in schools of the State, late today was held for action by the Rhea County grand jury by three Justices of the Peace, who conducted a preliminary hearing of the charges.

Text Books as Exhibits.

"A Civic Biology," by George W. Hunter, a textbook taught in the High School, was one of the exhibits on which emphasis was laid. A paragraph under the head of "The doctrine of evolution" was quoted as follows:

"We have now learned that animal forms may be arranged so as to begin with very simple one-celled forms and culminate with a group which contains man himself. The arrangement is called the evolutionary series. Evolution means change and these groups are believed by scientists to represent stages in complexity of development of life on the earth.

"Geology teaches that millions of years ago life upon the earth was very simple and that gradually more and more complex forms of life appeared, as the rock formed latest in time to show the most highly developed forms of animal life.

"The great English scientist, Charles Darwin, from this and other evidence, explained the theory of evolution. This is the belief that simple forms of life on the earthly slowly and gradually gave rise to those more complex and that thus ultimately the most complex forms came into existence."

Defendant Freed Without Bond.

Bond was fixed at $1000, but the State expressed a willingness to accept the recognizance of the defendant and the Court acquiesced.

The defense was built upon a theory that the law enacted by the recent Legislature was unconstitutional. To this, however, Justice Benson, speaking for his two colleagues, Justices Green and Wilbur, said:

"We feel that it is not within our rights to pass on the constitutionality or the wisdom of the law. The defendant is at least technically, if not intentionally, guilty, hence our decision to hold him for action by the grand jury."

Testifying in his own behalf, the defendant, in answer to a question as to his sanity, said: "I'm not crazy now and I never have been crazy. I have told you a thousand times I was not crazy."

INDICTMENT AGAINST EX-GRAND DRAGON UPHELD

Indianapolis Judge Overrules Motion to Strike Out Parts of Charge.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 9.—Judge James A. Collins in Criminal Court today overruled a motion to strike out vital parts of the murder indictment against D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry. They are charged with the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis.

Counsel for the defendant then filed a motion to quash the indictment and May 15 was the date set for a hearing.

Stephenson, Klinck and Gentry were taken into the courtroom handcuffed together. Little argument preceded the ruling.

Eph Inman, chief counsel for the defendants, attacked parts of the indictment on the ground that they detailed no part of the manner and means by which it was alleged Stephenson, Klinck and Gentry were alleged to have committed the murder.

The parts of the indictment attacked allege that Miss Oberholtzer was forcibly placed on a train and taken to Hammond, that she was attacked by Stephenson on the train, that she was taken to a hotel in Hammond and that she later took poison and also that the defendants failed to procure an antidote for her.

Stephenson, Klinck and Gentry have been in jail since April 20.

SENATOR REED TO ADDRESS MEETING HERE THURSDAY

"Government in Business" Will Be Subject Before Manufacturers and Merchants.

Senator Reed will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting and dinner of the Manufacturers' & Merchants' Association at Hotel Statler Thursday evening. He will be introduced by Congressman Hawes and will discuss "Government in Business" along the lines of his campaign against centralization of power in Washington.

Preliminary to the speaking, A. J. Davis, president of the association, will preside at a short business session at which a nominating committee will name 10 directors to fill expiring terms.

Wins Mine Damage Suit.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 9.—George E. Orr, Chicago broker, today was awarded $100,000 damages against Charles E. Havener, mine owner and promoter of Kansas City and New York, the judgment going by default when Havener failed to appear. Havener is alleged to have caused Orr's arrest in 1921 on a charge of obtaining in a fraudulent manner $100,000 worth of Colorado-Utah Mines Holding Co. stock. Orr was acquitted when arraigned on charges of embezzlement, confidence game, obtaining property by false pretenses, larceny by bailee and larceny.

LOS ANGELES DUE TO ARRIVE AT LAKEHURST THIS MORNING

Dirigible Speeds Home From Porto Rico But Wind May Prevent Landing at Field.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 9.—A wireless message from the dirigible Los Angeles, returning from its first trip to Porto Rico, informed officials at the naval air station here tonight that the ship expects to reach its home hangar by 3 o'clock (daylight time) Sunday morning. A 14-hour wind was blowing at the field and officials said this might prevent the airship's being placed in the hangar tomorrow morning. Unless the wind subsides, the Los Angeles probably will be moored to her mast, they said.

By the Associated Press.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., May 9.—The Los Angeles passed over Portsmouth at 10:25 p. m. and at 10:35 p. m. passed over the Hampton Roads naval base. She was flying at an altitude of 1000 to 1500 feet, to Onawa last night.

$3662 TAKEN BY ROBBERS IN TWO PAYROLL HOLDUPS

President of Chapman Cleaning and Dyeing Co. Gives Up $2000 to Two Armed Men.

Two men held up Gilbert M. Chapman, president-treasurer of the Chapman Bros. Cleaning and Dyeing Co., 3100 Arsenal street, at 11:30 a. m. yesterday and robbed him of $2000 payroll money which he had just drawn from the Tower Grove Bank, Grand boulevard and Hartford street.

The robbery occurred on Hartford street just east of Grand boulevard, where Chapman had parked his automobile while he was at the bank. The robbers came up behind him, covered him with revolvers, took the money and disappeared. A woman witness said they escaped in an automobile.

Two hours before Thomas F. O'Connor, a plastering contractor, was held up in front of his home, 4253 Kossuth avenue, by four armed robbers, who took from him a payroll of $1662 and escaped. O'Connor had been to a bank for the money and was about to step from his automobile when the men appeared. After taking the money they ran north in Red Bud avenue and escaped.

BOY'S SKULL FRACTURED WHEN CAR AND TWO AUTOS COLLIDE

Trolley Strikes Machines After Brake Is Applied to Avoid Accident; Six Were Endangered.

A collision between a street car and two automobiles in which six persons were riding at 8 p. m. yesterday on Grand boulevard bridge resulted in a skull fracture for Meyer Kosloff, 18 years old, of 1320 Elliott avenue, a passenger in one of the automobiles.

Kosloff was riding north with Ely Yateman of 4005 Lafayette avenue and two others. Fred Rehmund of 3445 Hartford street, driving the automobile directly in front, applied the brakes to avoid striking the one in front of him. Yateman's machine ran into Rehmund's. As it did, a northbound street car struck the two. Others besides Kosloff escaped with slight injury.

EQUALITY IN ARMS TRADE APPROVED BY GENEVA PARLEY

Decision of Conference Is Victory for the Doctrine Championed by Latin-American States.

SMALLER NATIONS SUPPORT DEMAND

Resolution Provides for Prohibition of Exports of Munitions Only to Foreign Individuals.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 9.—Manifestation of the influence of the Latin-American states marked in an outstanding manner the first week of the conference for the control of international trade in armaments. This influence of a section of the world, whose countries are practically all members of the League of Nations, was demonstrated today, when, under its leadership, the conference declared for the doctrine of the equality of all countries great and small in the right to possess and acquire armaments.

The campaign of the smaller countries for this point was inspired by fear that they would be placed in an unbearable position of dependency on the great arms manufacturnig countries for legitimate supplies of arms and war materials, if prohibition of export of such materials remained the fundamental principle of the conference.

The resolution proposed by the smaller countries and adopted by the conference provides that the basis of the proposed convention shall be: First, the prohibition of exports of arms and munitions to individuals, and, second, freedom of exports to Governments under certain conditions.

Protest From China.

No delegation voted against the resolution, although China insisted that "liberty of arms traffic will astound the world which had expected different things from the conference."

British proposal to exclude the sale of warships from the plan of international control of armaments met with the opposition of the French and Scandinavian delegates.

The American delegation did not express any views on the project but there apparently was a tendency to take the matter less seriously than the other nations have done.

The Japanese delegate, M. Matsuda, argued that it might be dangerous to use either the word "prohibition" or "liberty" in the final draft and that it would be better to fix clearly the conditions under which arms may be exported without bothering about establishing a principle.

The delegates from Latin-American countries said that the use of the word "prohibition" would only deceive the world and that the suppression of the sale of arms to Governments would be a violation of their sovereignties.

The conference adjourned until Monday.

$250,000 Raphael Portrait for America

Photo of the portrait of Giuliano de Medici, Duc de Nemours, by Raphael, which has just been purchased, it is said, for a quarter of a million dollars, from Oscar Huldschinsky, octogenarian banker and connoisseur of Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, for eventual delivery to the United States, by Sir Joseph Duveen, art dealer of New York and London.

MURDER DEFENDANT CREATES COURT SCENE

Man on Trial at Kansas City Tries to Attack Deputy Who Is Guarding Him.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 9.—Roscoe F. Warren, on trial here for first degree murder, jumped to his feet in the courtroom today and attempted to pick a fist fight with a Deputy Sheriff who was guarding him. Defense attorneys declare Warren is insane. Warren is charged with killing John C. Deskin here Oct. 13, 1924.

L. E. Peters, deputy, has been guarding Warren since the latter's trial began several days ago. When Harry Friedberg, of defense counsel, asked Peters to move away from Warren's side so his conversation with Warren could not be heard, Peters asserted:

"I am going to stay right here. This man is charged with murder. He has threatened to kill other prisoners in the jail and I am taking no chances with him."

Challenges Deputy to Fight.

Warren leaped to his feet and struck a fighting attitude, with his fists clenched.

"Come on," he shouted. "and I will fight it out with you now."

The court was in an uproar when Peters arose and reached for his hip pocket. He drew a blackjack and swung it in a threatening manner. "Sit down," the guard ordered. "You are no more crazy than I am. You are putting all this on."

Warren sat down, his face red, his hands trembling.

"If you would meet me outside, with bare fists," he said, "this would be a different story." He then sprang to his feet again. "I have been abused in jail," he declared, addressing the persons in the courtroom. "They would not let me have a heater in my cell. I need a heater to warm milk, but they would not let me have it."

Denies He Is Crazy.

He finally subsided in his chair, weeping and trembling. He sat holding his head in his hands.

"I am not crazy. I have told you a thousand times I am not crazy." Warren shouted at one time in the course of his testimony. "I can tell logically every act of my life."

A pause fraught with nervous tension preceded Warren's going on the stand. It followed debate as to the admissibility of his testimony. J. Francis O'Sullivan, one of his attorneys, asked him to take the stand. Apparently not hearing, Warren took a handkerchief from his pocket, placed it on his face and leaned forward on his folded arms.

"Mr. Warren," persisted O'Sullivan, "I asked you to take the stand." But Warren dropped his head forward on his arms. Again O'Sullivan asked him to rise. Warren then suddenly slumped to his knees, the movement pushing the chair in which he had been sitting backward.

"Brace up, take the stand," the attorney urged.

"Can't a man pray in peace?" sobbed Warren.

CAILLAUX PLANS APPROVED

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 9.—Finance Minister Caillaux today was empowered by the Cabinet to make his financial plans a question of confidence before Parliament. The Cabinet approved the outline of his proposals at its morning session.

Caillaux, after the meeting, said he had promised not to reveal the exact nature of his plans until his appearance next Tuesday before the Finance Commission of the Chamber of Deputies. In fact, he added, he had not completed all the details.

M'CUTCHAN'S ARREST ON LADUE INDICTMENT SOUGHT

Sheriff of Henry County Asks Local Police to Take Promoter Into Custody.

The arrest of Jerome B. McCutchan, St. Louis promoter, who resides at 701 Eastgate avenue, University City, was requested yesterday by Sheriff Markle of Henry County, the grand jury there having charged McCutchan with obtaining money by fraud in connection with the recent failure of the Bank of Ladue.

The Ladue bank failed shortly after McCutchan and three associates had acquired control. McCutchan also is charged with unlawful practices in connection with the Citizens' Trust Co. of Gorin, Mo., which he organized and which is in the hands of a receiver. He was an intimate friend of Frank C. Millspaugh, who was removed as State Finance Commissioner on charges growing out of the Gorin case.

Gets 30 Days for Rifling Letters.

William Juerling, St. Louis mail carrier, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $200 by Federal Judge Davis yesterday, on evidence that he had taken about $45 from letters he was carrying during December, 1924.

PAINTER WOUNDED AFTER UNION ROW

Altercation at Granite City Labor Temple Ends in Shooting.

George E. Burge, 42 years old, a painter, was critically wounded yesterday afternoon when he was struck in the abdomen by a bullet fired by Antimo Petracci, 21 years old, an iron worker, following an altercation at the Granite City, Ill., Labor Temple.

Petracci and John Ohsam, 20, another iron worker, attended a meeting of members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, during the course of which both are said to have sought redress through the organization for having lost their jobs in a Granite City foundry. Other members of the union voted against consideration of their claims, at which Petracci and Ohsam are said to have become angry, leaving the meeting.

Petracci is said to have fired a shot through the door of the Labor Temple as he departed and two more shots at a group standing in a hallway of the building. He and Ohsam then attempted to escape in an automobile, being prevented from doing so by Burge and several other bystanders. Burge was shot in the struggle that followed. He is in a critical condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He told physicians he recently came to Granite City from Kansas City, Mo., where his wife and five children reside.

Petracci and Ohsam are being held by Granite City police pending the outcome of Burge's condition.

GAMBLERS NAMED BY KOMAR SURRENDER

Butch McGuire and John Connor, Alleged County Operators, Released on Bond.

Butch McGuire and John Connor, alleged operators of gambling resorts in St. Louis County, surrendered to Justice of the Peace Werremeyer in Clayton yesterday on warrants charging them with setting up and operating gambling devices.

The warrants were based on affidavits signed by George Komar, City Clerk of Maplewood, who has admitted dissipating from $10,000 to $15,000 of that city's funds at gambling.

An examination of Komar's records so far has disclosed a shortage of $10,500. Most of this, he says, was lost in two gaming resorts said to have been operated by McGuire and Connor on the Olive Street road and at 6128 Easton avenue, Wellston. The two men signed bonds of $1500 each and their preliminary hearing was set for May 21 before Justice Werremeyer.

The Buying Public Prefer Conroys

Because the piano market of today is a searching market. Buyers, for their own protection, are weighing values with extreme care.

They are demanding quality—not merely surface quality or flashy cases, but deep through and through goodness of design, material and construction.

They are demanding value—not fictitious price tags, but real dollar-for-dollar value in a piano which will remain fine for generations.

They are demanding economy—not the expensive economy of short-lived instruments, but true economy represented by long, reliable service, satisfaction and high trade-in value.

They are demanding security—not promises, but proof of quality, in pianos of sound tested design. The Conroy guarantee is backed by nearly forty years of continuous operation and countless thousands of satisfied buyers.

True quality, economy, security and values are always obtainable from Conroys. In fact any careful buyer will tell you that Conroys alone give Conroy values.

VETERANS TO HOLD WHEEL-CHAIR PARADE

Hospital Patients to Entertain Friends With Program Tuesday.

Patients at United States Veterans' Hospital No. 92, Jefferson Barracks, will entertain their friends Tuesday afternoon in the celebration of National Hospital day—the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale.

Last year the patients at the Veterans' Hospital chose, instead of a formal observance of the day, to provide entertainment for their friends, and their Mardi Gras parade and sports program was unique among observances of the day throughout the country. Many unusual floats were seen in the wheel-chair parade of patients. This year the celebration will be on a more elaborate scale, and will include the wheel-chair parade.

A parade at 2 p. m. will be headed by the Sixth Infantry Band, followed by a detachment from the Sixth Infantry, "The Spirit of '76" as portrayed by patients, medical officers, nurses, aids, ward floats, individual floats and patients in costume. At 2:45 begins a program of athletic events in which the hospital personnel will participate and at 3 p. m. a ball game will be played between the Hospital and the Sixth Infantry. During the athletic events there will be a band concert.

At 4 p. m. a luncheon will be served the visitors on the picnic grounds.

Davis Trial on Tomorrow.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 9.—Jonathan M. Davis, former Governor of Kansas, will go on trial tomorrow before a jury in District Court here on a charge of soliciting a bribe in exchange for a pardon for Walter Grundy, convicted Hutchinson County bank president. Judge James A. McClure will preside.

21 Perished When U. S. Boat Sank Near Memphis

Jack Cothran, engineer on steamer; Earl Simonson, fireman; Roy Thompson, stoker; Will Moore, negro deckhand, and Tom Plunkett, negro deckhand.

Only Two Bodies Accounted For.

Announcement had not been made late today as to when the body of Prof. Kirkpatrick, which was recovered, would be taken to Oxford, nor when that of Edgar Bosard would be buried. These were the only two bodies recovered. Kirkpatrick having been pulled out of the river just as he succumbed and the boy dying when he reached a hospital here.

The rudder of the Norman failed to respond when she first began to list, Capt. Fenton declared. Less than three minutes later she turned over and sank.

The Norman was headed straight up stream with the current, just below Coahoma Landing, eFnton said: "I was running into Coabell, flanking the boat into Coahoma Landing. She gave a sharp list to starboard. When she started to list I pulled over hard, but the rudder refused to respond.

"I tried to have the passengers trim up the boat, but within three minutes she turned over. I was not trying to head into shore. If I had been, every soul on board would have been drowned, many more would have perished but for the fact that Tom Lee, a negro employed by the Tennessee Construction Co., came along in a boat. Lee deserves the greatest of credit for the manner in which he handled his motor boat and saved the lives of at least 30.

Life Preservers Saved Many.

That traditional sixth sense characteristic of old-time Mississippi River pilots—causes them to look for the unforseen—probably saved many passengers aboard the Norman.

Before leaving for the downstream trip, Capt. Fenton ordered life preservers placed about the upper deck. When the boat careened, these life preservers slid into the river close enough for passengers to grasp.

Fenton yesterday witnessed the first loss of life on a steamboat on which he was standing "watch" in 30 years.

The banquet tables were set, the food prepared and the waiters ready to serve the first annual dinner of the Mid-South Association of Engineers at a local hotel, when word came of the disastrous ending of the trip accorded the men and their families to see Government work at Cow Island.

A little sad-faced band of men walked into the hotel, went to the manager's office and said: "The Norman, with many engineers aboard, has gone down." The banquet was not served.

NEGRO, WHO SAVED MANY, SAYS FATE LED HIM TO RESCUE

"Something Caused Me to Keep Looking Back Until I Saw Boat Tilt," Says Lee.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 9.—Tom Lee, 40-year-old negro, who saved 30 lives when the steamer M. E. Norman sank late yesterday, today called on Mayor Rowlette Paine to explain his part in the rescue work. Dressed in blue overalls and with a short jumper as a coat, Tom was admitted to the Mayor's private office.

"I guess I didn't do any more than anybody else would have done in my place," he said. "I had passed upon the Arkansas side of the Norman as she was making Coahoma Bend. She was all right when I passed her. I don't know what caused me to keep looking back at the boat, but I did, and once I thought I saw her tilting. When I looked again she was leaning way over on one side.

"I turned my boat around. I guess I was a quarter of a mile up the river from her when I started, but she was all under water when I got there. Then I got a man out. He was turning loose his hold on a piece of timber, so I got him under the arms and pulled him in. Then I picked up two or three little children. I took them to a sand bar a short distance away, gave them some matches and told them to build a fire out of driftwood. I kept going and coming until I had saved everybody I saw in the river, then I went to the sand bar and built a fire."

Mayor Paine and Vice Mayor Thomas A. Allen announced they intended to start a movement to obtain a Carnegie hero medal for Lee.

War Department Receives Report of Sinking of the Norman.

By the Associated Press.

WASHIGTON, May 9.—First official information of the sinking of the steamer Norman reached the War Department late today in the form of a brief report from Maj. Donald H. Connolly, district engineer at Memphis and one of the survivors.

The cause of the accident had not been ascertained definitely, Connolly said, adding that all available equipment at Memphis was being sent to attempt the raising of the craft and the recovery of bodies of victims.

Reporting that 17 passengers and five members of the crew were "missing," Connolly said that at the time the Norman capsized the vessel was endeavoring to make shore, to investigate listing which had developed.

THOMAS E. STOCKER FUNERAL TO BE HELD THIS AFTERNOON

Former Brewery Official Will Be Buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Funeral services for Thomas E. Stocker, former superintendent of the Hyde Park and Columbia breweries, will be held from the family residence, 4765 Flora place, at 2:30 p. m. today. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Stocker, who was 64 years old, died at St. Luke's Hospital early Friday, following an operation for goitre. He was brought to St. Louis from Germany when six years of age, and was educated in local schools. Following his connection with the Hyde Park and Columbia breweries he became district sales manager for the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co., which position he held until his retirement six years ago.

Stocker was known as a story teller and also as a lover of fine horses and dogs. He is said to have collaborated with Jack Ryan, story teller and clerk at the old Southern Hotel, in the preparation of stories for use on the American stage. His horses and dogs were shown at horse and kennel shows throughout the country. He was also an enthusiastic hunter and fisherman and was active in the organization of rod and gun clubs here.

Mrs. Stocker and two sons, Harry R. and Alexis R., survive.

150 ST. LOUISANS GO TO 'AD' CONVENTION

Special Train Takes Delegates and Wives to Houston—St. Louisans to Speak.

Bound for the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 150 St. Louisans, members of the St. Louis Advertising Club, and their wives, departed at noon yesterday for Houston, Tex. The party is making the trip in a special train and is headed by Arthur Siegel, chairman of the "On to Houston" Committee of the club. In the party were R. Fullerton Place, president of the St. Louis Advertising Club; W. B. Weisenberger and L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, who will be speakers before the convention.

Delegates to the convention from New York and from Europe, to the number of 152, were entertained by the St. Louis Advertising Club Friday evening during a four-hour stay in St. Louis. After an automobile tour of the industrial sections of the city they were guests of the club at dinner at the Coronado Hotel, at which R. Fullerton Place presided. Responses to his welcome were made by Sir William Veno of Manchester, England, chairman of the English delegation; George W. Hopkins, chairman of the New York delegation; C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Dictaphone Corporation of New York, and Rowe Stewart, advertising manager of the Philadelphia Record. Jesse H. Neal, executive secretary of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and Maj. Wynne Williams, advertising manager of the London Times, were among the visitors.

HELD IN AUTO MURDER CASE

Deputy to Be Questioned in Connection With Killing of Pair.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., May 9.—William Richter, a Deputy Sheriff, was held today by police who have been investigating the deaths of Miss Katherin Heber, 25 years old, and her fiance, Howard Fisher, 27, whose bodies were found in Fisher's automobile south of this city last Thursday.

Officers said they would seek an explanation of Richter's alleged order to garage employes to wash the stains from Fisher's car.

Automatic, Insulated
Four thrifty sizes. No. 2, shown here, for average homes. It is insulated, gas-saving, dependable. The factory price is.. $125
In Canada, add duty

All the hot water you want—when you want it—at lower cost

KEYSTONE (Premier Junior)
Gas Water Heater
Automatic, insulated. No. 2, for average homes, at factory. In Canada, add duty. $90

MARVEL Gas Water Heater
Not automatic, not insulated. No. 32, for average homes, at factory. In Canada, add duty. $32

Now you can have instant hot water at any hour of the night or day and pay less per gallon for all you'll ever want to use.

The Premier automatic storage water heater cuts your gas bills in two ways. First, the Premier heating element heats more water with less gas. Second, a stored supply is kept hot and ready for instant use in a big heat-retaining, asbestos insulated tank.

Runs itself—no bother or waste

No alternate heating and cooling to waste gas. The thermostat lights the burner when more hot water is needed. No waiting. No coils to "lime up" and require removal.

Simple, sturdy, dependable, the Premier is built in four thrifty sizes to fit various home needs. The Keystone automatic insulated gas water heater and the Marvel, which is not automatic, bring hot water comfort and health within reach of all. See them at your plumbing contractor's or study them in operation at the Crane Exhibit Rooms.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 9—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

Real buoyancy at times in the market for stocks, encouraging signs of tax reductions at Washington, a continuation of the recession in commodity prices and pronounced ease in money were important events of the week in the financial world. All eyes have turned with renewed interest to the upturn in stocks and the pessimists have been seeking to authoritative answer to the question: Have we passed safely by the worst so far as stocks go?

"Certainly the advance of the week in many groups was impressive, but quite as significant was the momentum that developed in the trading. Until this week we had not witnessed a 2,000,000 share session since the middle of May, when the general course of the market was in the opposite direction. Sessions of such a volume were common when the market was rising, but activity has died down as recession has proceeded. Accordingly the general movement which was in the market during the advance still has confidence in the future. It otherwise would have liquidated more stocks in the past two months than have been offered.

Car Loadings at Peak.

"What has happened is now fairly obvious. The so-called 'public' by which we mean to include the type of person that takes up his securities and puts them away as investments bought heavily in to about the time of the inauguration. The substantial reaction that set in then did not frighten him into selling all that he had bought but he took a seat in the grandstands and has been watching from there for the greater part of the time. Of course, that the public has not yet entered the market to an appreciable extent should be plain, if from no other evidence, by the nature of the present movement. Stocks in the past week have been picked generally, with rare and discriminating wisdom. On the other hand, operators and professional operators, using fresh basis for confidence in such developments as the return to gold basis abroad and President Coolidge's determination to reduce taxes has awakened in them fresh confidence for the future.

Price recessions continue, but that was to have been expected. Productive capacity is developed to a high degree and the short notice our manufacturing concerns could satisfy almost any reasonable demands that might be made upon them. Car loadings remain at peak levels and our railroad service at the greatest degree of efficiency in its history. Dealers saw no reason to change their policy of buying on a hand-to-mouth basis and, of course, there is none in the circumstances. A condition of this sort always leads to declines in commodity values. However, the general price level already has fallen back to its position of last fall, so far as raw materials are concerned, and the adjustment has been made in a rather orderly fashion. Doubtless we will have further recessions, but the encouraging thing is that since stocks are relatively low and consumption demand is good we need expect no immediate or sharp break in commodity values.

Money Large Factor.

"While the unfilled steel orders published today show a substantial decline from the total of a month ago, the conclusion that business has contracted proportionately is scarcely logical. The necessity for booking orders ahead to assure delivery does not face steel purchasers as it once did. Not only may the mills be relied upon to produce, but the railroads may be relied upon to deliver promptly. The result is that an enormous volume of hand-to-mouth buying now is going on that does not show in the unfilled orders. The motor industry likewise is one that is in a sound position, but not so the coal and textile industries.

"Of course, any attempt to explain the good market in bonds and stocks without reference to the ease in money must be in vain. An abundance of cheap funds and the reasonable assurance that rates will remain low into the summer months is the best guarantee that we will not soon have a major downward movement in securities. With time money in supply below 4 per cent and the general economic position of the country sound, the temptation to hold securities is strong. Bonds of the best description are in demand at prices near the peak for the year, and bankers are unable to arrange enough good loans to supply the demands being made upon them by large institutions and wealthy investors.

"Wall street does not expect any immediate era of great prosperity, but altogether it is satisfied that business is sound in this country and that Europe gradually is getting back to a basis that will strengthen its own financial position."

Sterling Dominates Exchange.

"The market for foreign exchange continued influenced in many quarters by the return of sterling exchange to close to parity and in the last week many documents were established at new high levels for recent years. The most important movement was a brisk demand in the first half of the week that carried sterling from $4.85⅝ for cables, but far after that high record for the post-war period was reached the market became quiet and a loss of about ½ from the high level was sustained in the past few days.

"Trading in sterling all through the week was of only moderate volume, no large transactions being made for any purpose, and the few commercial bills in supply were readily absorbed. Special movements occurred during the week in both Norwegian and Danish exchanges, crown checks on Norway moving up almost 50 points to 17.07, but this advance was followed by a sharp break to 16.78, with another brisk upturn after that reaction. Danish exchange rose to 18.87, but also reacted with a sharp rally yesterday. Swedish was in moderate supply and receded slightly in the first half of the week. French exchange had a sudden break from 5.24 to 5.17 early in the week, but met support after that movement and recovered most of its loss. Swiss and Dutch moved within a narrow range, both these documents holding close to parity. Spanish exchange was steadily bought and made a substantial advance, pesetas selling as high as 14.85, and there was continued firmness in exchange on Portugal, escudo checks holding at 3.05.

"The action by the Argentine Government providing for resumption of gold exports after an interval of about 10 years caused a brisk advance in exchange on Buenos Aires, the paper peso moving up from 39.40 to 39.70. Canadian exchange, after touching 1-8-1 premium, reacted to parity. Silver exchanges showed a strong tone all through the week and Indian exchange was strong, rupee checks going up to 36.12. Rumanian exchange was in increased demand, lei checks advancing from 46 to 48⅝.

Foreign exchanges Saturday were quiet and fairly steady. Weakness in Brazilian rates, which fell to a new low for the year, was the only feature.

Saturday's Market Irregular.

"Prices of speculative securities maintained a generally steady tone in fairly active trading on the stock market today, despite some further profit-taking with consequent reactions. Weekly trade reviews emphasizing the likelihood of increased commercial activity, and continued prosperity in the automobile industry, formed the basis for sustained confidence. U. S. Steel and several other prominent market leaders developed hesitancy in anticipation of a further shrinkage in unfilled orders on the Steel Corporation's books at the end of April. Rubber stocks developed strength in response to the further advance in crude rubber, which was believed to forecast another rise in tire prices.

"Trading continued quiet in cotton, with the price trend lower as the result of favorable weather reports from the crop sections.

Motor Stocks Lead Rally.

"Although there was considerable irregularity in utility and industrial shares, stocks of automobile producers were in good demand in fairly active trading. Mack Trucks reached a new high level in continuing its steady advance in anticipation of favorable developments on a stock split up. Willys-Overland and Maxwell B shares moved higher while Studebaker ruled firm. Some of the specialties reacted on profit-taking. Utah Securities and Montana Power being noticeable in this respect. On the other hand, several in this group held firm. American Sumatra preferred continued its sensational spurt to a new high. Pere Marquette and Western Pacific scored gains.

"Foreign exchanges were quiet and fairly steady. Weakness in Brazilian rates which fell to a new low for the year, was the only feature.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House revealed an increase in excess reserve of $23,022,340, the total amounting to $23,202,830. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $100,025,000, while circulation increased $157,000."

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.—Wheat showed about one cent lower with corn down moderately at the final session of week on local grain market. The reaction was taken as indicative that the condition of wheat had been overdone and crop prediction from experience was necessary. The indicated winter wheat yield is 109,000,000 under a year ago.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat was 2c to 3c lower and hard 1c to 2c lower. There was better demand at the reduced premiums, shippers taking No. 2 red and mixed wheat in which demand was good. Oats were 1¼c to 1¾c lower. Demand was good.

Wheat market collapsed soon after the opening as a result of the Government crop report forecasting a crop of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels larger than the trade had been anticipating. The market broke sharply on overbought, liquidated wheat closed ⅞ d to 1d lower. Corn prices here also were lower.

Primary shipments of wheat were 558,000 bushels, compared with 358,000 a week ago and 1,000,000 last year. Corn receipts were 297,000 bushels, compared with 356,000 a week ago and 520,000 last year. Oats receipts were 352,000 bushels, compared with 297,000 a week ago and 420,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 203,000 bushels, compared with 1,083,000 a week ago and 443,000 last year. Corn shipments were 161,000 bushels, compared with 393,000 a week ago and 645,000 last year. Oats shipments were 649,000 bushels, compared with 587,000 a week ago and 645,000 last year.

Clearances were 80,000 bushels of wheat, 80,000 bushels of oats and 80,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

SHARP SETBACK IN WHEAT ON THE CHICAGO MARKET

special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 9.—Wheat longs were not so confident today, after showing over yesterday's Government report. The report was construed bearishly in so far as it exceeded the expectations and estimates of most experts. This resulted in a sharp break today, because of abandonment of a position of holders. The entire grain and provision list was affected by the weakness of wheat. Despite today's setback, prices of all commodities show a slight net gain for the week. As it was the wheat market was the dominating influence in prospective on the Board of Trade throughout the week. The upturn in the general market was based upon the bullish crop reports by local experts, but said suddenly at the opening under pressure of liquidation and stop-loss orders. After the opening there was good buying on the breaks, especially on July, from $1.53 down. This demand, however, served only to postpone the inevitable, because locals were attracted by it and accumulated long holdings, which they attempted to take profits on just before the close and the market was unable to absorb the offerings. There was a lot of export bids in the market, but it developed that the decline did not go far enough to reach them. The Western crop bull got another good soaking over night, and it is difficult to find a spot that is now suffering from lack of moisture. It is almost an assured fact that yesterday's crop figures of 445,000,000 bushels will be the smallest issued this season, because conditions have been ideal all spring for development of the standard varieties. Closing prices were 2c to 3¼c lower than yesterday, 4c to 5c higher than a week ago. May, $1.62⅞ @1.63; July, $1.50⅜ @1.50½; September, $1.43⅝@1.42⅝.

Liquidation featured trade in corn today and buying power was not so broad as of late. Some reinstatement of long holding was experienced on the opening decline, but failed to last. Shipping sales were only 70,000 bushels. The market closed 1¼c to 2¾c lower than yesterday and 3½c to 4¼c lower than a week ago. May, $1.11⅛; July, $1.14⅜ to $1.14⅝; September, $1.12⅝ to $1.12⅝. Oats followed the trend of other grains, although the May continued to gain on July, reflecting the stronger cash situation. However, despite the strength in the cash market was relatively weak than the May and the basis was 1c to 1½c lower at the finish. Futures closed ½c to 1¼c lower than yesterday and unchanged to 2¾c higher than a week ago. Provisions were under pressure from commission houses because of the weakness in grains. A little support developed on the break because of the strength. At the close lard was 30c to 37½c lower; ribs 20c to 30c lower and bellies 20c to 22½c lower. Gains of 42½c to 57½c were recorded in lard for the week, $1.02½ to $1.20 in ribs and $1.20 to $1.25 in bellies.

CHECKS TO OTHERS THAN CONTRACTORS

Letter to Public Service Board Asks It to Learn If There Is a Combination Among Bidders.

Records on file in the City Comptroller's office show that monthly checks given by the city in payment for garbage disposal were not made out directly to the owners of the contracts for the disposal. This is one of the eight reasons cited by Mayor Miller yesterday in asking a sweeping investigation of the garbage disposal situation.

A letter is on file from Samuel Baumgarten, secretary-treasurer of the Jefferson Distributing Co., the present contractor, asking that checks due his firm be made out to the "Jefferson Distributing Co., Montague Lyons, attorney in fact."

Another letter is on file from Meyer Katz, vice president of the Klein & Katz Garbage Disposal Co., which held the city contract for the year before, asking that checks due his company be made out to "James G. Miller, president Security National Bank, East St. Louis, attorney in fact for Klein & Katz."

Canceled checks show the two requests were carried out. City officials have not said they attach any significance to the requests.

Text of Mayor's Letter.

Mayor Miller's letter to the Board of Public Service, in which the suggestion is made that the Police Department be asked to assist in the investigation, follows:

"In view of the many developments concerning this matter, and in view of the charges and counter-charges which have been made, I deem it my duty to have a complete investigation of the garbage disposal matter. From the evidence submitted to me and from the statements made by persons of reliability, it appears that the garbage disposal question is a matter about which the public should be informed.

"Having only in mind a desire to serve the public, and knowing full well that the public cannot be served unless it knows the handicaps under which we are working, I want you to proceed with an investigation in the following manner:

"1. Find out if in the past any portion of this garbage has been dumped into the river, contrary to Federal and States statutes. I suggest that the Federal and State authorities be asked to make this investigation.

"2. Find out if any money was paid unlawfully to any public official for his influence in this matter.

"3. Learn, if possible, the reason that checks in payment of the garbage disposal contract were not made payable to the owners of the garbage contract, and if possible learn from the bank to whom these checks have been made payable upon whose note this contract was up as collateral.

"4. Learn who drew the contract for the garbage disposal.

"5. Get in touch with the Municipal Research Bureau, whose officers claim to have some very valuable information on this garbage subject.

"6. Examine the alleged pictures taken of the boats dumping garbage in the river.

Would Investigate Disposal.

"7. Investigate the island on which this garbage was supposed to have been dumped, and ascertain how many hogs have been there, and whether or not the number of hogs there were sufficient to consume the garbage.

"8. Investigate thoroughly the question as to whether or not there was or is a combination among the various bidders for this contract and if at any time there was collusion between said bidders and any public official of the city of St. Louis.

Legal Aid Advised.

"It is my suggestion that you secure the services of some person from the law department to assist you in this investigation, and that you ask the Police Department to furnish you with two competent investigators.

"During the course of your investigation if you learn of any bribery, fraud or corruption, immediately place the matter before our Circuit Attorney. I pledged to the people of the city of St. Louis that there must be no graft or corruption in connection with the expenditure of public funds. I want this investigation to be thorough, so that all forms of graft, if such existed, will find an unhappy home with the municipal government of St. Louis."

President Kinsey of the board, after receiving the Mayor's letter, said it would be read at Tuesday's meeting of the board and then referred to Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks, who has charge of the garbage disposal for the city.

MEMORIAL TO QUAYLE VOTED

M. E. Bishops Decide to Honor Late Prelate of That Church.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 9.—Fomal selection of Buffalo, N. Y., as the December meeting place and completed committee reports wound up the sessions of the semi-annual convention of the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, yesterday and the Bishops started home today. Bishops John L. Neulsen and Edgar Blake were chosen representatives of American Methodism to attend the 200th anniversary of John Welsey to be held at Oxford University in March, 1926. The celebration will mark his election as Fellow at Oxford.

A memorial to William A. Quayle, former Bishop and president of Baker University at Baldwin, Kan., was voted. What the memorial is to be was not decided. Bishop Ernst G. Richardson of the Atlanta area was chosen to represent the Board of Bishops and the Board of Foreign Missions at the seventy-fifth anniversary of German Methodist conferences to be held next fall.

DRY BOAT BURNED; WARFARE BY RUM ROW INDICATED

Patrol Craft on Florida Coast Catches Fire and Explodes; Investigation Under Way.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—One of the Coast Guard patrol boats watching the Florida coast caught fire last night and after the explosion of tanks and ammunition was pronounced a total casualty in reports to Coast Guard headquarters today. Coming after a series of incidents manifesting that a guerilla warfare has been started by rum row against the forces sent to wipe it out of existence, the circumstances of the patrol boat's burning are being investigated closely.

The only report received stated that enemy action was not suspected, but officials at Coast Guard headquarters, viewing the sabotage and unusual incidents all along the Atlantic seaboard, are unwilling to accept such a fire as accidental, particularly since the gulf division commandant stated its origin was unknown.

Valued at $30,000.

The Coast Guard casualty was one of the smaller types of patrol boat used for boarding purposes and valued at approximately $30,000. Lieutenant-Commander Yeandle, aid to Admiral Billard, Coast Guard commandant, said it is hard to believe all the recent fires have been accidents. The officer who reported on the fire was described as one of the most conservative in the service. This, and the feeling that he might wish to keep such suspicions as he might have secret added to the belief that the fire might be the declaration of rum war in a new sector.

Meanwhile indications that the rum fleet is starting to disperse are seen by Coast Guard officials. Some of the ships, they believe, already have decided landing opportunities will be better farther up or down the coast and are slipping along, looking for new anchorage.

The capture of a speedy launch with 200 cases of liquor off the Virginia coast today caused some belief that the region of the Virginia capes will be the next assemblage point for the liquor schooners.

Coast Guard Reports Blockade Is Routing Rum Fleet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 9.—At the end of the first week of the coast guard's offensive against the rum fleet, announcement was made today by Capt. W. V. E. Jacobs that the Government was winning and that the liquor vessels were beginning to disperse.

"Unrest has grown among members of the rum fleet and some of the vessels are on their way out to sea," Capt. Jacobs said.

Rumors at the barge office were that several of the steamers and larger schooners of the liquor armada were headed as best they could for sea. Many of these boats are believed to be short of provisions and water.

Local authorities insist not one case of liquor has been smuggled in since the picketing of all liquor craft outside New York waters began the first of the week.

Great Lakes Dry Navy Captures Three Boats on Erie.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., May 9.—The first severe blow dealt rum runners on the Great Lakes this spring came today when two boats of the dry navy took a run down to Lake Erie, after spending the winter in Ecorse, a down-river suburb, seized three motorboats loaded with 10 quarter-barrels of beer, 642 quarts of whisky and 10,920 quarts of beer and arrested seven men.

The first capture was made at Estral Beach, where a motorboat was taken. The second boat appeared a few minutes later. Off Swan Creek another boat was discovered and taken.

All seven men pleaded not guilty when arraigned and were held under bond of $2000 each, the welcoming ceremonies.

C. W. DEERING WILLS FORTUNE TO THREE WOMEN FRIENDS

Grandson of Harvester Magnate Doesn't Mention Two Divorced Wives in Document.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Cutting off two divorced wives, Charles William Case Deering, grandson of William Deering, founder of the Deering Harvester Co., left his fortune to three other women, who, according to the transfer tax report filed yesterday, were not closely related to him.

The total amount of the estate left by Deering, who died May 11, 1924, at the age of 47, was not shown by the report, which dealt only with the interest payable in New York.

Deering shared in a $15,000,000 fortune left by his grandfather. His first wife was Mary Wentworth Bartlett, a daughter of William Bartlett, Chicago capitalist. After a divorce decree he was married to Mrs. Helen Moyer, widow of a California real estate man. She divorced him several months after their marriage.

Deering left half of his estate to Helen Elizabeth Eaton Stoddard of San Francisco. A quarter of the estate he bequeathed to Mrs. Anna Rogers Fuse Mills of Bristol, R. I., and left her valuable oil portraits. Her sister, Helena de St. P. Connal-Rowan, received the other quarter of the estate.

BAKER FOR SPECIAL EDUCATIONAL LEVY

Governor Proposes Constitutional Amendment That Will Eliminate Scramble.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 9.—A recommendation that the State Constitution be amended to permit a special tax levy of probably two mills on the dollar for support of State educational institutions, thereby doing away with the present system of the university and colleges having to scramble for appropriations every two years, will be made by Gov. Baker in a statement he will issue soon on the appropriation bills he signed yesterday.

Appropriations for the State University, five teachers' colleges, Missouri School of Mines and Lincoln University now are made from general revenues and the schools are required to have lobbyists at each session of the Legislature in order to get desired appropriations.

As has been told, Baker had to veto or withhold $6,244,418 in appropriation items to bring appropriations from general revenues within the estimated State revenue for 1925 and 1926. Of that amount $460,852, for the educational institutions was vetoed and $627,000 held up, lopping a total of $1,087,853 from the $6,668,291 in the educational bill.

The Governor also vetoed $1,957,591 and withheld $886,299 in items in the building bill for educational and eleemosynary institutions.

Most of the proposed building projects were for the State schools. The items held up will be released later in the biennial period if there are unexpected increases in revenue.

NEW DESTRUCTIVE 'DEATH RAY' REPORTED FROM GERMANY

Waves Said to Be Capable of Paralyzing Life for Six Hours Over 40-Mile Distance.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—A new kind of "death ray" exceeding in its destructive capacity any previous device, rumored or realized, was reported today to the Commerce Department as the claimed accomplishment of a German inventor.

William T. Daugherty, Trade Commissioner at Berlin, forwarded a summary of a publication describing the invention, which is called "Heliotaeub," with the startling claim that its mysterious waves are capable of paralyzing life for six hours over a distance of 40 miles, and to an altitude of more than 45,000 feet. Method of operation and the source of the energy used were lacking.

War Department experts pointed out that the highest altitude reached by an airplane at present is about 38,000 feet, so that the new device—if it works—would effectively clear the air in any battle.

Webster Groves and Staunton Tie for Honors in Valley Meet

Eight Records Set By School Athletes In Pikeway Carnival

Richardson of Principia Shatters Old Mark for 220-Yard Hurdles in Preliminary and Beats His Own Standard in Final.

The athletes of Webster Groves High School and Staunton (Ill.) High School captured first place in division 1 of the fifth annual Mississippi Valley interschoalstic field and track meet, held at Francis field yesterday under the auspices of Washington University. Each team scored a total of 25 points.

Other teams in Division 1 finished with the following scores: Cleveland, 25; Cape Girardeau, 15; East St. Louis, 14; Western Military, 11; Soldan, 9; Yeatman, 7; Belleville, 6; Roosevelt, 2; University City, 2.

In Division 2, limited to schools with an enrollment of fewer than 150 students, the championship was won by the Hillsboro (Ill.) team with a total of 34 7-12 points; Greenfield, Ill., with 24, was second, and Carrollton, Ill., third, with 18½ points.

Although no records were broken in Division 1, eight records were smashed and another equaled in Division 2.

Sets and Breaks Record.

Preston Richardson of Principia, after breaking the old record of 28 seconds for the 220-yard hurdles in the preliminaries, came back in the finals to run the distance in 23 1-10 seconds.

Webster, in tying for the championship, took first place in the mile run and the discus throw and placed in six other events. Staunton won three firsts and four seconds.

Armicar High Point Man.

High point honors went to Armicar, star weight man of the Staunton team, whose work did much to insure a tie for his team. He took first place in the javelin and second in the shotput and discus threw for a total of 11 points.

In Division 2 Hayes of Greenfield and McDonough of Carrollton tied for first honors by scoring 10 points. Each man won two events. McDonough set two records, while Hayes established one and equaled another. In the 120-yard high hurdles, McDonough lowered the former record of 17.5 seconds to 16.9 seconds and he clipped 3-10 of a second off the 100-yard dash time of 10.7 seconds.

Hayes ran the half-mile in 2 minutes 8 2-10 seconds, 5 1-10 seconds faster than the old time. He equaled the old record of 440 time of 53 8-10 seconds.

New Record for Mile.

Smith of Hillsboro set a new mile record of 4 minutes 44 seconds. The old time was 5 minutes 2 3-10 seconds.

In the pole vault, Ricks of White Hall, Ill., improved the former record by 2 inches when he crossed the bar at 10 feet 6 inches.

Greene of Greenfield, Ill., threw the discus 118 feet 8½ inches. The former record was 106 feet 10 inches.

Putney of Country Day School turned 2-10 second from the 220-yard dash record by running the distance in 23 1-10 seconds.

The special half-mile relay race, which did not figure in the scoring, was won in Division 1 by Cleveland High, followed by St. Louis U. High, Webster and Soldan. Hillsboro captured the event in the Second Division, St. Charles was second, Principia third and Farmersville fourth.

500 Athletes Take Part.

About 500 athletes, representing high schools in Illinois and Missouri, took part in the meet. The only unpleasant feature of the competition was the continual rainfall, which made the field muddy and the track slow.

Point totals for Divison 2 follow: Hillsboro 34 7-12, Greenfield 24, Carrollton 18¾, Benld 11½, White Hall 11, Farmersville 8 5-6, Principia 7, Maplewood 6½, Kirkwood 5¼, Country Day 5, St. Charles 2 1-3, Shelbyville 2, Clayton 1, Rolla ⅓.

As a result of the tie for first place in Division 1, Webster and Staunton will each be awarded a permanent trophy. The trophy which becomes the property of the school winning the event three times will be in the possession of such school for six months.

Brownies Tie Yankees; Homer For Robertson

Darkness Ends Game After 7 Innings; Gaston Holds New York to 5 Hits.

By Dent McSkimming.

Gene Robertson's home run in the first inning enabled the Browns to gain a 1—1 tie with the New York Yankees in the second game of the series at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. Except for Gene's wallop into the right-field bleachers, the Browns were absolutely devoid of batting punch.

The game was called after seven innings because of darkness, although, as a matter of fact, weather conditions at the close of the game were not perceptibly worse than at the start. It was no day for baseball, for rain had soaked the grounds and chilled the ardor of players and spectators.

Milton Gaston pitched a fine game for the Browns, permitting only five hits. He was wild in the early innings, but after the second frame he settled down to the serious business of mowing down Yankee batters. From the first to the sixth he allowed no hits. Then, in the sixth, Dugan singled, while in the seventh Schang and Wanninger singled.

Waite Hoyt, although he permitted nine hits, was a very effective man when a hit by a Brownie batter meant a run scored.

How Yanks Got Score.

The only New York run was scored in the very first inning, when Witt singled, reached second on Dugan's safe bunt, went to third when Gaston issued a base on balls to Meusel and scored on Pipp's sacrifice fly.

That base on balls issued to Meusel was the only walk given by Gaston.

The Yanks were favored by another break in scoring their run, for, in attempting to field Dugan's bunt, which was intended for a sacrifice, Gaston slipped on the wet grass and could not make the play.

Sisler Makes It 24.

George Sisler maintained his batting streak when he drove a line single to center in the fifth inning. He has now batted safely in 24 consecutive games.

In his other trips to the plate, Sisler flied to Meusel, forced Tobin at third on a bunt and struck out. The strikeout came in the seventh inning, when George was swinging for a home run. He knew the game was to be called as soon as the Browns were retired and he was trying to put the ball in the right-field bleachers to win the game. The third strike was on a high ball.

In spite of the unfavorable condition of the field, there were no errors.

Kenny Williams' inability to hit safely in the pinch proved costly. It so happened that Kenny came

In today's play, Baron de Morphurgo and Sig. Gaslini of the Italian team defeated S. D. Casanova and Senhor Vasconcellos of Portugal, 6—3, 6—1, 3—6, 9—7.

Chief Uncas Is Sure to Start in Kentucky Derby

Colt to Be Shipped West Tomorrow—Coventry May Never Race Again.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JAMAICA, N. Y., May 9.—Chief Uncas, St. Louis candidate for the Kentucky Derby, will be shipped West, after all, to carry the colors of A. A. Busch. Harry Sanderson, trainer of the colt, said today the injury received in the race a week ago had responded so well to treatment that he saw no reason now why the colt should not have his chance.

Chief Uncas will be put in a special car on Monday in company with Gifford A. Cochran's Flying Ebony.

The fact that a maiden, one with a bowed tendon at that, won the Preakness makes every trainer with a sound horse willing to take a chance.

Coventry, winner of the Preakness at Pimlico yesterday, has run his last race. William Duke, trainer of the colt, said Coventry went to the post with a bowed tendon and came out of the race decidely lame.

Clarence Kummer, who rode Coventry, said he felt the colt pop under him at the eighth, but he ran gamely to the end.

Alex Gordon, trainer of Swope, said that his colt came out of the race without mishap, and that he would be shipped to Churchill Downs. According to the present intention, Single Foot, Prince of Bourbon and By Hisself will occupy the same car. The decision to send Single Foot West was something of a surprise.

DETROIT SCORES IN NINTH TO BEAT BOSTON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., May 9.—Detroit carried off today's game with Boston, 5 to 4, after being given a scare in the ninth when the Red Sox tied the score at four-all. Leonard held Boston scoreless until the eighth, when a brace of singles and an infield out accounted for a run.

In the ninth Rigney tried to work too fast on a double play and threw into the dugout, giving Heving life at second. Picinich batted for Francis and doubled, scoring Heving. Flagstead walked and Wamby doubled, scoring the runners to knot the count.

Detroit's winning run came when Blue was hit by a pitched ball, took third on O'Rourke's single and Vache's boot and home after Hellmann flied deep to Flagstead.

Hugh McQuillan and Wayland Dean Clouted by Rickeymen—Southworth and Gonzales Make Star Plays in Fine Fielding Exhibition.

Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Young Flint Rhem of Clemson College, South Carolina, came out of the West today to plaster the first coat of whitewash on the Giants in the 1925 season, and he did a neat and workmanlike job of it. Shooting a bewildering curve and a blazing fast ball over the plate he held the champions to eight scattered hits and struck out 10 batters, some of the whiffers being New York's most noted sluggers.

On the other hand, the clouters of the Cardinals made short work of Hugh McQuillan and Wayland Dean, who succeeded him, and carried off the victory by a score of 8 to 0.

It was a one-sided affair, but an interesting one for the crowd of 25,000 to cheer over. Mainly they were cheering Rhem, for although there were fielding stunts galore, the Giants couldn't get going in the hitting line, and toward the close of the battle the spectators were evenly divided between those who wished to see the youngster gain a shutout and those die-hards who rooted for a rally like those of the last two games, when the Giants overcame the Phils and Cardinals with great rallies in the last inning.

The Big Ninth Inning.

That made the ninth quite an occasion. Everything was at fever heat. When Jackson started the inning with a clear single, just as he had the day before, a great roar went up. Hack Wilson batted for Snyder, and when he drew a base on balls, there was more noise. Branch Rickey had a couple of pitchers warming up hurriedly in the bull pen.

They weren't needed. Rhem struck out Bentley, who batted for the third Giant pitcher, Walter Huntzinger. Then he passed Southworth, who had spilled the Cardinals on Friday with a home run. That filled the bases, but though there was only one out, Frisch, the Giant captain, couldn't keep the record of the Giants for not having been blanked clear. He struck out, and Pep Young, who followed, struck out, too. Rhem swept a dazzling assortment of "stuff" before their eyes.

Giants Use Three Hurlers.

The Giants were forced to call on the pitching reserves early in the proceedings, for the Cardinals were hitting hard. Hugh McQuillan, off to a good start, came a cropper in the third, when the Westerners bunched five solid hits, including a home run by Hafey, for four runs, and didn't improve any with age.

Dean wasn't of much account as a helper and retired for a pinch hitter. The only New York pitcher to show any real effectiveness was Huntzinger, and he came on the scene far too late, after the horse had been stolen and the stable door locked.

The Giant hitters couldn't get the jump on Rhem. Whenever they threatened he bore down hard. He struck out Southworth once, Frisch once, Young and Kelly, batsmen of renown, twice each, and gave the same dose to two pinch hitters, Bentley and Terry. Only two New Yorkers reached third base.

WEST WILL HAVE STRONG FIELD IN THE KENTUCKY DERB

Backbone, Second in Preakness, Appears To Be East's Best Bet

Western Contenders Include Quatrain, the Favorite, Captain Hal, Lee O. Cotner, King Nadi and Kentucky Cardinal.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The annual East-West duel for the $50,000 Kentucky Derby and the gold trophy which goes with it as usual finds the West top-heavy with probable starters. At this writing the chance that the victory in the outstanding 3-year-old race of the year will go to a Kentucky trained horse is odds-on.

Trials in races to the present time show that the West has a splendid string of thoroughbreds to rely upon, whereas the East's marvels one by one have fallen down heavily.

The West again supplies the favorite in Quatrain, like Black Gold a product of winter racing, and a Louisiana Derby winner. Local bookmakers today were quoting Quatrain at 4 to 1 against, which is about the price laid against Morvich three years ago.

Besides Quatrain there are the redoubtable Western contenders, Captain Hal, Lee O. Cotner, King Nadi, Kentucky Cardinal and five or six others of merit.

Stars Eliminated by Accidents.

As was the case last year, accidents and death have knocked out many prominent Eastern candidates, including Sunny Man, Master Charlie, Young Martin, Stimulus, Hedgefence and Sumpter, all highly regarded and heavily played. There is a remote chance that Hedgefence and Chantey may represent Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable, but it is considered unlikely she will ship either, at this writing.

As Coventry, winner of the Preakness, is not eligible for the Derby, the East's best bet at this time appears to be the Whitney horse, Backbone, second in the Preakness. Backbone finished second, after apparently having been run into the ground by making pace for Chantey. He should run a better race in the Derby; but it may be that the route is too much for him.

If the Preakness was truly run Alamdel is about the only remaining runner in that stake with a chance to win the Derby. Swope ran last; Prince of Bourbon, heavily played by E. F. Simms' followers, ran disappointingly; Singlefoot caused great disappointment. Voltaic didn't class.

30 "Possible" Starters.

The field today has narrowed to about 30 possibilities, which are shown elsewhere. It is remotely possible that some of the remaining 138 nominations may develop at the eleventh hour, but the chances are strong that the field will be selected from those mentioned above.

Of these many are doubtful and some extremely so. A perspective of the field this far in advance indicates that the actual number of horses with real Derby chances are fewer than 12, but that sentimental reasons and the hope of getting a two-three-four share of the big pot will send to the post about eight more. A field of two score is likely.

The Kentucky Derby of last year saw 21 horses go to the post, and the favorite, the New Orleans trained candidate, Black Gold, came through with a truly fine victory. The form was approximately subserved. Large fields are supposed to jeopardize the form of races and to result in the placing of undeserving horses.

Form Prevailed Last Year.

Last year the horses to finish one-two-three-four, namely, Black Gold, Chilhowee, Bracadale (not Beau Butler), and Altawood, all proved themselves top-notch 2-year-olds during the season subsequent to the Derby, confirming the Derby "form."

There is therefore no reason to shoot at long shots this year, in the hope that the race will see form destroyed by accidents. Black Gold was off badly, had to weave his way through the field and won because he was the best horse that day.

Quatrain may do the same. If Quatrain wins it will be another argument in favor of developing winter candidates by New Orleans preparation in races.

Quatrain is shouldering a heavy burden of public money. But his owner, Frederick Johnson, says he is equal to it. "The horse that beats Quatrain will win first prize," he declares.

Picking the winner this far in the advance is puzzling the experts because of the unknown form of many candidates. Because Quatrain has done everything asked of him—has won in the mud and on the dry, has won short and long races and has picked up his weight and won—he is the only horse the public can logically support.

Even Captain Hal, Kentucky Cardinal and Lee O. Cotner all have large question marks about their chances; but Quatrain has been tried in every way and found to be THERE.

That's why he is the public choice and why he probably will remain so at post time.

Probable Derby Field and Odds

FOLLOWING are the horses most likely to start in next Saturday's $50,000 Kentucky Derby, and the prices quoted in St. Louis. The prices are made by Thomas Kearney and represent "pay or play" conditions—that is, backers of horses that do not start, lose.

Thym Holds Oklahoma Nine To 4 Hits but Pikers Lose, 5-4

Third Baseman Quinn's Errors Prove Costly—Levy Gets Two Hits, Including a Triple—Hunter Fans Six Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., May 9.—Thym held the Sooners to four hits while Washington touched Hunter for seven safeties, but Oklahoma took advantage of Third-baseman Quinn's three errors and won the second of a two-game series, 5 to 4, here this afternoon.

The Sooners took the lead in the first inning, scoring two runs without a hit, and were never headed.

No Piker reached first until the fourth inning when Cheatham walked. Roberts' liner to deep right was speared by Honea, who doubled Cheatham at first.

Oklahoma added two more in the fourth when West was safe on Quinn's error, took second on Cook's sacrifice and scored on Hunter's triple to left. Hunter counted when Quinn fumbled Archer's roller.

Washington marked up two in the fifth when Levy's triple to right scored Gregg, who had singled. Stanford fanned and Levy Scored on Thrasher's double to left.

The Sooners came back in their half of the fifth and registered once more.

Costly Errors.

Spic and Span Is Easy Winner in Clark Handicap

Son of John Only Derby Eligible to Finish in Money, at Louisville.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 9.—The 14-day spring meeting at the historic Churchill Downs course opened under unfavorable weather and track conditions today, but a record-breaking crowd was on hand.

The Clark Handicap, a Churchill Downs fixture, almost as old as the Kentucky Derby, was the feature of the opening card. The race was over the route of a mile and a sixteenth and brought ou a number of Derby candidates, including Captain Hal, Lee O. Cotner, Abstract, Supremus and Son of John.

Spic and Span, a field horse and an outsider in the betting, was returned the winner. Son of John, the biz "dark horse" for the Derby from Lexington, Ky., finished second, while Little Celt got the show end of the purse. The time for the distance was 1:47 2-5. The purse was worth $12,000 net to the winner. Captain Hal, Hopeless, Leopardess, Abstract, Stanwix, Lee O Cotner, Supremus and Sweetheart finished among the also rans. Spic and Span, the winner, paid $11.50 for each winning $2 ticket in the pari mutuel machines.

Lee O. Cotner Takes Lead.

The fleet Lee O. Cotner, always a quick breaker, especially when in a running mood, was the first to get away from the webbing and he held the lead for the first half mile. At this point Spic and Span overtook the Derby colt and continued on the front end, winning the race by two full lengths.

Son of John finished full of run and easily defeated Little Celt for the place by three lengths.

Reputation, the William Bros.' derby colt, found the going just to his liking in the Seelbach Hotel handicap, an allowance affair at six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upwards. The Williams colt ran as if much the best, defeating a field of crack sprinters. Buster finished close to the winner while Fabian landed in third place. Energy, Bourbon Boy, The Runt and Lord Granite were the other starters.

Quatrain, one of the favorites in the Kentucky Derby, worked the full Derby route of one and one-quarter miles after the first race. With muddy underfooting Quatrain covered the distance in 2:11 2-5. The mile was covered in 1:42 2-5.

MISS MEISE CAPTURES MAPLE HEIGHTS FEATURE

By the Associated Press.

MAPLE HEIGHTS TRACK, Cleveland, O., May 9.—Miss Meise, under a masterful ride by Jockey K. Noe, won the Gen. Scott Memorial Handicap, feature of the opening day's card here today. The mare, coupled with High Water as the Heston-Crain entry, ruled the favorite in the betting.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925. ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH 3S

SISLER IS "BACK;" BATS .419 FOR FIRST 24 GAMES

Eyes Again Normal, He Hits Safely in 24 Contests in a Row

Brownie Manager Attributes His Return to 1922 Form to Refusal to Worry — Team Confident He's as Good as Ever.

By J. Roy Stockton,

When George Sisler said last winter that he expected to be as good as ever in 1925, that he was certain he would bat better than the .305 of last season, and that his eyes were about 100 per cent normal, baseball fans throughout the land hoped that he was right, but they were dubious.

It was difficult to forget the Sisler of 1924, who faced the pitchers with his head cocked to one side and who punched feebly at pitches, seldom connecting solidly with the ball. He did scrape together a batting average of .305—and a batting average of .300 is nothing to be sniffed at—but the Sisler of 1924 was not impressive, especially in contrast with the brilliant batsman of 1922, who finished with an average of .419 and who set a new record for consecutive hitting by getting safeties in 41 games in a row.

Even after Sisler had been at training camp for a month and still expressed confidence in his ability to beat back to the ranks of great stars, there was much skepticism. Eastern baseball writers shook their heads dolefully after seeing the Brownie manager in camp. They could not forget the Sisler of 1922, and they shed a tear as they flashed the message to their offices that Sisler was still suffering from faulty vision and that he never would be a great star again.

No Dutch Shoemaker's Dream.

But that was no Dutch shoemaker's dream that Sisler had. He has come back. He is having a great year and he does appear to be again one of the greatest ballplayers in the national game.

In the first 24 games of the present season Sisler hit for a batting average of .419. That is 67 percentage points better than his batting average for the first 24 games last year and it is 15 points better than his record for the first 24 games of 1922, his greatest season. In 1922 Sisler in the first 24 games went to bat 99 times and made 40 hits for an average of .404. Last year in the first 24 games he batted 105 times and made 37 hits, or at a .352 clip. This year, in 24 games, the Brownie manager went to the plate 103 times and he hit safely 44 times. In the first 24 games in 1922 he went hitless in five contests, whereas last year the pitchers held him hitless in five of the 24. This season Sisler hit safely in each of the 24 games.

"Over the Garden Wall."

Even the batting figures, which are very impressive, do not tell fully the story of Sisler's comeback. Last year he was always "in the hole" to pitchers. His swing was not convincing. It had no snap to it. And when he connected with the ball the result was disappointing. There were droopy pop flies and weak grounders. Only at rare intervals did he warm the outfield fences.

When the team returned from its recent road campaign, Sisler posed for some batting pictures. The task was taking batting practice and George was showing his prowess with the bat. To give the photographer a better chance to do his stuff, Sisler took an unusually long turn at bat and his demonstration was impressive. He hit the ball a dozen times. Four times the ball sailed into the bleachers, once into the seats in deep right center. Three times the ball hit the screen on the right field fence and the other drives were convincing smashes on the line to the outfield.

Decided Not to Worry.

"How do you account for your remarkable come-back?" Sisler was asked.

"I don't try to account for it," he replied. "During the summer of 1923 I decided that medicine and surgery were not doing me any good. Since then I have let nature take care of itself. I was confident that everything would come out all right. I had confidence in myself. I made up my mind I would not do any more worrying. I thought only of pleasant things. I took excellent care of myself and believed in my ability to come back.

"In the winter of 1923-24 I went to California with Jimmy Austin, spent as much time in the open as possible, got all the exercise I could. And all the time I believed that I would recover my batting eye. It improved steadily, and I thought I did fairly well in 1924, considering the handicaps.

"But last winter I knew I would be all right again. I went hunting a great deal and played squash tennis at the University Club. I got up to Class B in the club tournament and had a lot of fun. You have to have sharp eyes to play squash tennis and I felt my eyes were improving steadily.

"I feel great now. I don't have to tell you how happy it makes me to be able to go out there on the field with my old confidence."

And Everybody's Happy.

And George was happy, and showed it. There was the old spring in his step as he nustled to the plate for his turn at bat. His swing was apparently without great effort. But the ball sailed far into the bleachers. Other batters followed. They swung with all their might, but the ball went only to short outfield.

"What's the secret of the ease with which you drive the ball?" Sisler was asked.

"It's the timing," George explained. "Your step, your swing and your body must all be in time. You must meet the ball at just the right point in your swing. The rear foot, the left foot in my case, is an important thing to watch. It should be anchored when you swing; that is, it should not leave the ground. If it does, power is lost. Timing is the secret. That's what enables a little man like Gene Robertson to drive the ball into the right-field bleachers without apparent effort, whereas a man like Vangilder, who is a much more powerful man, may swing with apparently many times as much force and get only a fly to an outfielder.

"Faulty timing causes slumps. A batter may miss hitting for a few days. He becomes over eager. He steps too soon. His muscles are taut. He swings too soon, or too hard, or he lunges at the pitchers. fights the ball trying to kill it. And his eagerness may prolong his slump. Some day he goes out there relaxed, times his swing right and he breaks his slump."

Team Confident of Comeback.

Members of the Browns are sure that Sisler will continue his great batting this season.

"He's back to stay," said Kenny Williams. "He's not getting many fluke hits. He beat out two grounders on the last trip, and all his other hits were smashes, line drives to all fields and to all fences. He's got his old punch back, and pitchers will have plenty of trouble trying to throw 'em past George this year."

"And watch him in the field," said another Brownie. "He's trying plays he didn't think of trying last year. He's turning sacrifice bunts into forceouts, and the other day he came within an inch of catching a pop foul that fell a few feet from home plate. He's on his toes. He's the old George Sisler."

Mackmen Defeat Indians, 6-5, and Retain Lead in American League

Al Simmons Gets 3 Hits, One Home Run, and Makes Several Sensational Catches to Save Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 9.—The Philadelphia Athletics made it two straight from Cleveland, winning today's game 6 to 5 and more firmly entrenched themselves in first place. The all-around playing of Al Simmons was the big factor in the Athletics' victory. Simmons made three hits, one a home run, and several sensational catches. He saved the game in the seventh when he ran deep for Hendrick's fly and again in the ninth when he went to the center-field wall for Burns' potential triple.

The Indian pitching was poor, four men working for the locals.

HARRIS' HOMER WINS FOR BRAVES IN 11TH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, May 9. — Dave Harris' home run in the eleventh inning ended a great pitching duel between Wilbur Cooper and Jess Barnes and the Braves won their second straight game over the Cubs by a score of 2 to 1.

Harris also scored the Braves' first run when he tripled in the sixth with one down and scored on a single by Burrus.

The Cubs scored their run in the third frame when McAuley and Statz singled, Heathcote walked and Adams sacrificed, scoring Cooper, who had forced McAuley.

Barnes held the Cubs to six hits, while the Braves made only seven hits off Cooper.

CORUM TO DRIVE IN 500 MILE AUTO RACE

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 9.—L. L. Corum of Indianapolis who, with the late Joe Boyer of Detroit, drove the winning car in the 1924 500-mile automobile race here, will team with Ralph de Palma in the event this May 30, it was announced today.

De Palma recently entered two cars, one of which he will drive himself. Corum has done little racing since last May.

Nurmi Is Vindicated, Wins Race

Finnish Athlete and His Manager, Hugo Quist, Part Company, Following A. A. U. Announcement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 9. — Paavo Nurmi, remarkable athlete from Finland, stands exonerated of all charges of violating the A. A. U. rules governing expense allowances during his running in this country, Hugo Quist, manager of Nurmi's American tour, and Willie Ritola, Finnish distance man, also have been cleared.

A committee of the Amateur Athletic Union today, in clearing the men, issued a statement which went as far as to censure Kenneth L. Wilson, Athletic Director of Drake University, who had brought charges that excessive expense money was demanded for their appearance in the Drake relays at Des Moines two weeks ago.

Wilson, the statement said, "should be censured for engaging a representative to obtain Nurmi's entry and for making an offer to Nurmi, which is in violation of all amateur rules."

Wilson's Offer of Money.

A two-day hearing conducted by the committee, of which the National Secretary, Frederick W. Rubien, was the head, developed the fact that Wilson had been in New York in December and had arranged with a New York newspaper man to represent him in the East. A letter to this representative written by Wilson was produced, which contained the following paragraph:

"We could pay him his expenses back to Finland or give him the money, either one. Naturally, I want to protect his amateur standing and will trust you to handle this in a diplomatic fashion and let me know how things progress, so we can advertise this feature as soon as possible."

The statement related that Nurmi had been questioned at some length and had proved that he knew nothing of arrangements for his participation in the Drake games.

Today's hearing included the suspension of Nurmi by the Middle Atlantic Association last night on a charge of having received excessive expenses for his participation in the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy games last February. These expenses have been checked and approved by the National body, it was asserted.

"The committee feels satisfied," the statement says in conclusion, "that the evidence presented does not in any way involve Nurmi or Ritola, and that they have neither directly nor indirectly received financial benefits through their competition in this country. The Amateur Athletic Union has made a thorough investigation throughout the entire country and has yet to receive any definite information of any violation of amateur rules by either of the athletes mentioned."

Nurmi Is Victor In Special Race

Time for Mile and Half Is Ten Seconds Slower Than Record.

By the Associated Press.

FITCHBURG, Mass., May 9.—Paavo Nurmi, Finnish distance runner, raced to an easy victory over a handicap field in a special mile and a half event at the Reipas Athletic Club meet here today. His time was 6 minutes 52½ seconds 10 seconds slower than the record he established at Los Angeles, Cal., on April 29.

Nurmi and Manager Split.

By the Associated Press.

FITCHBURG, Mass., May 9.—Paavo Nurmi and his manager Hugo Quist have parted, the Finnish middle distance runner said today, prior to a race at the Reipas Athletic Club.

Asked whether he and Quist had parted as friends, Nurmi evaded a direct answer, but said his relations with his manager had not been altogether pleasant in the last two weeks.

Nurmi said he would run two more races in America, one in Worcester, Mass., next Monday, and another at Harvard University. Arrangements for the latter have not been completed. In two weeks he will leave for Finland, he said.

Asked concerning his plans for the future, Nurmi said they were indefinite, but declared he had rejected many offers in America from motion picture companies, vaudeville circuits and similar concerns. He declared despite the annoyance that recent developments had given him, he had greatly enjoyed his stay in America.

HARVARD CREW WINS OVER PENNSYLVANIA

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 9.—Harvard's varsity crew inaugurated its 1925 season this evening by leading Pennsylvanias' first eight by a margin of more than two lengths over the mile and three-quarters course on the Charles River.

Pennsylvania carried off honors in the two other races, the junior varsity and freshman events.

U. S. G. A. Dubs One.

IF the United States Golf Association had carefully pondered and searched for a means to discourage the young golfers of the country, it could not have found a better way to accomplish that end than the recent arbitrary decision to eliminate all but 16 players in the qualifying round of the National Amateur Tournament.

Walls of protest have gone up in all sections of the country and it is freely predicted that the new plan will meet with so much opposition that a change is likely even before the 1925 championship reaches match play rounds.

Golf has grown so rapidly and new stars have appeared in such large numbers that the former field of 32 was considered all too small. A man had to be on his game to make the grade in the qualifying round with 32 places to fill. One bad hole could put out a potential champion so strong has the field become. It even has been suggested that 64 players be permitted to qualify for match play. The arguments for such a plan are good. The championship is decided on match play. That is the basis on which titles are won. Why, then, eliminate a man from a chance at the title because of one bad hole?

What Records Show.

IF the plan for only 16 survivors had been in effect in the past the following stars would have fallen by the wayside before match play started:

1924—Bob Gardner, Major Hezlet, W. J. Thompson, Hamilton Gardner.

1923—Jesse Guilford, Jimmy Manion, Eddie Held.

1922—Willie Hunter, Reggie Lewis, Tommy Armour, Frank Godchaux, George Rowan, Frank Dyer and Colin Aylmer.

1921—Al Seckel, Jess Sweetser, John Anderson, Eddie Held, Jim Manion.

1920—Jess Sweetser, Al Seckel, Davison Herron, J. Wood Platt, Reggie Lewis.

1919—Francis Ouimet, Max Marston, Rudy Knepper and Bill Fownes.

1916—Bobby Jones, Gardiner White, Ned Sawyer, D. C. Corkran.

Included in the list of men who would have had no chance at match play are many former champions. In the 1913 tourney Jerry Travers would have failed to qualify. Yet despite his poor medal score, which barely got him into the 32, he won the championship.

Even with 32 survivors the young player must have courage to journey to a national amateur tournament. And with only 16 places to fill the young player, a future champion perhaps, will not even consider the expense of a trip to the title course.

St. Louis to Send Team.

JIMMY MANION, Lawson Watts and Eddie Held probably will represent St. Louis in the 1925 national tourney, which will be held at Oakmont, Pittsburg, in September. Unless the 16-survivor limit discourages them, other St. Louis players are likely to compete. Bill Medart and Elliot Whitbread need tournament experience, but the new plan may cause them to give up plans to go to Pittsburg.

Fighting to the End.

JIM Manion and Lawson Watts were defeated by Tom White and Frank Dyer of Memphis in a 72-hole match at the St. Louis Country Club last week. The St. Louisans were two down after 18 holes, still two down after 36. Five down with nine holes to play Manion and Watts came within one hole of squaring the match. A return engagement will be played in Memphis. There also will be an intercity team match with five St. Louisans playing the best quintet of golfers that Memphis can muster.

Manion Leaves Midland.

RIVERVIEW Country Club will be represented in the championship class in all tournaments in the district in the future. Jim Manion, Transmississippi title holder, has given up his membership in Midland Valley and joined Riverview. It should stimulate golf at the North side club, though there's nobody there who can give Manion a run for his money.

Coveleskie Victor Over Chicago Sox

Veteran Holds Collins' Men to Five Hits and World Champions Score Victory, 4 to 1.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 9.—Washington evened the count today by beating the White Sox 4 to 1 in the second game of the series. Coveleskie was in great form, holding Collins' crew to five hits while the champions collected nine off Robertson and another off Mack, who pitched the ninth inning. Homers were made off Robertson by Bluege, who hit into the left-field bleachers and Goslin, whose wallop rode into the right bleachers. A remarkable diving one-hand catch by Falk robbed Stanley Harris of a double.

PIRATES SCORE 4 IN 8TH TO BEAT PHILS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—A Pittsburg rally in the eighth inning when four runs were scored enabled the Pirates to beat out the Phils today by 6 to 5. Up to this inning Clarence Mitchell had held the Pirates to two runs and five hits, but he weakened in the eighth and before Betts could be rushed in, the Pirates had tied the score on four hits, a hit batsman and Sand's error. Then Wright greeted Betts with a double which brought in Moore with the winning run.

The Phils batted Johnny Morrison hard at times, but Meadows checked them in the eighth and ninth innings. The hitting of Burns and Wright featured. The attendance was 10,000.

HIGH SCHOOL PITCHER STRIKES OUT 72 MEN IN WORKING 44 INN

ZBYSZKO, OLDEST CHAMPION, GOOD FOR 10 MORE YEARS

Mat Veteran Admits He's At Least 45

Conqueror of Big Munn, Matched With Steinke, Tells of Early Career and Future Expectations.

Wrestling Champion First Called "Zbyshko" By Polish Schoolboys

"SHADES of Zbyshko! What strength!"

The schoolboys in the little town of Pilsno, Poland, gathered around a strapping young fellow who entertained them with feats of weight lifting.

"But they say Zbyshko had such power in his hands that he squeezed sap from a twig with his fingers."

"Yes, and drew a crossbow in a twinkling of the eye without the aid of a crank."

"Surely, he could not have been more powerful than our Stanislaus."

"We shall call him Zbyshko."

Stanislaus Cyganiewicz, the object of admiration of the school boys, thus came to bear as a nickname the title of one of the mythological heroes of Poland. To rural Poland, the name Zbyshko means great strength, courage and high ideals.

The original Zbyshko was the hero of Henryk Glenkiewicz's "Knights of the Cross."

Not only did the nickname stick to the husky young man but today he is known throughout the wrestling world as Stanislaus Zbyszko and his passports and other official papers so designate him. The spelling of the name has been slightly altered by Americans.

By Dent McSkimming.

STANISLAUS CYGANIEWICZ was born in a little village called Jodlowa, in Poland, on April 1, 1880. The family moved to Pilsno, a neighboring town, when Stanislaus was two years old. The head of the family obtained the post of tax collector in the Pilsno city government and accumulated sufficient means to send Stanislaus to school.

When it came time for high school, Father Cyganiewicz, himself endowed with an unusually fine physique, sent his husky young son to Krakow, a city of about 250,000 souls. Later, Stanislaus, who had in the meantime been dubbed by his schoolmates "Zbyszko," pursued his studies at the University of Vienna.

It was the ambition of Stanislaus to become a physician, but, because of the limited means of his family and the excessive cost of trailing for medicine in European schools, he decided to study law instead.

Athlete of Great Strength.

"I knew that it would not cost me a great deal to carry law books around," said Zibby in hearking back to the days of his youth. "Only the rich could afford to study medicine. So I turned to law instead and at the University of Vienna in the next four years I passed all examinations, including two regents' examinations. However, I was growing to be a tremendous fellow in size and strength and almost without any great effort on my part. I was enjoying success as a gymnast and wrestler.

"In my high school days at Krakow I knew almost nothing of wrestling. I was a gymnast, a swimmer, a weight lifter and runner. It was not until I entered the university that I became interested in wrestling. I weighed about 190 pounds when I was 17 years old and I was soon able to defeat all the other fellows in school who were wrestling.

His Talent Noticed.

"Then, one day, the most famous professional wrestler in all Europe watched me in action. He took me after the match and said: 'I believe you have ability. I think I can make a great wrestler of you.' He was Pytlasinski, now physical director of the city police in Warsaw. In the next few years, under his direction, I learned a great deal about the wrestling game and became a professional. I did not finish my study of law because wrestling became more attractive and, besides, enabled me to make money.

"The first really big bout in which I participated and one which I shall never forget was with the giant Antonich, the Serbian champion, at Paris in 1902. I was then 23 years old. Antonich was 7 feet 2 inches tall and massively built. In all my experience in the game, I have never met a bigger opponent.

"We struggled for one hour and 27 minutes before I pinned his shoulders to the mat. We were wrestling at the Graeco-Roman style and the bout was probably the roughest that I have ever engaged in. These cauliflower ears I got from Antonich. He swung his arms and smashed my ears with his wrists.

"Two other giants I have met. One is Hans Steinke, the German who is here in America, and the other Wayne Munn, from whom I won the championship. Steinke is 6 feet 8 inches tall and weighs 280 pounds. Munn is 6 feet 9 and weighs about 280 pounds.

"Strength, however, is valuable to a wrestler only provided he knows how to use it. Science I consider 60 per cent of the battle and strength 40 per cent. I believe wrestling is as scientific as chess."

"Whom do you consider the greatest wrestler in America?" Zibby was asked.

"That is a difficult question to answer. We have about two dozen men in this country today who are very nearly equal in ability. There is no outstanding leader as there was when I first came to this country in 1910. Then, Frank Gotch was alone in his class, as much so as is Jack Dempsey in the heavyweight boxing world today. There were not more than seven men in America approaching Gotch in ability in that day.

"Still, if Gotch at his best stepped into the game today he would not be an outstanding star. Joe Stecher, I believe, could have beaten Gotch easily.

Praise for Brother Wladek.

"One of the best wrestlers in the world, I believe, is my brother, Wladek. I had him under my care at one time and he was developing wonderfully but he became unmanageable and broke away from me. Now I have him again. We will work together this summer at our camp at Old Orchard, Me., and I hope to put him in such shape that he will be able to beat any wrestler in the world. Wladek is 14 years younger than I."

Zibby would not admit that he planned to groom his brother as his successor to the championship.

"If I escape accidents, I will be actively engaged in wrestling for 10 more years," he said.

"I do not find that I have slowed up in recent years," he answered to a query. "On the other hand, my experience in the game has given me such confidence that when I enter the ring now I feel that I am the boss."

Remarkable Physique.

Zbyszko's marvelous physical machinery has astonished physicians. His blood pressure and heart action are said to approximate those of a 26-year-old man, although he admits 45 summers. He attributes this condition to his clean living.

"Young men in America have glorious opportunities for physical development and exercise," said Zibby. "In Krakow, where I spent my youth, there was only one gymnasium for a city of 250,000 persons. Think of that! But, I would advise young men who wish to remain vigorous as they grow older to cut down on the amount of meat they eat. In training I subsist mostly on fruits and vegetables.

"Don't drink intoxicants and don't smoke.

"When I returned to Poland recently I found that athletics had made little progress as far as the general public is concerned. Drinking whisky is still the most popular pastime there.

"Regular sleep and lots of fresh air keep a man feeling fit.

"In training, all muscles should be fully developed. A professional athlete should study anatomy in order that he may understand how to fully develop his body and how to take good care of himself."

Plans to Write a Book.

"How much money have you made out of wrestling?" Zibby was asked.

"About 10 per cent of what folks give me credit for having," he answered.

"Some day I will write a book setting forth my system of training and perhaps it will help people to keep well even when old and then perhaps I will have done as much good as if I had been able to follow my first ambition, that of becoming a doctor."

Packs Fails to Sign Zbyszko and Stecher For Mat Match Here

CHICAGO, May 9.

WRESTLING promoters from various cities failed to lure Stanislaus Zbyszko, mat champion, into a match for the title with Joe Stecher, here today. Zbyszko, after an all-day series of conferences, left for Springfield, Mass., still uncommitted to any plan.

Tom Packs, St. Louis promoter, declared his intention of following the "old man" until he gets a match for either Londos or Stecher.

Japanese Eager for Help in Track Work, Murchison Says

American Sprinter Finds Orientals Have Never-Say-Die Spirit — Their Best Prospects Are in Distance Running.

THIS is one of a series of articles written for the Post-Dispatch by Loren Murchison, world's indoor sprint champion, who, with Charley Paddock, is on a world tour.

By Loren Murchison,
World's Indoor Sprint Champion.

TOKIO, Japan, May 9.—From Tokio to Osaka the characteristics of Japanese track and field athletes remain the same. Everywhere I have found them eager to learn; quick to respond to suggestions and possessed of a fighting heart.

This latter characteristic is perhaps the most valuable for their future success. They never give up. It does not matter if they happen to the outclassed. They do not seem to know it and keep striving on until the end. In this they differ from many European athletes, who in a similar position give up.

However, practically all Japanese athletes are handicapped in track and field work by their physical proportions. In sprinting they do not have long enough legs and in weight throwing they do not possess enough avoirdupois. This is a difficult handicap to overcome and can only be offset by an extreme amount of scientific ability and splendid conditioning. The former the athletes already possess in a large degree, but the latter they have not yet mastered.

Distance Racing Prospects.

The field in which the Japanese athletes of the future should do their best work, it seems to me, is in distance running. Their climate is cold enough to produce long-distance stars, and stamina and endurance is already a characteristic of the race, and can be still more developed.

For example, some of the most enduring specimens of humanity in the world today are the "kuriksha carriers. These men not only are capable of trotting over the hard pavements day after day, pulling more than their own weight, but they are also able to withstand the various temperatures of a changing climate, and after growing hot, are able to sit still and cool off and then start working again, seemingly without any ill effects. Right here, in this class, are doubtless many prospective Nurmis and Ritolas, who prove beyond question that the young Japanese might easily be trained into a race of marvelous distance runners, and this should be their purpose in the future.

Weather Bad for Sprinters.

The weather in Japan does not seem very well adapted to sprint running in the spring. We understand that the heat of the summer is also too great for athletic competition.

Both Paddock and the writer have experienced a certain degree of trouble with our leg muscles and found it necessary to warm up a very great deal before attempting to run a race. And the Japanese sprinters, plus their other handicaps, are continually suffering from muscle troubles. But even so, the ordinary sprinter here will compare favorably with the ordinary sprinter of America. The trouble so far has been that Japan has not yet produced any extraordinary runners.

Missouri Track Team Defeats Aggies, 81 to 36

Balzer Sets New Valley Conference Standard in Two-Mile Run.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 9.—The University of Missouri team defeated the Kansas Aggies 81 points to 36, in a dual track and field meet here this afternoon. One Missouri Valley conference record was shattered, that coming in the two-mile run, in which Balzer of the Aggies was timed in 9 minutes 42 1-5 seconds.

Doss Richerson, Tiger star, was the winner in both the shot put and discus, while Bond captured the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

IOWA STATE DEFEATS MISSOURI TEAM, 10-1

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 9.—The Iowa State College baseball team defeated the University of Missouri nine here this afternoon, 10 to 1. Barray, hurling for the visitors, allowed but four hits, which he kept well scattered. Waters, on the mound for Missouri, started well but his wildness in the fourth gave the Cyclones an opportunity to get ahead, and they piled up the score when they developed ability to pound his offerings in the late innings.

PLESTINA TO MEET PAUL MARTENSEN

Marin Plestina, heavyweight wrestler, will meet Paul Martensen tomorrow night at the Liberty Music Hall in the regular Monday mat attraction.

In a meeting a few years back, Plestina won when he broke Martensen's arm. Martensen hopes to get revenge tomorrow night, when the pair will wrestle to a finish.

George Baptiste will referee.

Kinsey Wins for Illinois in Dual Meet With Iowa

St. Louis Hurdler Tops the Tall Timbers at 120 Yards in 15½ Seconds.

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 9.—Illinois athletes set new records at the dual games with Iowa University here, this afternoon. Makeever of Illinois clipped four seconds off the old mark of 4:29 in the mile run. Dauber of Illinois put the shot ¾ inch further than his own previous mark.

Dan Kinsey of St. Louis won the high-hurdle event for Illinois in 15½ seconds. Kinsey and Bud Evans, famous dash man, scored 23 points for the Illini.

Summary:

100-YARD DASH—Evans, Illinois; Rohrer, Iowa; Farnell, Illinois. Time—10 1-10.

MILE RUN—Makeever, Illinois; Rue, Illinois; Warner, Illinois. Time, 4:25, new university record. Old record 4:29.

ROBERTSON'S HOME RUN GIVES BROWNS 1 TO 1 TIE WITH YANKEES up with men on bases in the third, fifth and seventh innings and every time he went out on a pop fly.

The start of the game was delayed 50 minutes while the umpires waited for rain to cease. Even when they finally called play ball, rain was still falling.

Ernie Wingard and Bob Shawkey probably will be the opposing pitchers today in the third game of the series.

Wanninger, successor to Everett Scott at shortstop for the Yankees, looks like a finished fielder but he does not look like a heavy hitter. He is about the size of Andy High of Brooklyn or Joe Sewell of the Indians.

Earl Combs is an awkward looking fellow as he lumbers after fly balls in left field, but somehow he gets under them. When Ruth returns to the lineup Combs will probably be shifted to center field, shoving Witt out of the game.

Nebraska Wrestler Signed Gus Tiefenthaler for May 21.

Gus Tiefenthaler plans to introduce five grapplers on his Monday wrestling card, who have never before appeared on a local mat.

While Tiefentnaler has not completed arrangements for his program, with the exception of the main bout, between John Pesek, Nebraska and John Evko, the Slav, he does not plan to bring any old favorites back.

Evko has shown here on several occasions, notably against Wayne Zbyszko, at the Coliseum.

Pesek, the "tiger of the mat," as he has been called, has not previously been brought to St. Louis. Some mat critics rate the Yankan on a par with the past champions but his challenges are always ignored.

Max Bauman, who was in St. Louis some weeks ago trying to arrange for a match for Pesek, says he has been endeavoring to get a man into the ring with Londos or Stecher for the past three years.

He says he has posted his money in several cities without result. During his visit to St. Louis Bauman deposited a certified check with Tom Clarence Westerman, but his hand was not called.

Tiefenthaler plans to feature Pesek. If he disposes of Evko the likely some other prominent mat weight of note will be sent against the Nebraskan.

FOUR RECORDS BROKEN BY C. M. A. A. ATHLETES IN ANNUAL CARNIVAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo., May 9.—Despite rainy weather and overcast skies four records in the Central Missouri Athletic Association were broken at the annual track meet here this afternoon. The records broken were the shot put by Wright, Fulton, distance 43 feet 3¾ inches; javelin by Gilbert, Columbia, distance 124 feet 9½ inches, and shot by Wright, Fulton, 109 feet 2 inches, and half mile relay, Moberly, 1 minute 37.2 seconds.

The Moberly squad won the meet with 49 1-2 points, Columbia second with 21, Jefferson City third with 20. Other scores were: Fulton 19 1-2, McMillan 14 1-2. Moberly won the relay cup and high school cup.

36 MUNICIPAL BASEBALL GAMES SCHEDULED TODAY

14 Leagues To Play for Park Fans

Lischko Indians and the Carbrows, Tied for Lead in the City League, Will Meet at Fairgrounds Park.

All Municipal Games, Yesterday, Postponed Because of Rain

ALL games scheduled to be played yesterday in the Municipal League were postponed because of rain and soggy grounds. They will be made up later in the season in the form of double headers, according to William Yorger, head of the Department of Recreation.

Today's games will be played if weather conditions permit, Yorger said. Considering the condition of the fields from the constant drizzle of the past two days, however, it is hardly likely that any games will take place, unless the sun intervenes.

Fourteen leagues of the Municipal Baseball Association will be seen in action this afternoon on diamonds in the public parks in second and third round contests. All told, 36 games will be played.

The season has started successfully and is now entering the interesting stage. Before long the race in each circuit will be narrowed down to three or four teams and midseason baseball will be forthcoming. Differences in class and organization already have begun to show and the games are well attended by the public.

Critical games will be played today in several leagues. The Lischko Indians and the Carbrows, tied for the lead with two won and none lost, will furnish the chief feature in the City League at Fairgrounds Park, starting at 3 p. m. The St. Casimirs, who also have a perfect record, will play Tower Camp, second placers, at O'Fallon Park in the other important City League game.

Southwest Nine Favored.

The Southwest nine, leading in the Mercantile League, has an excellent chance to add a third game to its victory column when it takes on the tail-end Rock Island squad at Fairgrounds beginning at 3 p. m. The Donnelly Stars, tied for the lead with Southwest, play the Dau team, which has won and lost one game.

The leadership of the Independent League will be at stake at Fairgrounds when the Meletios and the Polish Falcons, who are deadlocked for first position, will clash at 3:30 p. m. The Shell team has a chance to recover the ground lost in last week's defeat, when it plays the Motorbus nine which is in the cellar with a zero percentage.

Empire Teams Tied.

Y. M. H. A. and the Typos are showing the way in the Empire League, both having won two and lost none. The Y. M. H. A. today plays Wiles-Chipman at Forest Park. Wiles-Chipman has won one and lost one. The Typos take on the last-place La Salle A. C. nine.

Babe Ruth Says:

Babe Ruth, who has been ill since his collapse in Asheville, N. C., in April, has recovered sufficiently to resume the series of baseball articles he is writing for the Post-Dispatch. These articles again will appear twice a week, beginning with this issue.

THE last time I talked to Ty Cobb was at the Worlds Series in Washington. I asked him if he was going to play regularly in 1925 and he said, "Can't tell, Babe, I feel as good as ever but the old dogs aren't the same." Judging by his record-breaking home run hitting at St. Louis there is one player who doesn't need to worry much about his dogs. If I could hit 'em over the fence right now, like Cobb is doing, I could go around the bases in my wheel chair.

Its great to see players like Cobb and Sisler hanging on to their honors in baseball after so many years. Cobb, even more than Sisler, because he's older. But you've got to admit George Sisler is staging the gamest "come-back" ever known to baseball. I am talking more as a fan than as a player, because I realize that both these fellows are making it tough for me in the batting averages.

There's no use denying Cobb's legs have slowed up a lot, since I first joined the American League. But he doesn't need them so much any more. In fact, as manager of Detroit, Cobb is really paid for what he knows more than for what he does. I expect to see Cobb shining as a player for quite a while after 1925.

But the "come-back" of George Sisler is greater than the fact that Cobb, at the time of this writing, is leading the American League in batting. That's really old stuff for Cobb. He's led the league 12 different years, and I wouldn't be surprised to see Sisler and Cobb fighting it out for final honors in September.

But the league ought to strike a medal for iron nerve and give it to George. He has whipped the worst odds any ball player ever played against. I know what it is to be helpless, but I am thankful there isn't anything wrong with my eyes. I got discouraged after I was in the hospital two weeks. Sisler might as well have been in the hospital two years. All during 1923 he was practically blind, as far as baseball was concerned. Last year he managed to finish above .300 in the batting averages but he was still in a bad way. Today he is batting over .400 and hasn't missed his daily hit in more than 20 consecutive games. I think the greatest thing about Sisler's "come-back" is that his backbone never gave out when everybody was doubtful. I don't think very many ball players expected him ever to be the Sisler of 1922 again. I'll admit Sisler is fooling me and I hope he keeps it up all season long.

NEW SERVICE BOXING BOUTS AT HONOLULU

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, May 9. — Hope that the army and navy boxing championship would be held here faded today on receipt by the territorial attorney-general of an opinion of Attorney-General Sargent that as a statute makes pugilistic contests for championships unlawful, "the proposed contest seems to be within the prohibition."

Naval officers, however, may decide that the bouts can legally be held on the Government reservation at Pearl Harbor.

Schoolboy Nines Enter 4th Round

Many Ties for Lead in Groups Playing for League Title and Post-Dispatch Trophy.

The third round in the public school baseball race for the Post-Dispatch trophy, just completed, resulted in the settlement of leadership in several of the divisions, but in the remainder two and three cornered ties were the outcome.

Lyon and Woodward hold jointly the lead in Group A, having won two and lost none. Froebel and Shaw share first place in Group B, Froebel with three victories and Shaw with two. Madison holds undisputed sway in Group C, being the only contender with a perfect score. Mullanphy's record was marred by a defeat by Peabody, but the game has been protested.

Six Rock Springs and Roe are in a three-cornered tie in Group D, with two won and one lost. Eliot is the class of Group E, having won three and lost none. Blair and Cupples are at the top in Group F. Lowell, Baden and Clayhead Group G and Laclede is first in Group H.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS To Baseball Queries

(1) Is the second baseman charged with an error when he drops a throw within his reach from the catcher who is trying to nail a base runner? (2) If the muff occurs after the runner has made the base safely, is it an error?—Martin W. Porter.

(1) The official scorer must decide. If the second baseman has a chance to make a perfect play and fails to do so because of his muff, he gets an error. If the play is close the scorer must decide whether or not the runner would have been safe and whether to record an error or stolen base.

(2) No, unless the runner makes an extra base on the play. Errors are given only when the misplay prolongs the life of the runner or batter or permits the runner to make one or more bases when a perfect play would have resulted in a putout.

Runner is caught in a run-up between second and third. In getting back to second base, he has interference and has to run around several players. He gets there safely but runs out of the base line. What is the ruling?—Bruno A. Hefer, Staunton, Ill.

He is safe. The runner is out if he runs out of the three-foot line to avoid being tagged but on extra base hits and when the path is obstructed, except by the fielder with the ball, he may diverge from the straight line.

Runner on first starts to steal second. Batter hits foul. Ball is returned to pitcher. Batter is in box. Pitcher throws to first baseman who retires the runner. Is the runner out or is he protected until he gets back to the bag?—E. W.

The runner cannot be put out while returning to his base after a foul ball, except it be a caught foul fly. In such a case he may be doubled up.

Runners on second and third. One out. Batter hits into double play, but runner on third crosses plate before the double out is completed. Does the run count?—An Amateur.

If the third out is a force at any base or a batter's out at first, the run does not count. Otherwise it does. For full explanation, see Rule 59 with footnotes.

Goldberg Meets Ray Alfano in Feature Event

Sansone and Schnemann Also Booked for Wednesday Night.

Mike Sansone, Western A. A. U. flyweight champion, and Ray Alfano, National A. A. U. featherweight title holder, will compete in the star bouts of four special matches arranged by Harry Cook of the Business Men's A. C. to feature an amateur boxing tournament at the Battery A arena Wednesday night. A middleweight bout and a bantam event complete the special card. Ten local ringsters have filed entries for the preliminaries. Harry Sharpe will referee.

The flyweight special will bring Sansone against Sammy Schnemann, a southpaw midget of the South Broadway A. C. This will be their third meeting. Schnemann won on a foul in their first set-to, but the judges voted Sansone a point verdict in the second encounter.

Alfano is slated to oppose Eddie Goldberg of the South Broadway club in the featherweight feature. The bout will mark Goldberg's first clash with a boxer of championship rating since his advent as a contender for featherweight laurels. In defeating Louis Terry a few weeks ago, Goldberg gave such an impressive account of himself that South Side fans feel confident he will outpoint the titleholder.

All of the principals in special bouts are now training diligently at local gymnasiums. Sansone and Alfano returned yesterday from Boston, where they participated in the Pan-American championships last Wednesday.

BUSTER BROWNS MEET SOUTHWESTS TODAY

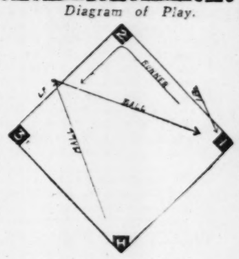
The Buster Browns and Southwest Nash will meet in the feature game of the weekly round of the Municipal Horseshoe League tomorrow morning at the Fairground. The league leading Curlees play the Sunsets while the Angelicas meet the Wet Wash Kids in the other scheduled games.

The standings:

Club.	W.	L.	Pct.
Curlees	16	0	1.000
Buster Browns	14	2	.875
Southwest Nash	9	7	.562
Angelicas	7	9	.437
Sunsets	2	11	.125
Wet Wash Kids	0	16	.000

Eddie Collins TIPS ON INSIDE BASE-BALL

Diagram of Play.



RUNNER on first base, one out, batsman flies deep to left field.

The runner on first does not believe the ball will be caught. He rounds second base and is well on his way to third, when the fielder makes a sensational catch of the ball.

Fielder making catch returns ball to second baseman, who touches that base before the runner can return.

Does this retire runner, originally on first, and is it the proper way to make the play?

Merely touching second base in advance of the runner's return to that base on his way back to first does not retire the runner.

The ball must be returned to and held on first base, not second, as this was the base vacated when the ball was hit.

Another way, of course, would be to touch the runner with the ball while he was making an effort to return to first base.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 9.—Butler University and Washington University of St. Louis broke even in a tennis meet here today, each team winning three matches. Four singles matches and two doubles were played and the teams split even in both divisions.

Capt. Kurzrock of Butler was given a great fight by Forrester but managed to win out by 4—6, 7—5, 6—4 scores. Another good match was between Beutel and Dixon, the Washington player winning out by scores of 6—1, 7—9, 8—6.

Sagelowsky, runner-up at the Western Conference meet last year, won from Bierman, 6—0, 6—3, and Gustavsen defeated Richards, 6—2, 6—3, in other singles play.

The two doubles matches were decided in straight sets, Gustavsen and Beutel winning from Dixon and Richards, 6—3, 6—1, while Sagelowsky and Kurzrock defeated Bierman and Forrester, 6—3, 6—3.

The meet was the second of the season between the two schools, Butler winning the previous encounter at St. Louis.

23 TOURNAMENTS IN VALLEY NET PROGRAM

Des Moines Is Awarded Title Meet

Wray Brown, St. Louis, Announces That He Will Defend His Championship Crown, July 27.

By Davison Obear.

The official schedule of tennis tournaments to be played in the Missouri Valley territory during the season of 1925 is the largest on record. In February C. Drummond Jones, president of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association, appointed a schedule committee to arrange the season's events.

The schedule calls for 23 major tournaments, of which 13 are for men players. Five events have been listed for women players, while an equal number has been arranged for juniors.

Arkansas Opens Season.

Opening with the Arkansas State event on June 19, the tournament season continues until September 29, closing with the Sylvan Grove (Kan.) championship for men. State championships in five of the six Missouri Valley states are listed.

Des Moines, Ia., will be the scene of the twenty-fifth annual Missouri Valley championship. The Iowa State Tennis Association will have jurisdiction over this event, which will be held during the week of July 27. There will be events for men and women players in singles and doubles. A tournament for juniors and boys will also be held.

Brown to Defend Title.

Wray D. Brown, local star, who holds the Missouri Valley singles honors, will defend his title and will also play in the doubles event. Several other prominent St. Louis players will also participate in the championship at Des Moines.

The National Clay Court championship will be played in St. Louis for the second successive year. Last year players from 26 cities and one foreign country participated in the event and a similar entry is expected for the 1925 tournament.

According to present indications, at least four of the first 10 United States players will enter, while members of foreign Davis Cup teams are also expected.

Eddie Held Candidate at W. U. For President of Student Body

EDDIE HELD, District golf champion, former Trans-Mississippi and National Municipal title-holder, is a candidate for president of the student body at Washington University. The election will be held Wednesday. Wylie Cox, basketball and Dwight Ingamells, football star, are the other candidates.

Held, a junior in the law school, will represent Washington University in the national intercollegiate golf tournament, to be held at Montclair, N. J., June 23. He also will play in the St. Louis district tournament at North Hills, defending the title he won last year at Sunset; in the State tourney at Kansas City and the Trans-Mississippi at Omaha. He also has filed his entry for the national open, and if he is on his game he will compete in the national amateur at Oakmont, Pittsburg, in September.

Eddie is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, the W. Club, Wrecking Crew, a rooters' "pep" organization, and treasurer of the junior class.

Representing the Algonquin Golf Club, he won the district championship last year and the Trans-Mississippi crown in 1923. In 1922 he won the national municipal golf championship. He has been finalist in the State tournament.

To compete in the qualifying round of the national open, Held will have to make special arrangements at the Washington Law School. Examinations start May 28 and the qualifying round at Chicago is set for May 27 and 28.

THREE U. S. ENTRIES FOR SPEED BOAT RACES

DETROIT, Mich., May 9.—The United States will have at least three entries in the international speedboat races in defense of the Harmsworth Trophy, emblematic of the world's championship, over the five-mile course on the Detroit River here next Sept. 5 and 6.

Gar Wood, present holder of the cup, has agreed to rebuild Miss America II, with which he won the title in 1921, and also to construct a new defender. The third craft will be owned by Edsel Ford.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Out of Luck!

GEORGE SISLER is coming back to his best form, but he'll not again receive the award as the Most Valuable Player in the league—an honor which he won the first year the competition was inaugurated—1922.

No matter what George does to prove he IS the greatest, his name will not be inscribed on any scroll attesting his greatness—officially.

George is barred on two counts:

First, he manages a ball club, and all managers are ineligible.

Second, he already has received the award—and the rules prohibit holding the honor twice!

It's TWO bad, literally.

Being a manager surely doesn't make it any easier to excel at playing; while a man good enough to repeat is surely worthy of even more honor than he who wins once only.

• • •

Truly Greats Barred.

AMONG the truly greats barred by the trophy rules today are Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Eddie Collins, George Sisler and Babe Ruth.

Collins, who should have had the award last year, but for the fact that his club finished poorly, is now out of it.

Cobb, who is still setting records and who is the greatest player in the world, can't win the honor. Speaker and the others are equally great.

In their stead we will have players of secondary note being given the award, because the supply of truly greats has become exhausted.

Not the Greatest.

THE Lewis-Munn mat match for the world's funny championship is still going forward. They are setting the scenery at Michigan City and the lurid word painters of the Chicago news columns are putting rainbow tints into the picture lavishly. Perhaps there's a pot of gold at the end.

No doubt it will be well "staged."

Among the statements made is one to the effect that the $30,000 purse offered will be the largest in the world. If there is anything more than a percentage being wrestled for, it is likely not a record sum.

We feel sure that $30,000 is not, at any rate.

For the second Hackenschmidt-Gotch match at Chicago Gotch alone received $21,000 cash in hand before he even entered the ring. Hack himself, with an injured knee, certainly could not have been induced to go forward for less than $15,000.

Both events seem to have one feature in common. That is, in each case one of the principals to the affair had no chance to give the public a genuine run for its money.

You can have one guess to determine which individual is it, in the coming event.

A Test for Maloney.

JIM MALONEY, called Dempsey's most likely successor, will be paraded at Louisville May 15, Derby eve, when he will battle Sully Montgomery, a Centre College football hero.

Sully, it appears, must be eager to graduate from hero into a martyr—for he seems to have no chance. Unless memory fails, Maloney already has taken Montgomery.

The affair will serve its purpose, however; in that interested fans from many sections will get a fine chance to see the "coming champion."

Let's hope he is that and deserves it. Dempsey with all his paraffin nose, enameled hair and movie picture plah blah, maketh the heart sick and the eyes and the tympanum very tired.

Negro Fighters Had to Eat That's Why They Met Each Other

Harry Wills Tells of Boxing Sam Langford More Than Dozen Times—When Jim Johnson Was a Spectator.

In this installment of Harry Wills' life story, as told through a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, the negro challenger for Dempsey's title explains the many meetings between pairs of negro boxers.

I HAD a date to box Sam Langford at a club on Staten Island. Sam got lost looking for the club and did not show up, so the promoter asked Joe Jeannette to take Sam's place. Joe had a bad hand and could not go on. The promoter then asked Battling Jim Johnson to substitute, saying he could pick up some easy money.

"Man, I don't want no money," said Jim. "I come over here to be entertained. Go 'way from me!"

"Why, you're not afraid, are you, Jim?" asked the promoter.

"Naw. Course I ain't afraid," he answered. "Why don't you ask Jeannette ain't he afraid? I bought this ticket to enjoy myself. I ain't going to pay to see myself fight."

After beating Battling Jim at New Orleans I made my first ring appearance in New York, meeting Sam McVey in a 10-round bout. It was close, but the papers gave me the popular decision. I boxed Jim Johnson in New York and won over him and then went to Boston for a 12-round bout with McVey.

Decision Over Langford.

The referee's decision went to me after a lively scrap. The papers praised my work highly and said that I was another man that Champion Jess Willard would have to put on his black list. After that I went back to New York and outpointed Langford in a 10-rounder.

Early in 1916 I took on Langford at New Orleans for 20 rounds and beat him all the way, winning the decision. By that time none of the white boys wanted any part of my game. There were not many colored beauties good enough to give me a fight so I had to keep right on battling Langford for so without a match.

One month after beating Langford I met him again in another scheduled 20-round bout before the same club at New Orleans. I beat him in every round up to the nineteenth and was well ahead of him in that round too, when I again became careless and Sam put over a wallop that sent me to sleep.

Even on Kayoes.

In all my fights with Langford, and they number well over a dozen, he knocked me out twice and both were clean knockouts. I never saw either blow coming or knew what hit me on either occasion. We fought more than 100 rounds and he outpointed me in less than half a dozen and yet he knocked me out twice. That shows what kind of a fighter Sam Langford was.

Twice I knocked him out, so we are even on that score. I could have stopped him easily in our last two or three engagements, but Sam was no longer himself then. He was getting very fat and he had lost the sight of one eye, so that it would have been a shame to knock him out.

In 1915, 1916 and 1917 I took part in 23 bouts. They were divided among only eight different opponents. I fought Langford eight times during those three years. McVey I boxed twice, Jim Johnson four times and Jack Thompson three times.

Because we fought one another so often people got queer ideas about us. One was that we did not try, but saved each other up so that we could make a barrel of money.

Lots of Money?

Well, I fought Langford about 14 times. I am not certain about the exact number, and the records books do not contain them all—and I beat him every time except twice, when he knocked me out. If anyone thinks that Langford liked to be beaten, all I can say is that they don't know Sam Langford. If they had been "business" fights it stands to reason that Sam would have insisted upon winning a fair share of them. The same thing goes for the other boys that I was compelled to meet so often.

Now about the notion that we made a lot of money. The most I ever got for fighting Langford was $1200. The least I received was $98, which was my share of the receipts one night when I fought him six hard rounds in Philadelphia. I averaged less than $300 a fight for battling the toughest man that ever stepped into a ring.

The Hero of the War

Ever since the War was over Nations have been arguing over "Who won it." And if the discussion is not stopped we may have to have another War just to decide who won the last one. If we ever do go into another War, have it understood there is to be a Referee and at the finish he is to announce "Who Won and how much." In the last War we paid Transportation both ways, and rental on the grounds, and now all England and France say is "We didn't get there soon enough." Germany does not seem to ever have uttered any complaint on the lateness of our arrival, so that just shows you, you can't please everybody, even for Humanitys sake. I must bring the word "Bull" Durham in this even if I have to drag it in by the horns. It just struck me, and after careful examination of complaints and statistics, I find that "Bull" Durham was the only thing connected with America during the War that France and England havent been able to criticise. It must be good.

THE LIFE OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN — By R. F. DIBBLE — Epoch-Making Battle With Ryan

New Champion Was Made When "Boston Strong Boy" Won Battle in 9 Rounds

From 1882 to 1892 Sullivan Completely Dominated the Prize Ring Although He Refused to Meet Peter Jackson, the Negro.

CHAPTER V.
The Ryan Battle.

To the inexpressible delight of the audience, the epoch-making event was conducted under the London Prize-Ring Rules; that is to say, the ring was on the ground, the rivals fought with bare knuckles, and the contest soon developed into a combined hitting, wrestling, biting, gouging and scratching match. When time was called, Sullivan at once made a lionlike spring at "the Trojan Giant" which completely demoralized him; and in less than 30 seconds John had scored the first knockdown. Ryan now realized that his only chance of winning lay not in fighting but in wrestling; therefore, in the second round, "they wrestled for a fall, Ryan winning and falling heavily on his opponent." But by the third round Ryan had become so weak and scared that John "just pushed him over; he didn't want to kill him." After the fifth round, in fact, Sullivan's seconds cautioned him not to go after Ryan so viciously, inasmuch as he "had him done and might kill him." But in the next round Ryan temporarily recovered; he "eloseed and, getting Sullivan across the buttock, downed him." This was the champion's last gasp, however, for in round nine he was knocked senseless by a "right-hander under the left ear," and "was so disabled that the best care of physicians was required" to bring him to, while Sullivan laughingly jumped over the ropes and "ran a 100-yard dash to his quarters." A crazy mob of souvenir hunters at once jumped into the ring, smashed to bits the chair in which Sullivan had rested between rounds, and carried the fragments away in triumph.

Various alibis were claimed by Ryan and his friends. The defeated champion burst into print with a series of statements which insisted that his rupture and his truss had so crippled him that he was unable to fight with his customary ferocity; but when requested to give ocular proof of his statements, he made a lame excuse and promptly disappeared. One fervent worshipper of Ryan offered a brilliant explanation for the cause of his defeat. Sullivan, he said, was a Bostonian and therefore a gentleman of undoubted culture; in the ninth round he had begun to entertain Paddy with an exposition of Professor Tyndall's latest contribution concerning the atomic theory—and then, in a flash, struck him under the left ear. But Ryan himself was privately very frank. "When Sullivan struck me," he mourned, "I thought that a telegraph pole had been shoved against me endways." Paddy's mental and physical pangs, however, were somewhat alleviated on the evening following the fight. On returning to New Orleans that evening, both he and Sullivan put up in the same hotel. "Being in my rooms with a party of friends," John narrates, "I sent for him and he partook of our festivities."

Sullivan Gets an Ovation All the Way Back to Boston

The whole East went crazy with enthusiasm. In New York the unbelievable news of Sullivan's victory was received at a famous barroom, which was run by and conducted for pugilists, street-walkers and thieves. Before the battle everybody present had been hauling Ryan and roundly damning the young upstart who actually seemed to believe that he could defeat the great Paddy. But when Sullivan's victory could no longer be doubted, there was a chorus of delighted "I told you so's," and everybody drank to the health and long reign of the victor.

And the victor, on his journey homeward, was greeted with all the acclaim that commonly attends a presidential tour. Immense crowds thronged every stopping place, while shouts of "Our great pugilist" rent the air. When he finally reached Boston early in March, what followed was best described by one of her most eminent citizens—who for reasons of policy shall be nameless—in the terse comment, "Hell broke loose." The streets were jammed, traffic was absolutely blocked, flags and streamers almost blotted out the sun, and every store, hotel, saloon and dive did an unparalleled business. All urban enterprises, save the churches alone, were enormously benefited. The crowning feature was a reception at the Dudley Street Opera House. There Sullivan was presented with "an elegant gold watch and chain," and also with "a splendid horsehoe of wax flowers, 18 inches in height, and set in a gilt frame." Only one thing occurred to dim the joy of Sullivan's reception—a rumor ran about with wildfire rapidity that he had first learned to fight by whipping his father. John spent one decidedly uncomfortable evening at home, endeavoring to persuade Mike Sullivan that he himself was in no way responsible for this libelous tale.

On the Heights.

That new champion proved to be a real champion. His testing period was over, and during the next 10 years he was to win immortal renown as the gladiator par excellence of the nineteenth century—the great hulking hero whose fabulous achievements elevated pugilism into the realm of epic poetry. By 1882 his method of fighting was characterized by the artless perfection that always accompanies great art. For his technique was simplicity itself; he merely kept hammering with ruthless, atavistic ferocity at his opponents until the opponents became insensible. An ardent admirer once epitomized Sullivan's pre-eminent skill in this epigram: "Other boxers begin by sparring; he begins by fighting—and he never ceases to fight."

From 1882 until 1892 Sullivan completely dominated the American prize ring. He was ready to fight anyone—save only the redoubtable negro, Peter Jackson—anywhere, at any time, for little money or even none. For in those sentimental days, men still fought because they liked to fight; the commercialism of sport in America had barley begun. There were, of course, plenty of blusterers who were excessively bold—on paper. Scarcely had John become the champion of America when scores of amusingly egotistical challenges were hurled at him. He quickly discovered that it was absolutely impossible to pin these braggarts down to definite engagements, and was, therefore, obliged to repay them in their own coin, in order to to keep his escutcheon spotless.

On March 23, 1882, this notice appeared on sporting pages all through the land:

There has been so much newspaper talk from parties who state that they are desirous of meeting me in the ring that I am disgusted. Nevertheless, I am willing to fight any man in this country, for $5000 a side; or any man in the old country for the same amount, at two months from signing articles—I to use gloves and he, if he pleases, to fight with the bare knuckles. I will not fight again with the bare knuckles, as I do not wish to put myself in a position amenable to the law. My money is always ready, so I want these fellows to put up or shut up. JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

After this Sullivan was less bothered by paper-weight fighters, and was therefore able to resume what he loved to call his "series of picnics"—a guarantee that he would whip anyone within four rounds or forfeit $50. Before John pounced upon his opponent in these conflicts his manager invariably admonished him to "finish his man, but to be careful and not knock him out forever."

Forced to Raise Offer.

These picnics almost invariably had the same end. In a short time Sullivan was forced to raise the offer of $50 as high as a thousand in order to tempt anyone to face him—for his very name now turned iron jaws to glass. His art had become so deadly, indeed, that sporting papers were forced to resort to the stock phrase: "After the first few minutes, it was simply a question of mercy on Sullivan's part." One night furious because his challenger had managed to last for three rounds by resorting to all manner of improper wiles, Sullivan knocked him through the ropes. He landed in the audience where he managed to smash two chairs and three violins before he rolled senseless on the floor; and John, fearing that the wretched fellow was dead, slipped off the stage and hid himself in the wings.

"Tug" Wilson, English Fighter Managed to Last Four Rounds

On July 17, 1882, Tug Wilson, an English pugilist, who swore that he had "come over to pulverize that American puppy," actually managed to last through the stipulated four rounds by hugging Sullivan and crawling around on the floor—for Tug had insisted that this particular contest should be waged under the London prize-ring rules. Nevertheless, in spite of his cleverness, Tug himself was well pulverized; but one of his friends poured balm on his wounds by admonishing him to remember "what a heap of court plaster he could buy with that $1000 he'd won." Tug, however, did something even wiser, for after he had healed his wounds by expending not more than $10 for court plaster, he was still rich enough to return to England and open a public house, which eventually brought him in a very considerable fortune.

Three weeks later, on Aug. 6, John engaged in a fray that was unusually interesting because he did not commence in his customary businesslike fashion. His opponent was Herbert Slade, a New Zealander, known as "The Maori," who was the special protege of Richard K. Fox, publisher of that popular pink illustrated weekly—the Police Gazette. Fox had once championed Sullivan, and had even given him a $1000 prize belt; but soon after they had quarreled, and Fox's affectionate regard turned to such bitter hatred that he almost completely neglected his arduous editorial duties in order to discover a fighter who would be able to wrest the belt away from John. The prices for admission to the encounter, which was held in Madison Square Garden, were graded thus: "One dollar on the Twenty-sixth street side of the house, and $2 on the opposite side, the Madison avenue gallery and the main floor, with $25 each for boxes, all of which were quickly sold." Ticket speculators, a type of public vermin apparently common to all ages secured most of the billets, and the prices of many seats were therefore doubled and even trebled.

Sullivan "had trained himself down to "a shade below 200 pounds and although still carrying too much beef, was in good condition; his eye was bright and sparkling and his countenance was the picture of confidence." Slade, on the contrary, was so nervous that he dared not look across the ring at the champion. "The expresssion on his countenance was certainly not calculated to inspire his friends with confidence." Before time was called, both were sternly admonished "that there was to be no wrestling."

John opened the festivities with "an easy left-hander which failed to reach home, although he laid the right glove somewhat gently on the left ear." After this unprecedented opening, however, Sullivan began to get down to business; he "landed his left fairly on the nasal organ hard enough to distill the ruby and slightly confuse the recipient." Then, breaking loose in his orthodox manner, he knocked Slade through the ropes. For some reason, Sullivan opened the second round in the same easy-going fashion; and Joe Goss, his chief assistant, was moved beyond himself at John's curious behavior to shout at him, "What's the matter, John? "It 'im in the belly, John; 'it 'im in the belly!" Sullivan's second assistant assured Joe that "Sully had his man safe;" but Joe dolefully replied, "Aye, but I want 'im a bit safer."

When the third round started, John had apparently concluded that he had dillydallied long enough. Straight as an arrow he dashed at Slade, who "started on a dead run across the stage, Sullivan, a look of contempt on his face, pursued him, sending in his right repeatedly, the last blow catching the frightened New Zealander on the back of the head and neck and sending him sprawling on the floor, face downward, where he remained, the picture of, bewilderment, until led in a dazed condition to his corner." When he was told that he had lost because he had reposed on the floor for over ten seconds, he protested most vigorously. It was not his fault if he had lost, he said: he had merely forgotten to get up on time. The referee, after advising Slade to keep his eyes on the fighters and his hand on his purse. On account of this watchfulness, no untoward event occurred except John's awful downfall; and the whole gathering buzzed with excitement as numerous explanations were advanced. There were rumors, even at that early date, that the champion was drinking too much—for what other possible reason could he have been floored? But after the fight, when quizzed by reporters as to the truth of these insinuations, John angrily replied, "I ain't touched a drop today, and that report's all damned nonsense." He then proceeded to Bentley's saloon, to pass the rest of the evening as a champion should.

Mitchell Floors Sullivan.

The cutest boxer who ever faced Sullivan was doubtless Charlie Mitchell, the slippery Englishman who first fought the champion in Madison Square Garden on May 14, 1883. In the first round an unbelievable event occurred—John was knocked down—a catastrophe that had never happened before. Perhaps it will be best to let John himself explain how this calamity occurred: "My legs got crossed somehow, and just as this time Mitchell hit me, knocking me down as you would push over a chair. Then I got up and went for him like a bull at a rag." In the third round, in fact, John knocked Mitchell completely across the ring, where he tottered about, clinging feebly to the ropes. At this point the police interfered,—even though Sullivan begged the police captain—a good friend of his—to let the bout go on. "Captain," he implored, "let me have just one more crack at him." "John, do you want to kill him?" the officer mildly answered.

No seats were provided for the audience at this historic affair; the whole crowd stood. Among the most notable spectators present was Roscoe Conkling. When the long black coat and the silk top hat announced his arrival, a seat was hastily built for him by laying a plank across two beer kegs; and from this place of honor he surveyed the proceedings with all his accustomed senatorial dignity. It was, indeed, a motley gathering; bankers, pickpockets, lawyers, thieves, brokers, merchants, coachmen, dudes, men about town, actors, baseball players and millionaires—everyone from Fifth avenue to the underworld elbowed and shoved to get near the ring. Each person distrusted his neighbor; each person kept his eyes on the fighters and his hand on his purse. On account of this watchfulness, no untoward event occurred except John's awful downfall; and the whole gathering buzzed with excitement as numerous explanations were advanced. There were rumors, even at that early date, that the champion was drinking too much—for what other possible reason could he have been floored? But after the fight, when quizzed by reporters as to the truth of these insinuations, John angrily replied, "I ain't touched a drop today, and that report's all damned nonsense." He then proceeded to Bentley's saloon, to pass the rest of the evening as a champion should.

The Champion so Intoxicated Bout in New York Called Off

But when on June 30, 1884, he met Mitchell again, there was no possible doubt as to his condition. Instead of wearing his usual costume—a pair of green trunks, encircled by an American flag—he was in full evening dress. Diamond rings flashed on his fingers and diamond studs as big as nutmegs blazed on his shirt. Yet as he came reeling across the ring, no one could fail to see how disreputably disheveled he was; his face was swollen, blotched and unshaven, his half-closed eyes were bloodshot, his hair was tousled. Hundreds of voices chimed together, "Sullivan's full as a goat!" As he swayed, lurched and leered above the ropes, his trainer announced: "Gentlemen, Mr. Sullivan's doctor won't let him spar. He ain't well and can't fight." The champion's thick husky voice hiccoughed: "Gen'l'm'n, this the firs' time I ever come to New York to fight and wan't able to do it. But I been sick, an' I ain't in no condition to fight. Some may think I'm drunk, but I'm just dead sick. The doctor's certificate says so." Then Mitchell announced that he, too, had "then a 'avin' a bad time of it with malaria, and maybe it would be just as well not to fight." A man, primed for the act, rose and sheepishly threw a bouquet at Sullivan's feet; he awkwardly picked it up and staggered away as fast as he could. Several unimportant bouts followed—for the admission money was not returned. The commercialism of sport and the downfall of Sullivan had simultaneously begun.

Sickness of this particular variety became increasingly common to John. The time was rapidly approaching, in fact, when he would no longer be able to prove the truth of the two boasts he was so fond of making: that he could whip any man born of woman, and could consume any amount of liquor, in any combination, and still walk straight. In his drunken moments he was philosophical, sentimental, generous, or vicious. When philosophical he preferred long words; he would use all that he knew, and then look up others in a dictionary. A friend once tested him with "discriminate." He glowered reproachfully and countered with the remark, "I've got a pretty good nut on me"—but the word remained undefined.

Al Smith (John's manager in 1884) was accustomed to lecture him very sternly for drinking so much; and John would be exceedingly humble and act very much like a naughty schoolboy. Swishing his large red handkerchief copiously around his red eyes, he would whimper, "I can't help it, Al. Everybody's running after me with, 'John, have a drink' here and 'John, have a drink' there. I don't like to make anybody mad by refusing. So, how can I help it?" Then Al, shaking eight monitory fingers and two angry thumbs in John's face, would snappishly reply, "See, see, you're ruining your health; see, don't you see I'm right?"

When John was feeling generous, he would whirl through the streets, throwing quantities of small change right and left at the crowds of small boys who always tagged him whenever he appeared in public. But when he was vicious, everybody gave him as wide a berth as possible. Stories—largely apocryphal, perhaps—are still told, illustrating his dreadful behavior on such occasions. He would come swaggering and swirling into some favorite saloon and whoop, "I'll lick any man in the house right here now! Them's my sentiments! John L. Sullivan, that's me!" Then he would go tearing around, smashing all the glassware in the place and afterward grandly pay for it; or he would offer to drink twice as much liquor, of any sort, as anyone present, and would belch for shouts of victorious joy as his less gifted challengers sprawled, one after another, on the floor.

His sprees became more and more frequent, until they began to interfere seriously with his pugilistic engagements.

Very frequently, too, he was arrested for public intoxication. Indeed, the Boston police vied with each other in a friendly competition to see who could hale John before a court most frequently, for in this way an enviable notoriety was gained—their names would appear in print next day beside the name of Boston's most renowned citizen.

Drunk or sober, however, Sullivan was still the champion. From September, 1883, to May, 1884, he went with a theatrical troupe which gave exhibitions at over 200 places. His part in this "variety show and athletic combination" was the same as of old. He fought all challengers who dared to face him, on successive nights, and when no one appeared he gave a boxing exhibition with a traveling partner. During these months, 59 men tried to win the coveted $1000, but they all met with the same woeful fate. One unfortunate, whom John disposed of in two seconds at Knoxville, Tenn., recovered his senses in 20 minutes and inquired, "Did I win?" Sullivan thought this question was so insulting that he immediately knocked the egotist out again, for an even longer period of time.

CONTINUED IMPROVEMENT IN EUROPEAN TRADE REPORTED

Federal Reserve Board Attributes Increase to Stabilization of Currency Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—European trade during the first quarter of 1925 maintained the high levels reached in the last half of 1924 and present indications are for a continuation of the improvement, the Federal Reserve Board declared today in its monthly business review.

The tonnage of ships entered and cleared during the first three months of this year represented, the board said, a substantial increase not only over the first half of last year, but also over the corresponding period in 1923. In the first two months of 1925, entrances and clearances of ships in France and Germany were well above the total for the same months in 1913.

"The remarkable improvement in German trade," the board declared, "is the result of the betterment in the country's international relations, the stabilization of the currency, and the large foreign loans and credits made available to the German Government and industry. In a number of other European countries also currency stabilization has increased the confidence of foreign investors and has facilitated the flotation of loans.

"The rise in the price of several raw materials, and especially of cereals, has had the effect of increasing the purchasing power of areas which in previous years had been suffering from depression. It is to this increased purchasing power of industrial Europe and of agricultural communities in many parts of the world that the marked increase in international trade is chiefly attributable."

CHARGES AGAINST 10 AFTER CAFFERATA RAID

Proprietor, Two Waiters and Seven Guests to Be Given Hearings Tuesday.

Mrs. Christine Cafferata, proprietor of Cafferata's Cafe, Hamilton avenue and Delmar boulevard, two of her waiters and seven men guests who attended "carnival night" at the cafe Friday when prohibition officers raided it, are held under bonds of $500 each to answer charges of liquor-law violation. Their preliminary hearing will be before United States Commissioner Aikins at the Federal Building Tuesday morning.

The raiders, led by Group Chief Goshorn, reached the cafe as "carnival night" was at its height. They were met, according to Goshorn, by Senter Rohlfing of 5928 Enright avenue, who attempted to block their entrance and shouted a warning to the guests in the dining room. Rohlfing was arrested. So were John Tabor, 2806 North Sarah street, and John J. Kelley, 5020 North Taylor avenue, head waiter and waiter, who rushed about the cafe warning guests that a raid was on.

Several guests fled, others broke liquor bottles on the floor, but six men were caught in what Goshorn considered guilty predicaments. His men, he said, found bottles on their tables. The six gave their names as Dr. Albert J. Motzel, 4510 Fair avenue; Walter T. Knight, 4207A Russell avenue; Ralph C. Butler, 4503 Forest Park boulevard; James Brennan, American Annex Hotel; Edward T. Martin, 4456 Maffitt avenue, and Bert Campbell of 4548 Forest Park boulevard.

All but Campbell, who pleaded illness at home, were taken to Police Headquarters holdover for the night. Goshorn charged Rohlfing and the two waiters with abetting violation of the Volstead act. The rest were charged with possession of liquor. He also decided to cite Mrs. Cafferata for abetting liquor-law violations on the ground that he had warned her about holding "carnival nights."

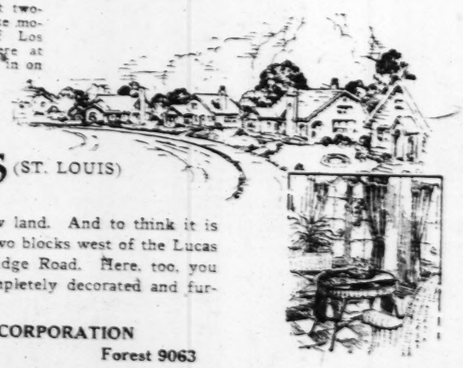
GANNONDALE (UNIVERSITY CITY)

Just off Delmar, between the Hanley and North and South Roads. The location you would select for the finest homes in the west end; and the hundred homes in exclusive Gannondale meet fully these expectations.

The display home in Gannondale, completely decorated and furnished by Stix, Baer & Fuller, is a treat you must not miss.



LOS ANGELES (ST. LOUIS)

A fairyland of charm, bungalow land. And to think it is right on the city's edge. Just two blocks west of the Lucas and Hunt Road on Natural Bridge Road. Here, too, you will find one of the homes completely decorated and furnished.

MAJESTIC HOMES CORPORATION
4935 Delmar Bl. Forest 9063

1 out of every 5

purchasers of Majestic homes is in a business that makes him an expert judge of construction value (either in the construction or an allied business or the real estate business.)

REALIZE first that the number of Majestic homes sold runs into the hundreds: that the values of these homes is in excess of two million dollars.

Appreciate what it means when one out of every five buyers is an expert judge of the real value of a home.

Appreciate fully that these men weigh the value of a Majestic home from every standpoint.

The architects among the buyers put to sharpest scrutiny not alone beauty of design, but utility of the plan . . . and see with a knowing eye the details of perfection found only in the finest homes. The construction engineers among the buyers see the building as through an X-ray. Solid worth in both materials and workmanship must be in the homes they themselves buy.

The real estate men among the buyers see what the architects see and what the construction engineers see . . . and then look beyond. The real estate men judge the homes and judge the community. And in the homes they themselves buy they see not only present value but a value that will tend to increase with the coming years.

These men who know, by their own action, by the expenditure of their own money, urge and advise you: first, not to be content with a rented home; to have a home of your own. Secondly, by their own purchase they say to you, "In a Majestic home you find the home of your ideals and a home of the greatest value for the price."

You, too, can have a fine home, a Majestic home. There is a way of buying to meet your income.

Four Insidious Forces at Work Trying to Contaminate Legislation, Says Walsh

Propaganda, Lobby, Social Life and Executive Power Factors That Seek to Influence Votes, Former Senator Charges.

This is the fourth, and concluding article in the series by David I. Walsh, former Governor of Massachusetts and recent United States Senator, in which he has discussed the public's criticism of the Senate. Today he tells of the various kinds of pressure put upon Senators to influence their votes on pending bills.

By DAVID I. WALSH.

"THE two great natural and historical enemies of all Republics are open violence and insidious corruption."

Every thoughtful person who has had any political experience appreciates the force of that epigram.

"Are there any insidious forces tending to contaminate the purity of legislation in the United States Senate?

There are forces that seek to influence members of the Senate. Senators are under constant pressure from various sources to support this or that side of every controversy. The influences surrounding a Senator at Washington, as he strives to perform his duty, may be conveniently classified into four groups.

They are: 1, strong and sinister organized propaganda, actuated by purely self-interest; 2, the lobby; 3, the social life, and 4, executive pressure.

Swamped With Propaganda.

The average American citizen has no conception of the tremendous amount of pressure at times exerted upon public servants in Washington through propaganda. The propaganda is not always one-sided, but those interests which have the largest pocketbooks and can pay the largest number of solicitors and the most expensive printing bills have a decided advantage.

Hundreds, yes, thousands of letters, many of them form letters, pour in upon Senators from their constituents. It is entirely proper, and, indeed, desirable for constituents to keep their Senator informed of their honest, disinterested views on pending legislation. The right of associations and bodies of men and women, who feel that their personal interests are involved, openly and squarely to place themselves on record, cannot be denied. But the letters sent to a Senator are often coercive in their intent. They frequently demand compliance with the demands of the authors and carry veiled threats to make their influence seem more impressive.

Nor is it always true that the associations and clubs that seek to influence a Senator's official attitude on a pending question have even taken the trouble to examine the issue. Chambers of Commerce, social and financial clubs of various kinds send resolutions demanding action favorable to the side which some paid propagandist, five times out of six representing interests which have private axes to grind, has presented to them.

This practice was little known until recently. It has reached such proportions at times that the mails pouring into the offices of various Senators have clogged all the legitimate business of a Senator's office.

The worst feature of this is that most of those who become innocent propagandists have never read the proposed legislation and have almost invariably heard only one side of the question.

Less Debate, More Laws.

Vice President Dawes, whom I, of course, do not include with the "professional" propagandists, is leading an agitation for changing the Senate rules. He recently presented his case to the Boston Chamber of Commerce. His audience, without hesitation, indorsed his position without hearing a single argument on the other side. I have no doubt, were I still in office, I should be overwhelmed with letters demanding that I give my help to Mr. Dawes in his project of abolishing freedom of debate in the Senate.

A great many business men entertain the view that the country suffers from too many laws. Has it ever occurred to those who are backing the Dawes proposal that if debate is expedited there can be but one result, namely, more laws? There will be more time for lawmaking. What Dawes is proposing comes down to this: "Less talk and more laws." This is just the opposite result desired by business men—if I know their sentiments.

The number of insulting letters that come to a public man during these propaganda waves is surprisingly large. The late Senator Lodge informed me that one vote which he cast during the last year of his life, his vote against sustaining the bonus veto, a question on which there was a great difference of opinion in the country, resulted in his receiving more insulting and offensive letters, many of them from life-long political friends, than he had received prior to that time in his whole public career of more than 30 years.

"Third House" Unrestricted.

As to the lobby, it is an old story. Washington is lobby-ridden. But I am happy to say that Congress is not, in my opinion, "lobby-controlled."

Paid representatives of hundreds of employers' or employes' associations, of financial and industrial concerns, of religious, racial and philanthropic groups, of pro and anti-prohibition forces, of tariff barons and farmers, of business associations (the coal industry alone has four such associations) maintain extensive suites of offices, a large number of paid workers and spend millions of dollars to influence Congress.

Efforts to enact legislation to check these hired men of every special interest have been of no avail. The lobbyists are unregistered and unlicensed. Whom they represent or what they receive, and what it costs to promote the causes they espouse should be public information. It is not, and I regret to say I see little likelihood of any immediate efforts to regulate strictly "the third house."

Yet, I doubt if the influence of the lobby is particularly successful with individual Senators. A change has taken place which the American people do not yet fully appreciate. The lobby works today through political organizations rather than through the slow, uncertain method of merely dealing with an "ordinary" Senator. Get the "leaders" interested in the legislation desired. That is the prudent way to proceed today. Incidentally, of course, the individual Senator must be impressed with the argument for and against "the righteousness of the cause."

Influence of Social Lobby.

What of the social lobby? Does the social life of Washington affect a Senator's official attitude? To what extent do women in the homes of men in high official position seek to influence Senators? Are dinner parties given to promote special causes and particular candidates upon which Senators must make decisions?

To a limited degree, yes; but not effectively, for the socially inclined Senator usually, because

"Courts Are Only Cockpits for Lawyers To Fight In," Says Clarence Darrow

Veteran Criminal Lawyer Retires, Convinced That "There's Not a Chance in the World" for True Justice in This World for Generations Yet to Come.

Clarence Darrow

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 9.

GOOD news for the hangman! Clarence Darrow is about to retire! In fact, he says he practically has retired. A few details remain. Some odds and ends to be cleared up. A finishing touch to a case here and there. Then he will lock up his bookcases, say good-by to his partners, and off to the woods. He wants to fish a little, to muse and meditate on the folly of the world, to write a book or two on crime and the futility of life. He is 68 years old.

He is tired of being the country's foremost criminal lawyer. He is tired of battling with State's Attorneys. He is tired of repeating the phrase "heredity and environment" to juries, over and over again. He is weary of criticism and weary of praise. He is weary, he says, of life itself.

Well, what is bad tidings for some is good for others. Let prosecutors breathe a sigh of relief. Let homicide squads attack their jobs with new zest. Let the gallows be strengthened and repainted. The greatest living adversary of the noose is laying down his arms.

What a record he leaves! Fifteen hundred battles have been waged by him in the courts of the land. He has defended no less than 60 persons charged with murder. Against approximately 50 of these the death penalty has been asked. And with what result? Forty-five have been acquitted, a few have gone to asylums for the insane, the remainder have received prison sentences. Not one has ever been hanged! Not one, in all the 47 years of his practice!

There will be divers opinions as to whether society is better or worse for his labors. Many will fight to the last ditch against his philosophy toward crime. As to his sincerity of purpose and unselfishness of aim, there can be but one opinion. To know him is to believe in him utterly. A rare personality is this grim old gladiator, with his cheap and wrinkled suit, his blue shirt and 25-cent wash tie, his uncut hair, his grumbling voice, his visage like that of an Indian chief. Blunt, terse, gloomy, scoffing at law and lawyers, demolishing antagonists with a grunt, seeming always to penetrate to the heart of questions with a plainness understandable to all, he has stood in a class by himself, the bulwark of the despised, the terror of his enemies.

Pioneer Labor Champion

The younger generation doubtless associates his name with the case of Loeb and Leopold, but their fathers will remember him no less vividly as the defender of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone and of the McNamaras, with the great anthracite strike of 1903, and with many other sanguine battles fought in the pioneer days of organized labor. What Samuel Gompers did in establishing the rights of labor in the industrial field, Clarence Darrow did in establishing its rights under the law. His battle to depose feudalism in industry and his battle to drive the Mosaic law from the criminal courts—these have been his major crusades.

Sitting in his old-fashioned library and gazing out over the green drenched vistas of Jackson Park, he ruminated gruffly on his life work, its aims and consequences. "It is no small thing," I had remarked, "to be the most distinguished criminal lawyer in the United States." For, obviously, few lawyers in our time have ever so captured popular imagination.

Darrow grunted contemptuously. Then he said: "Well, you know me, and have had some opportunity to watch me in the trial of cases. To what do you attribute that?" Having long ago answered this question for myself, I replied I thought it was, first, his extraordinary power to single out and dramatize the purely human element in his cases; second, an originality of method which, to the laymen, invariably seemed to consist of substituting common sense for legal technicality, and last, but not least, to his amazing success.

"I think you've about hit it," he said. "I think such success as I have had can be laid largely to a few facts. I always use plain language. I never yield to the temptation to employ oratory. I have always tried above all to make juries see that the men accused of crime were simple human beings like themselves. I have appealed to humanity rather than to the law. I have tried to be honest with courts and juries, and above all, honest with myself. I don't believe anybody will accuse me of sham or hypocrisy. I always have tried to make it clear that we are all poor blind creatures, bound hand and foot by the invisible chains of heredity and environment, doing pretty much what we have to do in a barbarous and cruel world. That's about all there is to any court case. It's about all there is to anything in life," he concluded characteristically.

Abruptly switching the subject, I asked him how often he had seen cases decided by an unpremeditated twist in the evidence, a chance phrase dropped by a witness or a lawyer, an unexpected and climactic question or answer.

"I've read about such things many times in newspapers and works of fiction," he rumbled, "and never read one that didn't impress me as a transparent fake. Cases aren't decided that way. A juror arrives at his decision gradually; in 99 cases out of 100 he doesn't know himself what decides him or when he makes up his mind. But you can put this down for certain, the law to the contrary nothwithstanding:

Workings of Juror's Minds

"A jury begins by assuming that a man charged with a crime is guilty. If he isn't guilty, why would he be here? the juror asks himself. He sees before him, not an ordinary human being like himself, but a creature of whom he thinks as a 'criminal.' The first task of a lawyer who knows his business is to put forward the human side of his client, to show the jury that the defendant is merely a man like themselves, in other words, to get the jury and the defendant acquainted, to substitute in the eyes of the jury a human being for a hypothetical 'criminal.' When he has succeeded in doing that, he faces the job of showing by evidence that this man didn't do this thing that the State says he did."

"Do you believe in the jury system?"

"I sure do," was the abrupt reply. "Nothing is perfect in this world, and the jury system isn't, but it's the only safeguard there is for the protection of individual rights against the organized power of the State. The jury is closer to the people than Judges are. Judges are part of the organized machinery of the State, and get to sympathize instinctively with that other arm of the State, the prosecution."

"Do you think justice is usually done in criminal cases?" he was asked.

"I don't know what justice is," was the blunt rejoinder. "It takes more than the human mind to figure out justice to a human being. Too many uncertain and unknown elements are involved. I am certain, however, that in a vast majority of cases the juries' judgments as to whether the man did or didn't do the thing charged against him, is correct. But the important thing in real justice is this. If he did the thing, why did he do it, and what should be done about it? These are questions which a jury cannot answer.

"The fact that a man did the thing may not necessarily mean very much. More important, usually, is the question of why he did it. To decide what is justice to a man, you have to take in an infinite number of things, reaching back through his heredity and including all of his environment, which can't be fully done. But usually you can find enough to satisfy you that there was a sufficient cause for it. Even though you decide that the individual is in nowise responsible for what he did, it still may be necessary to shut him off from society until such time as he can reasonably conform to its usages. To decide these questions, however, requires expert knowledge which the jury doesn't possess."

Believes Juries' Verdicts Are Usually Correct, but Suggests What Should Be Done, After a Verdict of Guilty, Should Be Left to Experts—Views on Laws and Lawyers.

"That seems to argue that juries should determine the facts, and experts should fix the remedy," the writer observed.

"That would be the ideal system," Darrow confirmed. "Let the jury decide whether the man did or didn't do the thing. If the jury finds he did do it, let trained men, psychologists, psychiatrists and those versed in the springs of human behavior, decide why he did it and what must be done with him for his own good and the protection of society."

"What hope is there for establishing such a system?" It must be confessed there was malice in the question.

"Not a chance in the world," scoffed the old lawyer—"not in the present uncivilized state of the human race. Who would be for it?" he snorted. "Certainly not the lawyers. The lawyers least of all. They have too much pocketbook at stake. If I were trying to get cases instead of trying to get rid of them, I might not be for it myself," he added cynically.

Nevertheless, there were certain statistics bearing on the number of homicides, as contrasted with the number of convictions, which could not be forgotten. "Isn't it a fact," the writer persisted, "that a good many guilty men get off?"

"Probably," was the candid answer. "But why? Because the courts, instead of being research laboratories to find out the truth and determine the cure, are simply cockpits for lawyers to fight in. It isn't strange that the defense lawyer sometimes has the best of the fight. As a general rule, the defendant gets the worst of it, because by far the majority of men charged with crime cannot afford to hire lawyers equal to those employed by the State, and they have no detectives and no organization for collecting evidence. But you never hear of those cases. If an innocent man is convicted, or what is more important—if he receives a stupid and brutal sentence—how is the public to know it? The trouble is that the whole method of administering justice is wrong, foolish, benighted and archaic."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Me? Nothing! I'm going off into the woods and fish."

"But what can be done about it?"

"Until the human race becomes less barbarous and cruel, I haven't the faintest hope that anything will be done about it," he said composedly. "People are what they are—not far out of the jungle—and nothing that you or I can say will change them overnight. The slow process of evolution will go on, a little light will filter in here and there, and maybe, in a few more centuries, something resembling intelligent justice will find its way into the criminal courts."

"What is the great obstacle to the attainment of practical justice now?" he was asked.

Swayed by Mob Feeling

"That same thing—human nature. Courts and juries respond to mob psychology. Take the wartime political cases. Judges and juries so far yielded in their sense of fairness to the war psychology that they actually sent to prison a large number of people who, far from having done anything that might injure society, had simply expressed sentiments that were highly humane. Just imagine people like Eugene Debs, Kate O'Hare, Roger Baldwin and Ralph Chaplin—people who had devoted their entire lives to the improvement of human existence—being sent to prison for doing that very thing! Barbarous!"

Had he, in 47 years of practice, discerned any signs of an improvement in the administration of justice?

"Very little; the change is too gradual to be observed very clearly in 47 years," he answered gloomily. "About the only hopeful sign has been the establishment of juvenile courts and the coincident tendency to find out how far a child may be held responsible for its acts. From juvenile courts, that tendency appears slowly to be permeating general criminal practice.

"If you say that children are not fully responsible, you are taking some account of heredity and environment and the maturity of their minds. Common sense and everyday experience proves that age alone is a very small indication of mental maturity. All mental tests show that boys of 16 frequently have

BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE HOLDS PACT WITH FRANCE FIRST STEP TO SECURITY

Important Memorandum Outlining Empire Policy in Europe Is Submitted to Cabinet by the Foreign Office.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,
Special Correspondence of the New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 2.—(By Mail)—The New York World News Service has obtained the full text of a Memorandum on British-European policy which embodies the views of the Foreign Office, handed to the cabinet by Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain on Feb. 25.

This document, intended for circulation only to Ministers, was prepared by the Foreign Office to convince the cabinet that a new entente between Britain, France and Belgium should be concluded. This view the Cabinet rejected, adopting instead the German proposals for a pact of mutual guarantee between the Powers interested in the Rhine.

But the Foreign Office statement of the realities of the European position is of immense importance as revealing the minds of the masters of British world policy. Here, in a paper prepared only for the elect, camouflage is dropped and naked facts as the Foreign Office sees them are frankly discussed.

Most important of the revelations in the memorandum is the clear indication that the Foreign Office, when the time is judged ripe, would like to repair the injustice which the memorandum hints was done to Germany by the partition of Upper Silesia and by the creation of the Polish corridor. The Memorandum states: "Although in the present mood of Europe it would be useless even to mention the revision of the peace treaties, yet if the concert of Europe can thus gradually be recreated, saner counsels may prevail. It is conceivable, especially if Germany with French good will becomes a member of the League of Nations and obtains a permanent seat on the council, that it may become possible eventually to revise by European agreement the dangerous conditions involved in the Silesian settlement and the Polish corridor."

This statement, preceded by an examination of the Silesian and Dantzig problems which treats them as plague spots in Europe, means in plain language that the Foreign Office desires territory awarded to Poland by the Versailles treaty and by the decision of the League of Nations in the Silesian dispute to be taken from Poland and restored to Germany.

Defense of Great Britain.

Under the heading "British Interest," the Memorandum states: "The road is too dark for any altruism or digression; it is our own security which must remain the sole consideration. And "The Defense of Great Britain" is defined in the following formula, which the Cabinet accepted, with the modification that the ends sought will be gained more certainly by the Five-Power pact suggested to Germany and imposed on Chamberlain by Baldwin and other Ministers, than by a renewal of the pre-war Entente:

"The defense of Great Britain necessitates:

"(a) That no single Power shall be in a position to occupy or to dominate all the channel and the North Sea ports.

"(b) That the hostility of France, Belgium and more incidentally Holland, Germany and Denmark, who now possess these ports, or any combination of them, is to be avoided.

"(c) That no third Power at war with France or Belgium should be allowed to invade those countries so as to threaten the status quo of the Channel ports or of such French or Belgian territory as would expose Great Britain to aerial invasion.

"(d) That it is consequently a necessity of British and therefore of Imperial defense to reach some understanding with France and Belgium, which may entail a guarantee on our part that these territories shall not fall into other hands."

The Memorandum is divided into five main parts. Part One, "General Conditions of Insecurity in Europe," deals with the attitude of Russia, the minor ex-enemies, Germany and France. The League of Nations is also discussed, and dismissed as too weak to "restrain a Great Power in any case in which that Power considers its vital interests to be at stake." In the course of a frank examination of French policy since the war, the opinion is indicated that France will not leave the Rhine unless she receives "some compensating guarantee for the future security of France." Germany, as soon as she recovers, will, it is stated, seek a revision of the Dantzig and Silesian frontiers, an aim in which, a later section of the memorandum shows, Germany has the sympathy of the Foreign Office.

The second main section of the Memorandum draws "Conclusions Regarding European Insecurity." It states: "Germany will sooner or later recover. She will certainly desire to revise the Polish clauses. If France were isolated and British neutrality were assured she might also endeavor to attack France. Unless France can be secured against this menace she will be driven to expedients which in the end will provoke the German revenge of which she stands in terror." The other main sections deal with, "British Interest," "The Defense of Great Britain," and "British Interests as Affecting European Security."

The full text of the Memorandum follows:

British Policy Considered in Relation to the European Situation.

I. General Conditions of Insecurity in Europe.

(1) RUSSIA.

Europe today is divided into three main elements, namely, the victors, the vanquished and Russia.

The Russian problem, that incessant though shapeless menace, can be stated only as a problem; it is impossible to foresee what effect the development of Russia will have on the future stability of Europe. It is true on the one hand that the feeling of uncertainty which is sapping the health of Western Europe is caused to no small extent by the disappearance of Russia as a Power accountable in the European concert. On the other hand, the Russian problem is for the moment rather Asiatic than European; tomorrow Russia may again figure decisively in the balance of continental power, but today she hangs as a storm-cloud upon the Eastern horizon of Europe—impending, imponderable, but for the present detached. Russia is not therefore in a sense a factor of stability; she is indeed the most menacing of our uncertainties, and it must be in spite of Russia, perhaps even because of Russia, that a policy of security must be framed.

THE MINOR EX-ENEMIES.

The condition of Central and Western Europe, though scarcely uncertain, is at least more definable. The main psychological factors in such case are almost the same. All our late enemies continue full of resentment at what A Disillusioned Woman.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AS a supporter of Mr. Miller, both in the primary and the election campaign, I wish to say that I am very much disappointed in the stand he has taken in the matter of cutting the clinic, legal aid and lodging house out of the budget, or, to be exact, permitting them to be taken out by the Board of Aldermen's committee. Time and again I have heard Mr. Miller and Mrs. Brooks say that he would support with all his might the social-welfare measures and institutions of the city and, when the Aldermen for personal reasons eliminate the least vote-getting jobs, Mr. Miller accepts the cut, along with Mr. Neun and Mr. Nolte.

Were we all simply hoodwinked again by a lot of clever talk? I am almost convinced of it, particularly after seeing the Mayor's actions in the budget matter, in addition to Mr. Kratky's give-away last Sunday in your paper. That was a very smart reporter of yours. I mean to flatter Mr. Kratky sufficiently to make him tell how cleverly he managed the women. He speaks of his idea of teas. Why, they were given by women in one of the other wards last year when they wanted to elect a committee woman. That wasn't his idea at all. Then he said how they approached the women with the idea of being crusaders, and the men were approached from the practical side, with jobs promised them. I have been watching the papers since Sunday to see if anybody would write a letter in your column about this—but I suppose the women are too mad about it, and then I don't think they like to blow a trumpet and say, "See how we were fooled." I have been feeling a little bit that way, too, but when a thing happens like this cut in the budget, I think we might as well admit having been fooled.

Never again! And thousands feel like I do. My husband and my son have had the laugh on me this time. They say it is a good thing I show better judgment in running the business than I do in my politics. They both voted for Mr. Aloe and did not go to the polls on election day.

A TWENTY-SEVENTH WARD REPUBLICAN WOMAN.

Woman as the Cause of War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

REAR ADMIRAL FISKE is right, likewise courageous. If man dealt frankly with woman, there would be some hope of woman's real progress. Real equality will exist only when woman can listen to truths instead of compliments from man, when she has recognized the absurdity, to say nothing of the injustice, of her outrageous claims anent her contributions to the advancement of civilization. All that she has contributed are her affections, and those often in a perverted form.

If woman is not the actual cause of war she certainly has done nothing to discourage it. Man realizes that to win favor in her eyes he must make a grandstand play of heroism. It was certainly a revelation to those who still had faith in the "benign and beneficent influence" of the "gentle" sex to note their attitude just prior to this country's entry into the big conflict. The Zulus were gentle doves in comparison to their bloodthirstiness. Their cheap, loud mouthings and melodramatic showing of patriotism were a pitiable exhibition. They literally shoved their men into the war, at the same time grabbing the martyr's halo, while public whimperings and public knitting were their chief occupations.

Woman turns a deaf ear to truths coming from her own sex, but if men would take a united stand in that direction we would soon see a decided improvement in woman. Woman acts from expediency, man according to what he really is. The woman who is really man's equal is the one who feels humiliated by his tolerance in judging her.

Too Much Meddling by Uplifters.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MAYBE the farmers are living the lives they like, just as many others who are not farmers are eking out existence in the way that suits them best. Things modern are new—coldly and calculatingly new, with all the romance out of them, and these uplifters may not understand how it is possible for others not to fall in with their scientific ideas.

Officers of the American forces in France were nonplused when a chateau owner whose castle they had been occupying insisted on its being restored as it was, with all the plumbing and modern conveniences taken out; which plumbing and modern conveniences they had liberally decided to leave as they were. The Frenchman insisted, and they had to be removed. He preferred the romance in the old chateau to the things of the uplifters whose ideas put into execution are to improve the human race and make everybody happy. Our natures are not all alike. Most of us would rather live our lives in our own way, than to have things mapped out for us, to which we are expected to conform for our own good. A little less uplifting and a little more fair dealing to enable us to live after the dictates of our hearts would be better.

THE TROUBLE WITH BUSINESS.

Speaking to the Mississippi Bankers' Association at Jackson a few days ago Secretary Mellon revived the famous "Mellon plan" with the statement that the Ways and Means Committee will probably recommend to the House next fall a "lowering of the maximum surtax rates and a radical reduction or elimination of the Federal estate tax."

He submitted familiar arguments. Acknowledging the economic soundness and fairness of the income tax, he insisted that the rates must not be so high as to hamper business by depriving it of the necessary capital. That was his principal point, though he mentioned other objections such as vexatious requirements which influence citizens to evade taxes and the privilege of legally escaping taxation invitingly offered in the form of tax-exempt securities. Those defects of the present revenue law and existing conditions, he insisted, must be corrected if business is to be healthy, vigorous and expanding.

Another interesting view of business was contributed by Lew Hahn, managing director of the Retail Dry Goods Association, in considering whether President Coolidge's widely exploited personal thrift was having a restraining effect and, in a way promoting a somewhat mild buyers' strike. Retail trade, the speaker continued, "is a sensitive thing and frequently responds, either slowing or quickening, to events which in themselves seem trivial." It was admitted that retail trade has been slowing down, but Mr. Hahn absolved the President of any responsibility. Indeed, he indorsed thrift, hoped that Mr. Coolidge's personal example would be widely emulated and asserted a thrifty people was the only sound basis of permanent prosperity. By thrift, however, he did not mean niggardliness but rather a happy mean between miserly hoarding that leads to unemployment and hard times and reckless extravagance with its equally unfortunate consequences.

Mr. Mellon and Mr. Hahn are looking at business from opposite points of view. The former has in mind the productive side of business, and his contention is a self-evident truth that business cannot prosper productively unless invigorated with needed capital. Taxes that deprive business of such sustenance are unwise and ultimately bring about business anemia and hard times. And Mr. Hahn might correctly and logically have discarded Mr. Coolidge's personal thrift as inconsequential and discussed the retail trade from the standpoint of excessive taxes, just as Mr. Mellon discussed the productive side of business.

The consumer has got to have capital to consume, just as the producer has got to have capital to produce. Excessive taxes on the former are quite as destructive to prosperity as excessive taxes on the latter. That the American consumer is being taxed unmercifully is not debatable. The maximum surtax rates on capital may be as unwise and ultimately destructive as Mr. Mellon says, but they are a slight burden compared with the crushing load strapped on the back of the staggering consumer. The income tax is counted in millions. The tariff tax, levied by the Fordney-McCumber law, is counted in billions. That tariff tax is bleeding the American consumer white. The cheeseparing personal economies of Mr. Coolidge are not preventing any American citizen from buying the necessaries of life. The high prices, fostered by the tariff, are compelling the great body of the people to skimp.

Tax reform must go much further than the Mellon plan proposes if we are to have a sound, abiding prosperity. The producer must have capital, but he must also have a consuming public with the capital to buy what it needs. In other words, there must be a reasonable ratio between prices and wages if business is to thrive.

BAKER'S 100 PER CENT BOARD.

Gov. Baker's Eleemosynary Board henceforth will be 100 per cent subservient to the Governor, and his policy to restore the administration of the State institutions under the control of the board to spoils politics. The law of 1921 designed to take the institutions out of politics by making the Eleemosynary Board bipartisan is a dead letter. Reform has been shown the door and cannot be expected to return to the house of its enemies.

Charles E. Rendlen of Hannibal, the last remaining member who dissented from the firing of an efficient steward at the St. Joseph hospital to make way for Baker's brother-in-law, has resigned and given his reasons in a letter to the Governor. Probably he felt lonesome for the two comrades who preceded him out of the atmosphere of political servility to the free air of private life—one by proscription and the other by resignation.

To the credit of the three ex-members it may be said that they clung loyally to duty and principle as intended in the law, for two of them were Republicans. The Governor himself was nonpartisan only to the extent that he opposed Democrats and Republicans alike who refused to bend to the yoke of his personal patronage program. A board which was made bipartisan to eliminate politics has been made bipartisan for spoils.

The most exciting news Washington can produce is that there will be no news. Is Washington dead or just in hiding?

THE TIME TO INVESTIGATE.

One man's dream of empire faded when the last of the Oklahoma farmers William H. ("Alfalfa Bill") Murray transplanted to his Bolivian colony returned to the United States, bitter and disappointed. They charge enough of misrepresentation, lack of equipment, exorbitant profits for the promoter, etc., and Frederick J. Stinson, former Ambassador to the Argentine, promised to state their case to the Government at Washington. Other diplomats representing this country in South America are said to have requested Washington to stop such enterprises until there is an investigation.

That may be a happy afterthought, but it will accomplish little. It cannot change the fact that men schooled in American agriculture went to the cheap lands of the South American republic—still cheap, despite the promoter's profit, and failed to approach success. There was lack of market, transportation and the conveniences of civilization to which they were accustomed. They didn't like it and they didn't prosper and were grateful for assistance in returning to America.

No investigation will change that, and the only investigation of much merit is the sort that is made before undertaking such adventure in far places. A man should know the country he invests in, before he burns his bridges. He should know himself, too, and whether he has the adaptability to adjust his life to conditions that must be vastly different to his home surroundings. Only those thus gifted are qualified to be pioneers, or likely to be satisfied with such violent change.

THE LEGISLATIVE GRIST.

The recent session of the Missouri Legislature was considered an inactive one. Yet 180 measures were enacted. Two of these repealed previous legislation. The remaining 178 furnish an interesting cross-section of the work of legislative bodies, at a time when the complaint of "too many laws" is being heard frequently. Classification of Missouri's 1925 grist of legislation, not all of which will receive the Governor's approval, shows measures dealing with these subjects:

Appropriations, 23; insurance companies, 13; banks, 10; duties, salaries and fees of officials, 12; courts, 12; State institutions, 6; fish and game, 6; elections and registration, 6; taxation, 7; road, sewer and waterworks taxes, 9; automobile license and gasoline tax, 5; blind and other dependents, 6; railroads and utilities, 6; schools, 4; food and grain inspection, 6; mortgages and securities, 8; corporations, 3; estates, 2; co-operative companies, 3; marketing bureau, 2; agriculture, 3; towns and villages, 2; Kansas City local measures, 3; health and safety, 2; osteopathy, 1; county finance, 1; repair of war statue, 1; soldier bonus, 1; St. Louis police salaries, 1; workmen's compensation, 1; public accountants, 1; beauty parlors, 1; farm loans, 1; building and loan associations, 1; city zoning, 1; forestry, 1; rivers, 1; county boundary, 1; cemeteries, 1; county fairs, 1; public work, 1; public bath houses, 1; partition of lands, 1.

This is a lot of legislation. It would be strange if some of it were not unnecessary. But it does not contain much that applies to the general public, or that the average citizen, not in official or fiduciary position, need bother his head about. Inspection of the entire list shows two measures which conceivably might apply to almost anybody. One of these makes it a misdemeanor to write a check on a bank where the writer is aware that he has not funds sufficient to meet the check. The other makes it unlawful to possess frogs, dead or alive, between April 15 and June 15.

NURMI LAUGHS AT DIET.

Now it appears that Nurmi, the peerless Paavo, is a stranger to the horrors of the training table. At that frightful word, DIET, before which our own athletes are wont to salaam and grovel, Nurmi actually laughs. The elaborate system of dietetics which American savants have evolved and pushed forward as the key to athletic supremacy is all Greek to the Finn.

Yet Nurmi is the athletic marvel of the age. World's records are toys in his hands, to be destroyed almost at will. For four years he has not been beaten in a scratch race, though he has run at every distance and under the most trying conditions. To all appearances, he is as tireless as a machine.

Nurmi, to the dismay of American trainers, eats fatty meats, gravies, bread and butter, starches, hillocks of pudding and drinks quarts of coffee. In fact, the foods Nurmi consumes are nearly a catalogue of the foods which are on the index expurgatorius of the American training table. These, indeed, are gladsome tidings.

Of course, becoming the world's greatest runner has not been all beer and skittles to Paavo, nor has it been all Welsh rabbits and lobster Newburg. At the age of 28, he has behind him the toughening climate of Finland, and the strengthening effect of coarse, soil-grown foods. What is more important, he has been busily engaged in perfecting his art since the age of 6.

Even so, after weeks and weeks of violation of American dietetics, during which he has outdistanced every competitor, Nurmi is called savior by thousands of our diet-ridden sufferers. Eat, drink and be merry, is Paavo's brave philosophy, for tomorrow we must win the 5000-meter race. Hurrah for the flying Finn!

Answer No. 457,654 to the famous question, "Who won the war"? Admiral Fiske.

PEOPLE WON'T BE DRIVEN TO CHURCH.

American people are threatened with a breakdown of health and character, in the opinion of the Rev. John Ferguson, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance. He adds that "economic and political chaos is sure to follow moral chaos, just as it did in Europe before the great war."

It is not strange that the Rev. Mr. Ferguson views with alarm; that is one of the purposes of his position. But the people will not be greatly perturbed by his gloomy forecast. They must realize that the span of life is longer now than in the periods when Puritans dominated the scene. Undoubtedly Sundays are paying larger dividends in health than ever they did before. There is opposition still, but liberal minds have learned a Sunday afternoon at golf or tennis is not sinful; that an outing in field or woodland may be of spiritual as well as physical benefit. On the matter of health, Mr. Ferguson's assertion is due to be discounted generally.

Character is not so easily gauged. Undoubtedly humanity has improved in many ways. In this world that seems so wicked to the Lord's Day Alliance leader, there is less child labor than of old; less grinding of toilers generally, and much done to alleviate suffering. Also, there is a growing trend toward peace. All these and more express improvement in character, surely.

Yet none will deny there is much crime and immorality. The responsibility is not easily fixed. Certainly it cannot be traced wholly or in the main to our attitude toward Sabbath observance. And part of it is due to the endless regulation fostered by the Lord's Day Alliance; the plethora of laws sponsored by those who would shape all conduct to their own pattern, and succeed in engendering rebellion and creating contempt for all laws.

The churches will call more and claim more when the notion that people can be driven to church or legislated into righteousness is abandoned. Character is not built by sumptuary statute nor strengthened by paternalism.

According to police news the "dress well and succeed" slogan is working like a charm in the stick-up profession.

AND THEN HE TOOK UP PLOWING.

BALLAD OF A COLLAR-BUTTON.

(Suggested by a Post-Dispatch Editorial.)

"This world is all a fleeting show,"
As Moore once said when feeling sad;
All things of earth must change and go.
There's nothing stable to be had:
We're born, we live, we love, we die,
We pass our round of fleeting days,
And then beneath the sod we lie,
But Mr. Snyder's button stays.

Old Omar, too, as you may note,
Bemoaned the fact that roses fade,
And that the one of whom he wrote
Too soon would in her tomb be laid:
Fair Helen's charms are one with Tyre,
O'er Nimrod's bones the cattle graze,
And muted aye is Sappho's lyre,
But Mister Snyder's button stays.

Gay Francis, too, would now and then
Inquire about the last year's snow;
When he was sad, he seized his pen
And wished to know where ladies go;
Oh, ladies die! It seems a shame
That charms must fade which poets praise;
Our loves are housed in mortal frame,
But Mr. Snyder's button stays.

The Psalmist says that flesh is grass,
And grass must fade at winter's breath;
Time flies? Ah, no! 'Tis we, alas,
Who soon must hold the hand of Death!
All things of earth are fragile things,
All life first blooms and then decays;
'Tis thus that ev'ry poet sings,
But Mister Snyder's button stays.

L'Envoi.

Sweet Prince, too soon our course is run,
Our life the law of change obeys;
Like passing cloud our task is done,
But Mister Snyder's button stays.

Polygamy is an old word. It means many wives. Monogamy indicates one mate. It's old, too. But hemigamy is really a new word. It is a state in which a man has only half a wife. Such is the case of the man whose marital partner goes every morning to her work, leaving the house vacant. Hemigamy is on the increase.

Sir: Your stirring editorial appeal to poets for an ode to Citizen Snyder's 42-year-old collar button is doomed to fall on barren ground. Or, rather, the theme itself is sterile. Mere verse may issue from such a subject, but never poetry and, least of all, the ode. Generous feeling, not mean grubbiness, is the inspiration of true poetry. The characteristic form for glorifying such picayune economy is not the ode, but the "state paper" as put out by cautious Cal.

MOTHER.

I am thinking of you, mother—
Not because it's Mother's Day;
But because I love you dearly
In the same old happy way.
You have shared my joy and sorrow,
Kissed away my childish tears,
And the memory of those old days
I have cherished thru the years.
Some days have been long and lonely
Since we parted, mother mine—
But today is your day, dearest,
And I'm kneeling at your shrine.

While the tragedy of distance
Separates us many miles—
I can feel the warmth and softness
Of your glad, unending smiles;
And they seem to bear me upward
As on joyous wings above,
'Til I glimpse a bit of heaven
Shining on me thru your love.
So I send this little message,
And my eyes are dim with tears—
Just to tell you, mother darling,
You've grown dearer with the years.

WOMEN DIPLOMATS.

From the New York Times.

THOSE cynical Europeans are inclined to look with amused tolerance on the appointment of a lady to be secretary of the American legation in Switzerland. Only the soviets have heretofore thought of such an innovation. Bolshevist Hungary, on one occasion, had decided to send Mme. Rosika Schwimmer to Switzerland, but her government was overthrown before she reached her post; soviet Russia was more successful and sent as minister to Sweden a prominent lady bolshevik. That the United States should follow this example seems but little surprise. They know, abroad, that we go in for lady governors and that we have also had lady judges, lady mayors and honorable congresswomen. The ubiquitous "Mr. and Mrs." crossed the ocean to myself and amuse foreign diplomats and politicians. They couldn't quite make out why we were not willing to let the ladies continue to run things—in the background. This is particularly true in the realm of diplomacy, where it has long been well known that the ladies, no matter how unofficial their status, exert a great influence on the course of events.

AMERICA AND THE ORIENT.

JOHN DEWEY in the New Republic.

OUR Senate with its rude slap at Japanese pride has prevented 200 or 250 Japanese a year from migrating to this country. In consequence, American business interests have suffered greatly in loss of contracts in Japan, while, an affair of infinitely greater importance, the growth of democratic ideas in Japan, the one thing calculated to increase American prestige there, has undergone its chief setback, and the anti-American influence of the imperialistic and bureaucratic class has received a reinforcement which is most welcome to it. It is not much to say that Chinese sentiment has not yet turned definitely against us, but it is known to all in contact with the Chinese educated classes, whether at home or among the student body in this country, that many Chinese are beginning seriously to ask whether the United States is going back on its traditional policy of friendly detachment and is approaching a union or understanding with European policies of economic and political aggression.

FOX FARMING.

From the Columbus Dispatch.

IT WILL surprise many to learn that about 90 per cent of the silver-black fox pelts handled in the fur markets last year came from the fox farms of the United States and Canada, and not from the native haunts of this highly prized fur bearer. This information will certainly be received with satisfaction by the many who have been sorely troubled over the cruelty inseparable from the steel-trap method of keeping up the fur supply. As a result of the fox farming movement, there will be far more silver-black foxes born within a few years than if their skins were not used for furs at all, and the average fox will die a far easier death than if it had to take the chances of malice in the Northern wilds. In the United States and Canada there are now about 1200 fox farms in operation.

NOTED SCIENTISTS AND EDUCATORS TO MEET HERE

Twentieth Annual Convention of American Association of Museums to Open May 17.

The twentieth annual convention of the American Association of Museums, which will open at Hotel Chase May 17, will be attended by noted scientists and educators from all parts of the country, making the convention one of the most important educational and scientific meetings held in St. Louis this year.

The sessions of the convention, which closes May 21, will be held in the museums of the city, affording an opportunity to the delegates of studying the collections. The meeting will be devoted chiefly to practical demonstrations and round-table discussions. A feature will be a trip to the Cahokia Mounds under the direction of Dr. Henry Whelpley of St. Louis, an authority on the works of the Mound Builders. Another out-door session will be at Shaw's Garden, where the collection of rare floral growth will be discussed.

Program of Convention.

The opening day of the convention will include an inspection visit to the Forest Park zoo, followed by a trip down the Mississippi on the harbor boat Erastus Wells. The annual banquet of the association will be held at Hotel Chase at 7 p. m. May 19. The local committee in charge of the convention is headed by W. K. Bixby, chairman; C. G. Rathmann, vice president, and Amelia Meissner, secretary. The complete program follows:

Sunday, May 17.

10 a. m.—Registration at the Chase Hotel.

11 a. m.—Visit to the Zoological Garden. Busses will take members and guests from the hotel.

12 m.—Luncheon on garden lawn. Guests of the officers and members of the Zoological Society.

1 p. m.—Trip down the Mississippi River. Guests of the local committee. Busses will take the party from the Zoological Garden to the harbor boat.

Monday, May 18.

10 a. m.—General session at the Chase Hotel. Presiding, President Chauncey J. Hamlin.

Address of welcome, John C. Tobin, president Board of Education.

Culture Museums and the use of culture material, Laura M. Bragg, director The Charleston Museum.

Discussion.

Transaction of business.

2 p. m.—General session at the Chase Hotel.

Transaction of business.

Training of museum workers. Report of the Committee on Courses in Museology and discussion led by Dr. S. A. Barrett, director, Milwaukee Public Museum.

VISCOUNT GREY DESCRIBES INCIDENTS OF A DAY'S RAMBLE WITH ROOSEVELT

British Statesman Struck by Former President's Knowledge of Birds—What He Said of Taft and Politics.

ONE of the interesting chapters in the Memoirs of Viscount Grey, recently published, relates the details of a day spent in England with Theodore Roosevelt on the latter's return from his African big game hunt. Excerpts are printed below.

Viscount Grey of Falloden is one of the most distinguished of contemporary British statesmen. He was at the head of the Foreign Office at the beginning of the World War. His efforts to avert the conflict failing, he became the foremost of those who insisted that Great Britain must stand beside France and Belgium on the battlefield. His long and brilliant career has been marked by a singular absence of ambition for personal aggrandizement. Says Viscount Grey:

While Roosevelt was still President, Bryce had written to me to say that after Roosevelt's term of office was over he intended to travel, and, among other places, to visit England. He had not heard the songs of British birds, and would time his visit so as to be in England at the time of the singing of birds. He would like it to be arranged that someone who knew the songs of birds should spend a day walking with him and naming the songs as they were heard.

In youth I had spent much time in identifying the songs of different species; hearing and recognizing them had been a pleasure kept up every year, and all the common songs were very familiar to me. I therefore replied that I should be glad to do this service, and probably I named May as the best month for the purpose. Roosevelt left the White House in 1909, and traveled on a big-game expedition in British East Africa, eventually passing through the Sudan, and so by Egypt to Europe. He had a royal progress; the newspapers were full of it, Europe resounded with it; the birds were singing, but I doubted whether their songs would be heard. But the thing had been in Roosevelt's plans, and he had not forgotten it, and while he was still on the continent Arthur Lee, who was to be his host in England, had a message desiring him to arrange a time for the bird walk with me.

The program for Roosevelt was already very full, and but for Roosevelt's thoroughness the walk would have been squeezed out. It required a whole day to be set apart for it, and the last day of his visit was the only opportunity. That postponed the walk till well into June, but the weather was good singing weather, gray and moist, and not hot and dry, and the birds sang well. This part of the story has been described in an address given at Harvard, Roosevelt's own university, in 1919, and must not be repeated here, but there are other aspects of the visit that are also of interest.

Read Speech to Him.

Soon after his arrival, Whitelaw Reid brought him to see me at the Foreign Office. Roosevelt was to be received at the Guildhall; a speech was expected of him; he wished me to know beforehand what he was going to say; he produced the manuscript or type and read it to me. It expressed enthusiastic praise of the work of Britain in the Sudan and Egypt—praise so unstinted and thorough and strong that I listened to it with a glow of satisfaction. It was the finest tribute ever paid by a citizen of one country to the work of another; and it came from the most world-renowned citizen of the United States in praise of British work in governing an Oriental country, that sort of work of which Americans were apt to be most critical and on which they looked most askance. The tribute was of real value to us as well as very pleasant to hear. Then came one note of criticism. Roosevelt had evidently come in contact with people who thought that since Cromer had left Egypt the British purpose was faltering and the grasp relaxing. He uttered a note not only of encouragement, but of warning.

"Get on with the good work, but if you are not going to get on with it, if you are going to let it drop, then get out," that was the gist of it.

When the reading was finished, Roosevelt asked me if there was anything to which I took exception. It would have been a poor and paltry thing to say that we appreciated the praise, but resented the criticism; to ask him to let the tribute stand, but to leave out the advice. I had no hesitation in deciding that the speech as a whole was so valuable to us, that I would ask for no alteration and accept it as it was.

How much more worth while it would be to have such a eulogy of British work in Egypt and the Sudan than the usual polite commonplaces, carrying no conviction and with no force and drive behind them! If there were people who after lapping up the praise were going to be annoyed by the advice, let them be annoyed; they deserved to be.

Some Criticism of Speech.

So the appeal was delivered as read to me beforehand. Cromer, who was present, was well pleased with it, but there was some criticism to the effect that it was not Roosevelt's business to give advice. The answer was easy—it was not his business to praise, either. If we were glad that he went out of his way to do the one, we should not resent the other.

The advice itself was wholesome, and goes to the very root of the British position in Africa and Asia. We stay in certain fronts of those continents because we can do certain things better than these would be done without us; efficient administration free from corruption, preservation of order, development of the country. Let us be sure that we are doing these things, that we mean to go on doing them; this is our justification for staying in the country; if we are not doing this or do not mean to go on doing it, we had better come out; let there be a decision one way or the other, firm in our minds and known to the world.

Since Roosevelt spoke we have decided to get out of Egypt and not to get out of the Sudan. If we are to maintain and continue to do the work in the Sudan that Roosevelt praised so highly we must make our purpose and intention as clear to do this in the Sudan as we have made it that we are not going on with the work in Egypt.

Talked About Taft.

During the walk with Roosevelt and the evening after it at the Inn in the New Forest, our attention was given largely to birds, but the talk also ranged over other subjects. Roosevelt's spirit was much troubled by what was happening in his own country since he left office. This concerned internal policy and administration in the United States, of which I had not knowledge sufficient to form an opinion. The purport of what Roosevelt said is given here as he spoke it, without comment of mine. He spoke of Taft and of their work together with very live affection; he had wished Taft to succeed him, had supported him, made way for him. How could he now break with Taft and attack him? Roosevelt spoke of this prospect in a way that left no doubt of sincerity and poignancy of feeling. On the other hand, how could he sit still and see all his own work being undone and the policies in which he believed being ruined? Roosevelt had come to no decision then, but there was evidence of strong internal combustion of spirit. Such spirits as his, however, are not consumed in this process; the result is energy, decision and action. What it eventually was in this instance is well known.

The popular impression of Roosevelt conveyed by the Press was, of course, that of a very important and striking personality, but it was nevertheless in one respect very inadequate. He was renowned as a man of action, public opinion was fascinated by this quality, and it was not so generally recognized that he was also remarkable as a man of reading and knowledge. The student is often a contrast to the man of action, and it is rare to find the two capacities possessed in a very high degree and combined in one person. The man of great knowledge is apt to be so balanced in mind as to be sometimes hesitating in opinion; and when he expresses an opinion he will take time to avoid overemphasis of one point, to qualify or to give finish and literary form of expression; he eschews the rough and ready style.

Remarkable Knowledge.

Roosevelt could be rough and he was always ready, and his manner in controversy was that of a fighter. There was not much of the patience of Job, there was a great deal of the war-horse rejoicing in his strength and saying "Ha! ha," among the trumpets. So perhaps it came to be overlooked that he had great knowledge; sometimes it was even assumed that the rush of his life had left no time to acquire it. This was the very reverse of the truth. His knowledge of birds, though a small instance, was very remarkable. With few exceptions the birds of the North American states are different from ours; there are more thrushes and larks, for example, in the United States than in Britain, but the species that they have are not the same as ours. Of all the songs that Roosevelt and I heard in the one afternoon and evening of our walk there was only one song, that of the golden-crested wren, that he recognized as being practically the same as the song of an American bird, and when I consulted the late Mr. Ogilvie Gaunt afterwards he told me that the resemblance in this instance was correct, and that it was the only one we could have heard in the walk.

Our time was short, and the number of varieties of birds heard or seen was not remarkable; but it amounted to between 40 and 50 different species, and there was not one of which Roosevelt did not know the general character and classification. This is the sort of thing that went on throughout the walk.

E. G.: Do you hear that?

P. R.: Yes, what bird is it?

E. G.: A blackcap.

P. R.: So that's the song of the blackcap.

Statement on Budget Law.

It was not encessary for him to see the bird; he knew already what sort of bird it was and what it was like.

I was told when I was in the United States a year afterwards by one of the greatest authorities on natural history that Roosevelt was the only amateur he had known who could in talk hold his own with real experts on the subject of mammals. Those competent to appreciate found the same sort of revelation of his knowledge in history. He had a store of knowledge remarkable both for range and volume, and his power of acquiring it quickly in a life of such constant and strenuous activity must have been extraordinary. But in controversy he would take a short cut to his point.

I heard him asked once whether it would be possible in the United States to pass into law a Budget with the changes in taxation corresponding to those proposed in Lloyd George's Budget in 1909. The answer was not a learned exposition of the limitations of the American Constitution; it was simply this: It would depend upon whether a Judge of the Supreme Court came down heads or tails."

Darrow Says Courts Are Only Cockpits for Lawyers

more mature minds than men of 50. When the people and the courts generally have realized that plain fact we may get somewhere in the introduction of intelligent methods into criminal practice."

"What was the hardest case you ever tried?" I inquired. "Well, I've tried a lot of cases. It was harder to get a fair hearing in the Loeb-Leopold case, I suppose, than any I ever tried. Same thing—mob psychology. The public wouldn't listen to any plea for an impartial hearing. It was inflamed and wanted just one thing—blood. So fierce and intolerant was this cry and so intense the pressure, that the mere effort of doing what was obviously the correct and intelligent thing in the case shattered the Judge's health and sent him to the hospital with nervous prostration."

"Who was the most formidable prosecutor against whom you have ever been matched?"

"Harry Olson," was the unhesitating answer. This was interesting, because former Assistant State's Attorney Olson of Chicago is the present Judge Harry Olson of that city who played the role of Nemesis in bringing about the indictment of William C. Shepherd in the McClintock case of alleged murder by typhoid germs. "The ablest man against whom I have ever tried a case," Darrow continued, "was Senator Borah, who was the special prosecutor in the case of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone. But for the characteristics peculiar to a successful prosecutor, I never saw a man with Olson's shrewdness, pertinacity and plausibility. He was a terror before juries."

Early Labor Cases.

For those too young to remember, it may be explained that Moyer, "Big Bill" Haywood and Pettibone, labor organizers, were tried for the murder of ex-Gov. Stunenberg of Idaho, more than 20 years ago. He was assassinated by Harry Orchard, who made a confession implicating the three union officials. There was a fierce outcry for death sentence, but Darrow acquitted all three.

It was about 15 years ago that he defended the McNamaras, officials of the Structural Ironworkers' Union, charged with complicity in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times Building, in which many were killed. This case "made" William J. Burns' reputation as a detective. Again there was a prolonged plea for the death sentence, but one got life and the other 15 years.

However, what Darrow regards as his greatest victory was not a trial at all. When the industry of the nation had been crippled for months by the anthracite strike of 1902, President Roosevelt finally appointed a commission to get at the facts. Darrow represented the miners in this inquiry, and they won a signal victory, a victory which was of crucial and vital importance in those struggling pioneer days of organized labor. The outcome was agreement upon a form of arbitration which has kept the industry almost free of serious labor disturbances ever since.

Five years earlier Darrow had won a labor victory of equal importance. In those days the unions were fighting, fighting desperately, savagely, for the very right to exist, and when the fight overflowed into the courts, the great, shaggy, oak-like Darrow was their champion. It was in the celebrated Woodworkers' conspiracy case, of Oshkosh, Wis., that he made a memorable and scathing plea in behalf of men accused of destroying property by the act of striking and picketing, and acquitted them. That speech is still circulated in pamphlet form by labor unions, as a sort of declaration of independence. In it he said:

Sentiments Still Quoted.

"The company may hire its lawyers and import its detectives into your community. It may send these defendants to jail. But so long as injustice and inhumanity exist, so long as employers grow fat and rich and powerful through their robbery and greed, so long as they build their palaces from the unpaid labor of their serfs, so long as they rob children of life and sunshine and joy, you will find other conspirators, thank God, to take the places of these as fast as the jail doors shall close upon them. If other conspirators should be wanting, I should be ashamed of the country in which I live. This is not a criminal case, and every actor in this drama understands it well. Lawyers may argue about the dotting of I or the crossing of a T, but every man of us knows that this drama is an important phase of the great social question that moves the world. Ordinarily men are brought into court because they are bad. These men were brought here because they love their fellow men." They were acquitted.

"That thing you were talking about," resumed Darrow—"about an incident deciding a case—the nearest experience I ever had to it was in the prosecution of the crew of the Eastland, the lake steamer which turned over at a Chicago pier and drowned 1000 people. At a preliminary hearing the prosecution put a university professor, an expert on navigation, on the stand. He proved conclusively by a lot of intricate diagrams, that the construction of the boat was wrong and dangerous. He knew his subject thoroughly, and I think he was right. Ordinarily, a lawyer would never cross-examine a witness like that, because the witness knows more about the subject than the lawyer does. But I asked him a few questions.

"I asked him how many men in the world knew what he did about navigation. He blushed, because he was an earnest man, and finally admitted that there might be one other—a professor at Cornell. 'And the prosecution,' I remarked, 'wants to put these steamboat engineers and sailors in prison for not knowing what only two men in the world know!' The Judge emphasized that point in deciding in our favor."

A long, arduous and thoughtful life, has been Darrow's. And now he asks only a few years to rest a little, meditate a little, and write a little. As he sums it all in "Farmington," that charming little autobiography which Mark Twain might have written:

"All my life I have been planning and hoping and thinking and dreaming and loitering and waiting. All my life I have been getting ready to begin to do something worth while. I have been waiting for the summer and waiting for the fall; I have been waiting for the winter and waiting for the spring; waiting for the night and waiting for the morning; waiting and dawdling and dreaming, until the day is almost spent and the twilight at hand.

Walsh Names Four Insidious Forces Affecting Legislation

of his very environment, votes the way his social friends would vote were they in the Senate. Strong men, and the Senate is full of them, are not influenced by "tea gossip" or the prejudices of society matrons on public questions. That attempts are made through social activities to influence some Senators is unquestionably true. However, it is only at certain periods that one hears of great activity in the "social lobby."

During the contest over the Newberry section, Senator Kenyon of Iowa openly referred to "the activities of the social lobby and how effective it is." Indeed, one of the most powerful speeches delivered during that debate in the Senate was Senator Kenyon's attack upon the "social lobby."

The family of Senator Newberry was very popular and his many friends rather naturally disturbed themselves in favor of the Senator.

In this and in some other cases people of social standing in Washington have sought to make their influence felt on Congress. A different story might be told in cases like the Newberry one had the Senate deliberated and voted in secret.

I referred in an earlier article to what I believe was a successful "social lobby campaign," when pressure was brought on the Senate for confirmation of the promotion of an army officer who was vigorously opposed by former officers and men of the Yankee Division, to which the regular in question had been attached in France.

The idea that the social lobby is effective presupposes that most Senators are active socially. The fact is that most Senators never enter the social life of Washington. I mean the "gilded" social life. This is chiefly a prerogative of the wealthy Senators. To be in Washington society, as anywhere else, you must entertain as well as be entertained. This is expensive. The salary and income of many Senators forbid it.

The public question that in recent years stirred the social life of Washington more than any other that I have observed was the soldiers' bonus.

During the discussion of that subject in the Senate you could not go to a dinner table without hearing pretty severe denunciation of those Senators who supported the bonus. They were branded as "unpatriotic," "demagogues" and "raiders of the public treasury." A Senator had to have a cast-iron disposition to support the soldiers' bonus and live through one of those dinners. The whole estimate of a man's public career seemed to be measured by the social group of Washington according to his attitude on this one question. The subject was always discussed with extreme bitterness.

Wife's Censure Effective.

I remember an occasion at one of those dinners where a host and hostess had a very difficult time in preventing the sudden departure of their guests, two pro-bonus Senators, who happened to find themselves obliged to defend their position against the combined and vigorous attacks of the entire dinner party.

Of course, the wife and members of the family of a Senator who is active socially have some influence at times on the senatorial vote of the head of the family.

I recall a conversation a few years ago with one of the elderly conservative Senators which indicates that social influence in the family may count for something in the halls of Congress. It was soon after the war. There had been a spirited debate and a close vote in the Senate on the size of the peace-time army. The Senator in question, in all his social relations, was surrounded by the kind of people who are always for a larger army. The majority was for reducing the army and the Senator had voted with the majority.

I commended him for his independence. He replied: "Yes, but take it from me, I got hell from my wife, when she read in the newspapers the record of that vote."

The conversation ended. A week later there was a reconsideration of the vote, and I noticed that the Senator changed his position. Apparently his wife's censure had been effective.

To what extent are White House influences exerted to control the action of the Senate? Let us be more specific. To what extent have Presidens in recent years used the power of their office to control Senators or to chastise them whenever their wills upon political questions might clash with the executive will? The denial of patronage makes it more difficult for a Senator to obtain re-election. Can a President, by threatening to withhold political patronage from Senators, control their votes? Frankly, yes.

Petty Humiliation of Senators.

I have seen the most petty means employed to humiliate Senators who differ with an executive. I have in mind a case, not an unusual one.

A certain committee of the Senate, in accordance with custom, was asked to recommend to the President three of its members to make the annual inspection of the Government mint at Philadelphia—a technical requirement of the law. Three names were submitted. When the members were notified of their appointments one of the three names submitted was not approved. Thus was the Senator, a member of the President's own party, given executive punishment. He had differed with the President on a matter in which the latter was deeply interested. The retaliation was so petty as to be amusing to the Senators, for the annual visit to the mint is a service so perfunctory as to be shunned by nearly all the Senators.

It is only just to say that these petty punitive acts of the executive are often done by subordinates—members of the Cabinet, department heads and other appointees and partisans of the President. But all Senators know that all administrations indulge in these practices.

The pressure exerted upon Senators by a President in favor of his policy is at times tremendous. Many a Senator, conscientiously differing with the executive, has had his soul harassed for weeks, and felt the burdens of a political cross bearing heavily upon his shoulders. An unseen crown of thorns is often pressed by a President upon the forehead of an official who publicly appears to be wearing a wreath of laurels.

I recall a story of executive intolerance related to me by a Senator of fine moral and intellectual attainments. He was sent for by a certain President with whom he had been intimately associated in promoting party policies for years. A mutual regard and pride in their joint political co-operation long existed between them.

The President asked the Senator to support a constitutional amendment pending before the Senate that needed only a few votes to make the necessary two-thirds majority. With sincere regret and reluctance, the Senator felt constrained to decline the President's request to change his position, explaining that his State political platform, his State Legislature by resolutions, and his own previous utterances and votes prevented it. That Senator no longer found welcome at the White House—he was publicly made an administration "outcast"; privately I always believed him a political martyr because he followed his own and not a President's conscience. Both were Democrats.

Scarcely a strong, independent character has served in the Senate for any length of time who has not had executive punishment meted out to him. The stories of each Senator would make interesting political history.

Not so long ago a few Senators of the minority party were discussing the methods employed by executives to have their vetoes sustained. To the surprise of the group, one of the Senators related a personal experience. A call from the White House came asking him to see the President at a certain evening hour. Of course, an invitation from the President to call is a command. Upon arrival at the appointed time, he was duly escorted into the President's presence, and informed of his wishes that he change his previous position and support the veto. The views publicly expressed by the Senator made this impossible and he so informed the President.

Scarcely had the incident been narrated when another Senator in the group told of the same experience with the same President concerning the same subject matter. Both these Senators were Southern Democrats. Was there a veiled inference that might be drawn by either of them that if they chose to support the President they would not suffer in political prestige in their respective states by reason of any Federal appointments that would be made—there being practically no party of the executive in those states to reckon with? Perhaps not. It may be only a coincident that only Southern rather than Western or Northern Democratic Senators were importuned to support the President's veto.

No Senator has any doubt of the truth of the Idahoan Senator's remark during the Warren debate—"If there is any atmosphere in God's world that weakens a man's backbone it is the atmosphere of Washington." He could have substituted White House for Washington.

In my opinion not an executive controlled Congress, but only a free and independent Congress, responsible to the people's will and each Senator to his oath, can meet the requirement of the Constitution; can give to the Government the permanence and balance which will safeguard the future and promote the permanent public welfare. Complete executive control may promote the prestige of a President and strengthen his leadership, but in the long run will it promote the public weal?

How "Lame-Ducks" Get Jobs.

It will surprise the public—no Senator, however—to learn of the complete control an executive exercises over the votes of "lame-duck" Senators. I refer to those Senators who have failed of renomination or re-election in the biennial elections and yet retain their seats in the Senate until the following March 4.

In a recent session, there were 11 such hold-over members—five Republicans, five Democrats and one Farm-Laborite. At least eight of these Senators had ambition for a presidential appointment, with the result that in any test vote where it was believed that the executive was vitally interested, eight of these votes were for his position. Some of these Senators, Republicans and Democrats, were openly accused of seeking by their votes a presidential appointment. Some of them have since received executive appointments. Only recently a retiring Democratic Senator received an appointment that he was publicly accused of seeking

Sale of "Mayfair" Electric Washers

The Improved, Modern Oscillator Type—$160 Value for ¶ Note how extreme is the saving! Our dominance in buying is followed by dominance in value-giving! Equaled only by the excellence of the Washer that we offer! And you have only to see the "Mayfair" to realize the advantage of securing one for $99; it would regularly sell for $160. Men and women who understand washing principles will especially appreciate its worth—not only its smooth performance, but also its mechanical excellence is apparent. The illustration shows the cabinet and the mechanism. Guaranteed for one year.

Simple, Sturdy Mechanical Construction—Highly Efficient, Easily Operated, Always Under Control

Fewer machanical parts than most Washers—and those parts perfectly made and put together for long service.

Action is noiseless, cleaning clothes by combined agitation, suction and gentle friction movements.

Operator has absolute control of wringer—right-hand control acts instantly. 12-in. cushion rolls.

Cabinet is heavy sheet steel, enameled inside and out. Frame is of carefully riveted pressed steel.

Tub operates on ball bearing—an exclusive feature of Mayfair—giving smooth oscillation without friction or noise.

Driving mechanism enclosed in large metal housing filled with grease. No need of oil can lubrication except for motor.

Tub and wringer driven by ¼-h.-p. Emerson motor, wound for overload duty.

Tub is oval, made of heavy 20-oz. cold rolled copper, tinned inside and polished outside.

An auxiliary steel shelf for tub or basket—removable when not in use—is another exclusive Mayfair feature.

The Mayfair stabilizer levels the Machine and holds it steady on an uneven floor.

No gears are exposed—every part of the mechanism is enclosed. Hinged doors make inside of cabinet easily accessible.

Positive tub lock makes it impossible to throw the machine into gear accidentally while working at tub.

Holds Pact With France First Step to Security

have lost, all our late Allies fearful of losing what they won. One-half of Europe is furiously angry, the other half dangerously afraid. The friction between these inflamed emotions is incessant and acts as some irritant, poisoning the wounds which are yet unhealed. War begets provocation, armaments, secret alliances, ill-treatment of minorities. These, in turn, beget a greater hatred, and stimulate a desire for revenge wherever fear is intensified and its consequences are enhanced. The vicious circle is thus established.

The action and counteraction of revenge and fear are visible today in every continental country, through their political, as distinct from the psychological, effect varies in essential proportions. The smaller ex-enemies, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, are so completely surrounded and overpowered by their neighbors, that for them revenge has become a sullen reflective emotion rather than an active political hope. In Austria this feeling takes the form of a desire to fuse with Germany. Hungaria and Bulgaria are recalcitrant, but for the moment overawed. If Turkey were to have again a European policy her attitude might not be dissimilar. While therefore our minor ex-enemies are not strong enough to create a distance by themselves yet they are likely to foment the causes of disunity and to profit by any disturbance which may arise elsewhere.

(2) GERMANY.

The attitude of Germany. Although Germany is at present quite incapable of undertaking aggressive actions, is it certain that with her great military chemical potentiality she will sooner or later again become a powerful military factor. For the moment it may well be true that the more intelligent Germans desire peace; they feel that Germany must first re-establish her economic and financial position; they realize that she can only do so in circumstances of comparative stability and even that such stability implies in a broad sense the execution of the Dawes scheme and even of the treaty of Versailles. On the other hand, they are aware that one day Germany will again be strong. There are but few Germans who seriously hope to exert their strength when reacquired against the British Empire. It may be doubted even if the majority of Germans today desire a war of revenge against France; but it may be confidently asserted that as soon as Germany recovers there will be a steady movement towards the making of what are for a German the two most objectionable provisions of the peace settlement, namely, the Polish Corridor and the partition of Silesia. These two questions are of such importance that they merit more substantial treatment.

1. The Polish Corridor. By the treaty of Versailles not only was Poland restored to independence but she was also at the expense of Germany given access to the sea and the use of the port of Danzig. The consequent readjustment of Germany's frontiers necessitated the complete severance of East Prussia from the rest of Germany by the narrow strip of territory known as the Polish Corridor. A special regime was established in Danzig which was declared a free city under the protections of the League of Nations. In this city, originally a German town colony founded on conquered Polish soil, and even now having a population 94 per cent German, special rights were secured to Poland, including the control of foreign affairs, customs and railway communications, and the port was placed under separate administration ensuring facilities for Polish trade and shipping.

2. Upper Silesia. In Upper Silesia after a plebiscite held among turmoil and uproar Poland, who polled 40 per cent of the total votes, received by a decision of the League of Nations a considerable tract of territory containing at least 80 per cent of the developed and 95 per cent of the undeveloped mineral wealth of Silesia and large enclaves inhabited by near German majorities.

There is obviously the danger that a nation of over sixty millions will not permanently acquiesce in being thus sundered from the province which was the cradle of the Prussian State or being deprived of those mineral resources on which the national prosperity was largely based.

(4) THE ATTITUDE OF FRANCE.

France is afraid of Germany because:

1. She is Germany's neighbor.
2. She has within living memory been twice invaded by Germany.
3. The birth rate in France is declining.
4. The birth rate in Germany is increasing.

These circumstances have inevitably and justifiably led France to place her security above all other considerations. It may be well at this stage to summarize the history of the security question as dealt with since the armistice:

(1) Marshal Foch having defeated Germany insisted that if there was to be any security for France, of peace for Europe, the German frontier must cease at the Rhine. That, he stated, was the only effective guarantee of French security. France did not want to annex the territory between herself and the Rhine; all she wished was that this territory should be detached from Germany proper and that the Rhine should thus serve as an abiding barrier between France and her hereditary enemy.

(2) A treaty or guarantee under which Great Britain and America pledged themselves in the event of any unprovoked aggression on the part of Germany to come immediately to France's assistance.

(3) The occupation of an extended period of the Rhineland.

(4) The assurance under Articles 42 and 43 that any violation of the provision for the demilitarization of the Rhineland would be considered an act of war.

(5) The dasarmament of Germany under the supervision of the allies.

(6) Marshal Foch pointed out at the time safeguards (3) and (4) above were provisional in duration, whereas safeguard (5) was uncertain in effect. The Anglo-American guarantee on the other hand might well have given France a sense of security had it ever been put into effect. As is well known however, it was rejected by the United States and therefore lapsed altogether.

7. The French were thus left under the impression that not only had they been refused the Rhine barrier, but that they had also been deprived of the only serious compensation offered to them for the abandonment of this their main desideratum. They determined, therefore, to create subsidiary safeguards to take the place of those refused to them by their Western allies.

8. The first of these expedients was to supplement the deficiency of French man power by enlisting large numbers of colored troops.

9. The second expedient was the policy known as the policy of the Little Entente, under which the new states to the east of Germany were to be welded into a compact block united to each other and connected to France by a complicated system of alliances, subsidies and military missions. The complexity of this artificial connexus is best shown by the Memorandum and Diagram attached to this paper.

10. The policy of the Little Entente while securing the encirclement of Germany and while redressing to some extent the balance of power, was none the less a policy of desperations. The solidarity of the Little Entente was not in itself very dependable—the exigencies of these satellites were liable to constitute a serious and increasing drain on French resources, and the precarious position of Poland and Rumania in relation not to Germany only but also to Russia constituted an element not of security but of added apprehension.

(11.) It may well be that the realization of this inherent instability of the Little Entente was what inspired the French Government to press upon the Fifth Assembly of the League of Nations the acceptance of the Protocol for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes. They hoped by these means to fuse their specific responsibilities into more general responsibilities assured under the aegis of the League of Nations. They now realize that it is most unlikely that the Geneva Protocol will in its present form be accepted either by His Majesty's Government or by the Governments of the Dominions.

(12.) There are indications, therefore, that French public opinion is now reverting to the original thesis of Marshal Foch and that it will be increasingly difficult for any French government to evacuate the Rhineland unless and until they receive some compensating guarantee for the future security of France.

The League of Nations.

How far can the League be counted to control a situation of such uncertainty? As a clearing house for international disputes the League of Nations is a wholly admirable institution. In many minor questions it has already played a most useful part, but at present and probably for years it will be unsafe to count upon its authority being sufficient to restrain a great power in any case in which that power considers its vital interests to be at stake. The time may come when the league will be able to deal not only with incidental disputes, but even with more permanent and deep-seated rivalries. It is vain to deny, however, that this stage has not yet been reached or to hide the fact that a sense of security cannot in such vital matters today emanate from Geneva.

II. Conclusions Regarding European Insecurity.

The following conclusions may be drawn from the above analysis:

(1) The future development of Russia is still incalculable; Europe must work out her own security in spite of Russia.

(2) The minor ex-enemies are not likely by themselves to cause serious trouble since the lesser treaties are guaranteed by a superiority of force. The Treaty of Versailles possesses no such safeguard, since the preponderance of whatever manpower would be certainly and unhesitatingly available against and not in favor of the status quo.

(3) Germany will sooner or later recover. She will certainly desire to revise the Polish clauses. If France were isolated and British neutrality were assured she might also endeavor to attack France.

(4) Unless France can be secured against this menace she will be driven to expedients which in the end will provoke the German revenge of which she stands in terror.

In a situation of such uncertitude the only sound line of British policy is the path of British interests. The road is too dark for any altruism or digression. It is our own security which must remain the sole consideration. What then are the essential conditions of the security of the British Empire?

Before answering such a question, it will be well to limit the scope of inquiry by the establishment of three axioms, namely:

1. That the policy known as splendid isolation is not today a practicable policy. For America, powerful and aloof, such a course is still perhaps a possibility. For the British Empire, no such escape is feasible. History and economics show that isolation in present conditions spells danger, vulnerability and impotence. Geography and aeronautics show that isolation is not in our case a scientific fact.

2. That conversely it would be unsound for the Governments of the empire to commit Great Britain and the dominions to responsibilities which are not direct necessities of imperial defense and of which the people of the empire could not approve. No promise must be given which public opinion in Great Britain and the dominions would not in the last resort be prepared to execute.

3. If we are to contribute to general security, we must establish first of all certainty and conviction. It is far better to give restricted promises which Europe realizes will be inevitably kept than to enter into wide commitments the ultimate execution of which would always allow of doubt. In order to carry such conviction we must base our policy not on possible tendencies, but on generally recongizable facts; we must be direct, simple, explicit.

What, therefore, in their simplest expression, are the needs of imperial defense? They may perhaps be summarized under three heads, namely:

(1) The defense of the individual dominions.

(2) The defense of the sea communications between Great Britain and the individual dominions.

(3) The defense of Great Britain itself, being the heart of the Empire.

Nos. 1 and 2 are generally realized and are not for the present directly menaced. No. 3 is not perhaps so fully recognized as an imperial necessity and is a matter which requires immediate consideration.

IV. The Defense of Great Britain.

The defense of Great Britain necessitates:

(a) That no single power shall be in a position to occupy or to dominate all the Channel and the North Sea ports.

(b) That the hostility of France, Belgium, and more incidentally Holland, Germany and Denmark, who now possess these ports, or of any combination of them, is to be avoided.

(c) That no third power at war with France or Belgium should be allowed to invade those countries so as to threaten the status quo of the Channel ports or of such French or Belgian territory as would expose Great Britain to aerial invasion.

(d) That it is consequently a necessity of British and therefore of imperial defense to reach some understanding with France and Belgium which may entail a guarantee on our part that these territories shall not fall into other hands.

V. British Interests as Affecting European Security.

As soon therefore as we realize that it is a necessity of imperial defense to guarantee to France and Belgium the possession of their present territory, it becomes possible to show how this necessity inevitably in any case can constitute a very important contribution to European security. We have only to define publicly what we recognize privately as an essential condition of the future existence of the Empire in order to secure the following very definite political advantages.

1. Europe will then know where she stands. It is doubtful whether even in 1914 Germany would have risked the Great War had she known for certain that the British Empire would come to France's assistance. If she is now assured that by invading France she will inevitably incur the hostility of the British Empire it is most unlikely that she will make any such endeavor.

2. France will know that her ultimate security is regarded as of direct interest to the British Empire. The provocative policy inspired by her present uncertainty will tend to diminish, she will contemplate with less alarm the impending evacuation of the Rhineland, she will be less inclined to constitute the Little Entente as an armed camp to the east of Germany, she will be able to settle down to financial stabilization and to a policy of debt repayment.

3. The smaller countries of Europe will learn that they must make peace with their neighbors and that it is unnecessary to wait in uneasy expectation for a second European conflagration.

4. A nucleus of certainty, of stability and of security will thereby be created. Such a nucleus can gradually be enlarged in expanding circles. There is nothing to prevent the eventual inclusion of Germany within the guarantees of security thus established.

(5) Although in the present mood of Europe, it would be useless even to mention the revision of the peace treaties, yet if the concert of Europe can thus gradually be recreated, saner counsels may prevail. It is conceivable, especially, if Germany with French good will becomes a member of the League of Nations and obtains a permanent seat on the Council, that it may become possible eventually to revise by European agreement the dangerous conditions involved in the Silesian settlement and the Polish Corridor.

(6) But until we can quiet France, no concert of Europe is possible. We can only quiet France if we are in the position to speak to her with the authority of an ally.

The essential interests of imperial defense are thus closely related to a policy of European security. The first hope of stability in Europe lies in a new entente between the British Empire and France.

The form which such an entente might take is beyond the scope of the present memorandum.

FOUR INSIDIOUS FORCES TRYING TO CONTAMINATE LEGISLATION, SAYS WALSH

by his votes during the retiring months of his service.

I have in mind another "lame-duck" Senate with a Democratic President in the White House, where all the 12 "lame ducks" were Democrats, except three. At least eight of these Senators were known to be avowed candidates for a presidential appointment. Some were successful in their ambitions.

When the question of sustaining the President's veto of the postal employes' salary bill came up for final vote in the Senate, Jan. 6, 1925, 75 per cent of the "lame-duck" Senators changed the position they took in the Senate before election, while only abqut 25 per cent of all other Senators changed their votes. This is a fair example of the influence the executive has in the after-election session of each Congress. The "lame-duck" votes turned the tide in favor of the veto, for it was sustained by only one vote.

During the debate on this measure it was openly charged that the veto would be sustained, not on its merits, but because of the influence of the executive. Here is an amusing and illuminating extract from the Congressional Record:

Mr. Heflin—There is a lake full of lame-ducks swimming around, hobbling about the Capitol, and they are looking wistfully toward the White House. . . . Mr. President, since the election and during the session, the Senator from South Dakota (Sterling) has changed his position and made several speeches against the position he took last year. I believe I can see dangling before his eyes a fine and luscious plum in the way of an appointment to some Federal office, and sometimes I can see him looking up anxiously at it and tip-toeing as he stretches forth his hands as if eager to take it in his grasp.

Mr. Sterling—Mr. President, I simply wish to say that I wish I had the imagination of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. Heflin—Mr. President, I think the Senator would much prefer to have the appointment. (Laughter from the floor and in the galleries.)

"Mr. President, what has become of these dear and beloved Senators who voted before the election to increase the postal employes' salaries? Where are they now? Many of them are swimming in the lame-duck millpond and are looking anxiously and imploringly, and some disgustedly, toward the White House, crooning softly the name of 'Coolidge, Coolidge.'"

Effort at Reform Blocked.

So notorious and obnoxious has the practice become, even among Senators who, prior to their failure to obtain reelection, had demonstrated independence and character, of ending their remaining months of service merely as Presidential Senators instead of Senators from sovereign States, that the Senate itself has overwhelmingly favored and passed a resolution to amend the Constitution so that there may be no "hold-over" sessions of the Congress after the biennial elections.

The House has failed to act on this resolution. I believe this is largely due to the unwillingness of the House to aid in giving prestige to the Senator (Norris), who is author of this resolution. This illustrates a form of petty partisanship that is still characteristic of the Congress.

As it is well known, the majority party has all the important chairmanships; the majority party is held responsible for the Legislative program and naturally desires to have charge of the bills, especially those which seem to have some chance of passing. This goes so far sometimes that, if a minority member has worked out and introduced such a bill, a majority member introduces the same bill and gets his name attached to it—for it is not considered good politics to have popular bills passed which bear the names of minority members.

As a majority party of the House is always jealous of its control of legislation in that body, it naturally would not be overzealous in making part of its Legislative program, a reform that would add prestige to an independent and irregular Republican like Norris. Thus the resolution to correct a great evil remains as if it had never been passed by the Senate. The reform must begin all over again in the next Congress.

The Budget Plan

Keeping the spirit of Better Homes Week, it helps you plan expenditures so that you can obtain the home you want by easy stages. A small initial payment will secure your choice; the balance in small monthly payments.

¶ Homes furnished with things not necessarily expensive, but combining good design, honest construction and comfort—these are within the reach of all.

¶ Vandervoort offerings in Home Furnishings for Better Homes Week embody this homemaking quality.

¶ For example: The new and charming ideas in interior decorating that have been assembled in the new show place of St. Louis—"The Mansion" at Davis Place, near Clayton, on North and South Road.

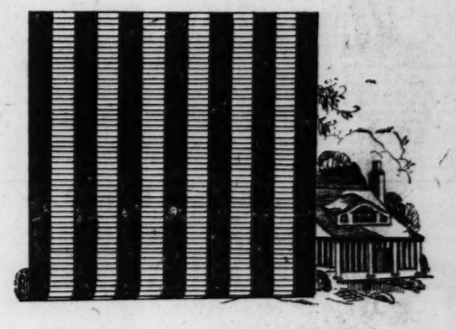
Now Is the Time to Furnish Your Porch

Verticolor

Adds new and desirable color contrast to the porch. Broad ribbons in soft waterproof colors, hand-blocked on Aerolux shades, will set off the house perfectly and bring it into closer relations to the grounds.



In All Sizes—

3½ to 12 Feet Wide

$3.45 to $15.80

AEROLUX SHADES will transform your porch from a mere ornament on the house to a place of constant enjoyment during the long Summer months. Here you can live, eat and sleep in the privacy you want, with ample protection from sun or rain, cooled by every passing breeze.

AEROLUX Shades Have "Hang-Easy" Attachments

You simply hammer hooks into the porch beam and hang the Shade to them. Easily hung—instantly removed.

Tough basswood splints finished with stains made from a creosote base and woven together with cords of fish net twine make the Shades unusually sturdy in construction and assure many seasons of all-weather use. Adjustable "No-Whip" cords (exclusively Aerolux) prevent flapping in the wind.

In pleasing tones of walnut and olive or green and white.

All sizes from 3¼ ft. to 12 ft. wide and from 6 ft. to 7½ ft. long.

Priced, $2.85 to $13.75, According to Size.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

SOCIETY NEWS SECTION

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925. PAGES 1—16.

Large Groups to Go Together From St. Louis to Derby

Some Will Make Headquarters in Private Cars at Louisville —Others Will Have Informal Gatherings in Hotels.

ST. LOUIS has almost appropriated Derby Day for its own! In addition to certain of the elite, who always have indulged in trip to Louisville, visiting friends and relatives (for there is a strong bond of blood relationship between Louisville and St. Louis society), large groups will travel together this year, and will do much of their own entertaining. Some are to travel in private cars, which they will make their headquarters during their stay, and some will go to hotels where suites of rooms connect in order to facilitate informal gatherings.

Perhaps the Louisville hosts have felt the new element of independence, for Dr. Freeland of New York, who, with two companions, has for many seasons given a fancy dress ball which the invitations once called "a great carnival service," will not even attend this year, and many of the larger functions have been eliminated.

True, a dinner has been arranged at the Beaver Valley Club Thursday night for Mr. and Mrs. James Wear, who will depart Wednesday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Gaunt, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Caperton of Lonisville will entertain for their daughter-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Langenberg, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cushing, who will be at their home. Then there is a small house party which Craig Culbertson and Allen Stone will give for Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kauffman of St. Louis, Mrs. Brown-O'Farrell of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tarpley of Mississippi and friends from Buffalo. Mr. George R. Wendling will leave St. Louis tomorrow and will be a member of that group although she will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. John A. Haldeman. Mr. Wendling will join her later. Mrs. Roland Whitney of Portland avenue will visit her brother, Harry McGoodwin, for two weeks and her daughter, Mrs. Oliver F. Richards will depart later in the week. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Coale of St. Louis and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Linn Clardy of Farmington, Mo., will make the trip together and will visit in French Lick Springs before returning.

A private car has been chartered by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hager Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, Mr. and Mrs. William Orthwein II, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Church Bixby, Miss Claire Chouteau and Clarence Maloy. They will depart Thursday and remain over the week-end.

Travels and Other Doings of Society Folk

MRS. CLAUDE CHICHESTER of Hampshire, England, sailed yesterday for New York, and will come to St. Louis to visit her sister, Mrs. William Julius Polk of the Florissant road. Mrs. Chichester was Miss Alicia Chambers of St. Louis before her marriage. This will be her first visit to St. Louis in several years.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerard McMahon have returned from their wedding trip and will be guests at the Fairmont Hotel until they find a suitable apartment. Mrs. McMahon was, until a fortnight ago, Miss Lousita Moser, daughter of Mrs. Leo Moser of Lindell boulevard. They visited New York, Boston and other Eastern cities, making the trip by motor.

Mrs. Esther Benoist Nast of the Forest Park Hotel and her daughter, Miss Nast, will depart tomorrow for the South, where Mrs. Nast will recuperate from a recent illness. Mrs. Nast's son, Conde Nast of New York, and his daughter, Miss Natica, who visited here last week, sailed yesterday for Europe to be gone several months.

Announcement was made last week of the marriage of Miss Marjorie Lysle of Pasadena, Cal., and Oliver Dudley Knight, son of Harry French Knight of the Warson and Litzinger roads, which took place April 21 in Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Knight will arrive in St. Louis May 20 to visit Mr. Knight's father, and Mrs. Knight, en route to Pasadena after a wedding trip in the East. Mr. and Mrs. Knight have sent out cards for a dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club May 24 in honor of the couple.

The bridegroom, who is a brother of Harry Hall Knight and J. Brooks Knight is a graduate of Princeton University. He has made his home in California for three years.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Holliday of 20 North Kingshighway, will spend July and August in England with Mrs. Holliday's sister, Lady Peek, formerly Miss Edwine Thornburg, at "Rousdon House," Devonshire.

Mrs. David Boyd has invited all the members of the St. Peter's Episcopal Church League to an informal tea and garden party Wednesday afternon at 4 o'clock at her home on Taylor avenue, Kirkwood.

Miss Elizabeth Lord, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Clark McAdams of 6401 Cabanne place, will give a piano recital at the Artists' Guild, Wednesday, at 8:30 o'clock, assisted by Miss Jane Treadway, violinist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Treadway of 6835 Waterman avenue.

The Alliance Francaise will have a meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Buckingham Hotel Paul Leyssac will give a group of recitations accompanied on the piano by Dwight Fiske.

Mrs. Edward S. Travers of Lindell boulevard, and her children will depart Tuesday for Pittsburg to visit her family, and later will go to Watch Hill, R. I., where they have a summer home. They will remain in the East until fall.

The annual luncheon and election of officers of the Junior League will be held on Wednesday, May 20 at the Country Club, and Mrs. Harry Potter is in charge of arrangements. There will be reports given of the annual Junior League meeting in Boston by the three St. Louis delegates, Mrs. John H. Holliday, Mrs. Arthur Kendall and Miss Marian Franciscus.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Jamieson of 5367 Pershing avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Jamieson, and William Beauchamp of Chicago. The prospective bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Washington University. Mr. Beauchamp is an alumnus of the University of Chicago. The wedding will take place the latter part of June after the return of Miss Jamieson from Philadelphia, where she has spent the past few months.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Bridge and their children are occupying the summer home of Mrs. Bridge's parents at East Hampton, L. I., prior to sailing May 20 for Europe, where they will remain a year. Mr. and Mrs. Bridge and their family spend the winter with Mr. Bridge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Bridge of Westmoreland place.

Mrs. William Bagnell of 12 Westmoreland place, and Mrs. Ben F. Gray of 374 Walton avenue, will depart today for Washington, D. C., to attend the council of the National Society of Colonial Dames. Mrs. Bagnell will be the guest of her niece, Mrs. Lionel Skipwith, in Richmond, Va., before returning. Mr. and Mrs. Bagnell's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Huey Hughes of Dallas, Tex., will arrive in St. Louis for a brief visit May 17, and will sail May 30 on the Olympic to spend the summer abroad.

MISS VIRGINIA BERG.
She will be a bridesmaid for Miss Gertrude Heil at the latter's wedding to Velda Howard Wrape June 3.

Will Be Daughter's Matron of Honor

FREQUENTLY a father is invited to be his son's best man, but rarely is a mother her daughter's matron of honor, and yet such will be the case at the marriage of Miss Harriet Bonson Manter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robert Manter of 151 Helfenstein road, Webster Groves, and Robert Edwin Woods, son of Parker H. Woods of 6248 Washington boulevard. The ceremony will take place June 24 at 5:30 o'clock at the Manter home, and Rev. Dwight Bradley officiating. About 300 guests will be invited to the ceremony and reception. In addition to Mrs. Manter, the bride's attendants will be Miss Berenice Bermingham of Kenosha, Wis., Miss Helen Martha Woods and Miss Clair Rountree. Parker H. Woods will be best man for his son, and Leonard Wood, Reynold Medart, Edwin Thomas and Robert Robinson of Louisville, Ky., will be groomsmen.

A high spot in the social events of yesterday was the wedding of Miss Ruth Wentworth Candy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Candy of 6022 Kingsbury boulevard, and Paul Augustine Rodriguez, son of Mrs. Paul A. Rodriguez of Clarksville, Tenn., which took place at 8 o'clock last night at the Candy home. The Rev. Dr. John S. Bunting of the church of the Ascension performed the ceremony, standing against a

National Junior League Meeting in Boston This Week

Delegates to Gather Wednesday for Three-Day Convention; Sightseeing, Sport and Luncheons Included on Program.

MEMBERS of the Junior League all over the country are interested in the national conference which opens in Boston next Wednesday and continues until Saturday. Headquarters for the convention will be at 37 Commonwealth avenue, and the delegates will be house guests of Boston members and their friends. Those who arrive early Wednesday will visit places of historical interest in Lexington and Concord, and will be guests of Mrs. James J. Storrow at luncheon at her country home in Lincoln, Mass.

In the evening dinner will be served at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, where Miss Sarah Winslow, president of the Junior League of Boston, will welcome the delegates. The principal address will be delivered by Mrs. Charles S. Brown Jr., president of the Association of Junioh Leagues of America. Later there will be a brief business session for roll call and reports, presided over by Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., president of the Junior League of Chicago.

Thursday morning will be devoted to sightseeing and sports, with luncheon early in the afternoon at the Brooklin Country Club. Mrs. Pleasant Pennington, president of the Junior League of New York, will be presiding officer at the open forum to be held after luncheon. In the evening the delegates will be free to dine with friends, make up theater parties, or play bridge or mah jongg in the league rooms.

Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall of Chestnut Hill will be hostess at luncheon Friday, following another morning of sightseeing and sports, and at that time groups of league members will discuss the various phases of their work. Experiences of the groups working with the handicapped will be given at a meeting at the Boston School for Occupational Therapy.

Dinner Friday night will be at the Woman's Republican Club, and will be followed by a debate, "Resolved, That the point or hour system is advantageous to the development of the Junior League," with Mrs. J. W. Alsop, regional vice president for the New England States, presiding; the Cleveland group arguing the affirmative and the Detroit group the negative.

Saturday there will be a business meeting, when new officers and board will be elected and the place of next year's conference decided upon. For those who do not leave Bos-

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Myers of Webster Groves have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Catherine Myers, and John Frier, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Frier of Amherst place. The news was formally told at a tea given by Mrs. Myers Friday afternoon for her daughter. There were 25 guests. Miniature corsages were presented to each guest, with cards bearing the names of the couple attached. Miss Myers attended Washington University and the School of Fine Arts. Mr. Frier is a graduate of the University of Missouri and during the war was a senior Lieutenant in the Navy. The wedding date has not been announced.

Miss Margaret Porterfield, eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Porterfield of 5232 Maple avenue, was quietly married at 8 o'clock Saturday morning to William Paul Maddux, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Maddux of Springfield, Ill. The ceremony was performed at the Porterfield home by the Rev. Raymond Kimball of the Cabanne Methodist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Maddux departed at once for their new home in Denver, Colo. The bride was educated at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., and Mr. Maddux at the University of Missouri.

Formal announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Marie Olive Hodges, daughter of E. O. Hodges of 7545 Ellis avenue, Maplewood, and William B. Jennings, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Jennings, also of Maplewood, Saturday, May 2, at a luncheon bridge given by the prospective bride and her sister, Miss Gladys. The table decorations and favors were American beauty roses. The news was told by means of cards bearing the names of the couple attached to the bridge tallies. The guests were Misses Dorothy Bather, Elva Brown, Alleen Bamber, Blanche Crean, Alice Eberhardt, Alice Fuss, Katherine Grumley, Vera Howland, Blanche Halloran, Virginia and Patricia Hodges, Anna Marie Jennings, Margaret Jennings, Esther Lile, Irma Mann, Ruth Murdock, Thelma Pollard, Helen Poertner, background of pink roses and smilax.

Miss Luisa Rodriguez, sister of the bridegroom, maid of honor, and Misses Virginia Candy, Ruth Brigham and Dorothy Galloway, bridesmaids, were gowned alike in delicate yellow chiffon veiling crepe. The maid of honor carried yellow daisies and lavender sweet peas, and the bridesmaids carried spring flowers. The bride wore bridal satin with a yoke of duchess lace. The satin was cut away at the lower part of the skirt to display three tiers of the lace, and bands of pearls adorned the hem line. There was a satin court train weighted with a bow knot of orange blossoms, and more of the bridal flowers held the veil to her hair and dotted the tulle. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley. A reception followed, for which additional guests were invited, and Mr. and Mrs. Rodriguez departed on their wedding trip East. They will make their home at 6515 Washington boulevard. The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and completed her course at Washington University, where she became a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. Mr. Rodriguez is an alumnus of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn.

The bride is an alumna of the University of Missouri and the bridegroom took his degree at Northwestern University.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Goldman of 636 Westgate avenue announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Corinne Goldman, and Charles S. Mincer of Chicago. The wedding date has not been set.

Announcement was made recently of the engagement of Miss Florence Comet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Comet and E. L. Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gilbert of Fort Worth, Tex., at a family dinner for 24 guests at the home of Miss Comet's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Koplar, 5759 Waterman avenue.

The marriage of Miss Marion Blanche Beck, daughter of Mrs. Lucia B. Beck of 5754 Pershing avenue, and Earsel William Pollard will take place at 8 o'clock, June 23, at the West Presbyterian Church, the Rev. William Lampe officiating. The prospective bride is a descendant of the Rev. Eleazar Wheelock, founder of Dartmouth College; Gen. Israel Putnam and William Hart, New York artist. A large bridal party has been planned. Miss Lucia Beck will be her sister's maid of honor, and Alice Chevell, Lucille Badger, Evelyn Badger and Jeanette Beck, bridesmaids. Miss Marion R. Badger, an aunt of the bride, will play the wedding march. Mr. Pollard is a son of Mrs. George Rost of Alton, Ill.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Sadye

Florence Slonim of Hartford, Conn., sister of Moses P. Slonim, prominent Zionist worker and real estate broker of St. Louis, to I. George Quint, city editor of the Flushing (L. I.) Evening Journal. The wedding will take place early in the summer.

Miss Slonim spent the entire spring and part of the summer of 1922 visiting her brother and sister-in-law and made many friends here. She is a graduate of the Hartford public high school, class of 1918.

Mr. Quint is a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, class of 1921, and before entering newspaper work was athletic coach at the Terryville (Conn.) high school.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Gladys Blythe of 7407 Melrose avenue, University City, to Robert F. Mitchell Jr., of 7128 Northmoor Drive. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse W. Blythe. Mr. Mitchell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Mitchell.

The wedding ceremony will take place June 24 at Eden Emanuel Evangelical Church, Page avenue and Temple place. Miss Fay Williams will be maid of honor and Misses Dorothy Wilson and Irene Bick bridesmaids. The best man will be Fred S. Anheuser, and the groomsmen, Russell Ritschey and Walter Dorullis.

After the ceremony the couple will motor to Canada on a wedding trip.

An interesting engagement made known during the past week is that of Miss Lillian Marie Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams of Dartmouth avenue, University City, to Charles F. Cooley Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Cooley of 5445 Enright avenue. The announcement was made at a luncheon-bridge given in honor of the bride-elect by Mrs. Alice DeVeaux on Saturday afternoon in the Daniel Boone room of Hotel Statler.

The room was specially decorated for the event, and the announcement was made in a novel manner. The names of the young couple were written by the confectioner on a specially prepared dessert.

Others present were: Mmes. J. E. Williams, C. F. Cooley, George S. Tebbetts, M. Carlton Cooley, Carl Gaertner and Misses Marie Louise Cooley, Catherine Manchester, Eloise Frazier, Cecelia DeCamp and Nina Charbonneaux.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Mrs. Ida Mayer and A. Rosenberg of 702 Eastgate avenue, which took place April 29 at the home of Rabbi Thurman. The couple are on a trip to Hot Springs, Ark., and Florida, and will make their home at 6314 Northwood avenue.

The engagement of Miss Honor Toulks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Toulks of 6607 Vermont avenue, and William G. Collins of Belleville, Ill., was announced at a dinner party Thursday. The wedding will take place in June.

At a bridge-luncheon given recently by Mrs. James R. Noble of Sacramento avenue, the engagement of her daughter, Miss Viola, to Raymond E. Giles was announced. No date has been set for the wedding.

Offerings That Intensify Interest in the May Sales

Women's Georgette Frocks

In St. Louis, as in New York, They Lead the Summer Mode.... These Are New Arrivals

At $39.75

DISTINCTION of cut establishes these Frocks first in the promenade of Fashion. Fluttering hemlines, scarfs at neck, tunic effects, long sleeves are the details which recently introduced on the boulevards of the East are repeated in these Frocks and destine them to lead the Summer mode.

Brocaded georgette and solid colored crepe are the materials which lend themselves gracefully to the mode.

In addition to georgettes found in this new group are printed pussy-willows, printed crepes de chine, and satins. Tailored frocks share in favor with the more fanciful vogues first described. Sizes 36 to 52.

On Choosing Silks

It is a matter of pride in our Silk Salon that assortments are at all times complete to care for every need, that standards of quality are rigidly maintained and prices consistently low.

Ever alert to new tendencies in fashion, we are quick to provide the fabric conceits of the moment, adhering always to the basic principles of good taste. Bridal Silks of traditional beauty, and those staple fabrics in constant demand, can always be selected with perfect confidence.

Thus it is that when a need arises, thoughts turn here as the most likely place to find the Silks you want when you want them. (Second Floor.)

Our Ruby Ring Silk Hose

—Satisfy Exacting Demands for Service and Beauty of Appearance

$1.95

IN Ruby Ring Hose you are assured an unusual measure of service for they are superior in quality. In appearance they present a lustrous even finish that results from the use of pure thread silk in careful knitting. Soles are double, heels high spliced, toes reinforced and garter tops of elastic mercerized lisle.

An added feature is the Ruby Ring that prevents garter runs from reaching the silk below.

The Beta Beta Chapter of the Tau Pi fraternity entertained guests at a kid party at the Forest Park Hotel, May 2. The ballroom was decorated in dolls made of blue and gold bunting, balloons, paper caps and noisemakers added to the spirit of the occasion. Ted Lewis, who played at a local theater last week, entertained the guests with songs and stories.

Miss Bess Goldstein of 1334 Blackstone avenue gave a bridge luncheon Saturday, May 2, at the Branscome Hotel, in honor of Miss Frieda Goldberg.

COOLIDGES SMOOTH FEELINGS BY SECOND RECEPTION

WASHINGTON, May 9.

WASHINGTON society has been in a whirl all week trying to entertain the 300 distinguished foreign delegates to the International Council of Women in whose ranks are Princess, Marchioness, Lady This and That and other titled women.

Quite a tempest in a teapot arose over the invitations to the White House reception on Wednesday afternoon to the foreign delegates. Many American delegates and patrons thought they should be invited but President and Mrs. Coolidge smoothed matters by giving a second reception for the American group on Thursday.

Thursday Mrs. Coolidge took 50 newspaper women of Washington down the river with her on the Mayflower. Tea was served in the dining room on the return trip. Miss Laura Harlan and Miss Mary Randolph, secretaries to Mrs. Coolidge, presided at the flower-decked tea table. Mrs. Coolidge was in a three-piece sports costume of cream basket weave. Her hat was of white horsehair with wide brim encircled with white ribbon.

President and Mrs. Coolidge are entertaining Attorney-General Sargent as a house guest at the White House. Mrs. Sargent is in Vermont.

Saturday Cabinet officers and other notables went on a pilgrimage, to Fredericksburg, Va., to attend the dedication of Kenmore, the home of Betty Fielding Lewis, sister of George Washington. The old town was en fete for the occasion and the citizens wore Colonial costumes. Among the special guests were Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Assistant Secretary of War Davis; Gov. Trinkluе of Virginia; Mrs. Joseph Rucker Lamar, president of the National Society of Colonial Dames; Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, honorary chaplain and Mrs. George Barnett and Chief G. M. Cook of the Pamunket Indians, a direct descendant of Powhatan.

President and Mrs. Coolidge head the list of boxholders for the National Capital Horse Show, May 20 to 23. Others who will have boxes include Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi; Mrs. Breckenridge Long and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair.

Mrs. Leigh Palmer, wife of Rear-Admiral Palmer who are members of the Missouri colony here, will sail for Europe on July 4 with her daughter, Miss Bessie McKeldin, to be gone several months. James McKeldin, son of Mrs. Palmer, will go abroad with them to enter Oxford university where he will remain for three years.

Mrs. W. E. Morris of St. Louis was one of the patrons of the International Council of Women as a representative of the Needlework Guild of S. Louis. Mrs. Morris who is well known in Washington, has been frequently entertained. At a tea this week she wore a smart ensemble costume of gray chiffon with a red silk coat bordered with fur. Her hat was a close-fitting small one of gray straw.

Mrs. Bennett Clark of St. Louis passed through Washington on her way to New York. She was the guest at several dinners and luncheons.

Mrs. Bessie Parker Brueggeman was elected vice president of the Woman's City Club of Washington at the elections Wednesday.

Mrs. Philip North Moore entertained at a luncheon Monday in honor of Lady Aberdeen. Her guests were the foreign officers of the International Council.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair entertained in honor of a group of the women who attended the Pan-American Woman's Conference.

Mrs. James M. Thomson, who has been the guest of Col. and Mrs. George Harvey, was the honor guest at a dinner given Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Baby Paulina Longworth was brought down after dinner to greet the guests. Mrs. Thomson also was among the guests at a luncheon given by Mrs. John Hays Hammond.

One of the most delightful parties given in honor of the foreign delegates to the convention of the International Council of Women was the tea dance given by Mrs. John B. Henderson at the Castle. Mrs. Henderson and the Ambassador Daeschner of France led the grand march and afterward started the "Paul Jones."

Simple Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

AN EXHIBITION OF

OZARK LANDSCAPES

—By—

FRANK NUDERSCHER

To which the public is cordially invited, will continue for the next ten days to two weeks.

The Gertrude Charity Society will give a birthday and guest day party at Hotel Chase Wednesday, May 13, at 12:30 o'clock. Reservations will be made with Mrs. E. Emanuel, 3000 Victor street.

SPRING PARTIES FOR GRADUATES AND OTHERS

Among a number of entertainments in honor of members of the 1925 class of Hosmer Hall was the luncheon given yesterday by Miss Frances Butts, 6709 Washington boulevard, at the Jefferson Hotel, followed by a theater party. Next Saturday morning Hosmer Hall Seniors will give a breakfast to the Juniors at the Algonquin Club, followed by a bridge. On Friday evening, May 29, Miss Mary Garrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flint Garrison, 5835 Bartmer avenue, will give a dance in honor of the seniors at her home.

Mrs. Benton H. Pollock, 6861 Enright avenue, will entertain the Board of Directors of the Morning Choral Club at luncheon next Friday, when three new members elected last week will be welcomed —Mrs. Anson E. More, Mrs. Russell H. Ogle and Mrs. Oliver Banks. Officers of the board for the next season will be elected at the luncheon.

A dinner complimentary to Dr. Marshall Baker, in recognition of his 40 years' continuous service as director, and 12 years as president, was given by the Board of Officers and Directors of the Webster Groves Loan and Building Association, and their wives, Tuesday night, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Baker, 41 Rosemont avenue, Webster Groves.

A group of residents of the then little village of Webster Groves organized this association in 1884, their object being to assist their fellow-citizens of moderate means in building of homes. Twenty-nine men signed the articles of incorporation, of whom only two remain at the present day—Dr. Marshall Baker and J. F. Allen. In 1885 Dr. Baker became a director of the association, and has ever since been in that service. Through all these years, Dr. Baker has rendered, as a practicing physician and officer of the Presbyterian Church, other notable services to the community. Few residents of the suburb hold so largely the esteem and love of the people as does this venerable physician.

There were present at the dinner, Dr. Marshall Baker and his daughter, Mrs. Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. C. Walter Alley, C. A. Baker, J. R. Bettis, C. C. Cushing, E. F. Cushing, C. H. Holekamp, D. F. More, E. M. Rosetear and S. R. Tyler.

Army of the Republic will give their annual benefit concert in the auditorium of the Wednesday Club, corner of Taylor avenue and Westminster place, Thursday evening, May 21. Mrs. Fanny Louise Block, mezzo-soprano; Eugene E. Enzinger, baritone; John Halk, violinist for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Frank Habig, pianist and accompanist, will participate in the program.

About 60 guests from Lindenwood College will be entertained at dinner at the Forest Park Hotel, Tuesday evening, May 12, by the Lindenwood Athletic Association, of which Miss Helen Calder is president. A dance, with music by the college orchestra, will follow the dinner. Decorations are to be in rainbow colors, and the surprise of the evening will be an allegorical "pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." Other officers of the association, who will take a prominent part, are Misses Helen Lee Maupin, Sara Shomberg and Gertrude Bird. Each class will be represented in a toast, and there will also be toasts by Dr. John L. Roemer, Miss Alice E. Gipson and Miss Marjorie Weber.

St. Margaret's Dramatic Club will present "Fifty-Fifty" at the church hall, Thirty-ninth street and Flad avenue, on Wednesday evening, May 6, at 8:15. Those in the cast are Misses Margaret Regan, Lucille Murphy, Helen Claire Deveney, Frances Doherty and James Murray, Jack Pfeffer, Tommie Deveney and Dan Sullivan.

A tea in honor of mothers will be given at St. John's Methodist Church for Mothers' day, this evening at 6:15 o'clock, followed by a devotional service with the topic, "The Christian Home." Mrs. Harley E. Totter will preside.

Dr. and Mrs. Albert Veisbarth gave a dinner dance last week at the Forest Park Hotel in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chapin Spahn of Evansville, Ind. Mrs. Spahn was honoree at several affairs during her visit, including a luncheon at the Sunset Hill Country Club by Mrs. Beisbarth, a similar affair by Mrs. Joseph T. Ayres at Pine Tree Inn and dinner parties by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris at the Chase Hotel and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Fox at the Coronado Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Schmidt of 3636 Wyoming street celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding Saturday evening, May 2, at the American Hotel. They were assisted in receiving the guests by their daughters, Misses Althea and Lily May Schmidt. Mrs. Oliver Lyon Covington sang a group of songs. Dinner followed, with covers laid for 40 guests.

The annual May day festivities by the girl students of Washington University will take place in the court of McMillan Hall Saturday afternoon, May 16, at 3 o'clock. Miss Pansy Talbot (Delta Gamma), assisted by Miss Sara Selby (Pi Beta Phi), will have charge of the program. In connection with this celebration there will be a spring festival benefit for the women's building, managed by Miss Elinor Walters.

The tearoom will be in charge of Mrs. T. M. Marshall from 2 to 5:30 o'clock, assisted by Mmes. F. H. Derby, George R. Throop, S. W. Ranson, W. H. Summers, D. M. McFaden, E. F. Parker, F. L. Wright and R. T. Webb. Mrs. George W. Lamke is in charge of the bakery sale, assisted by Mmes. George I. Dale, E. O. Sweetser, F. H. Ewerhardt, T. S. Duncan, W. E. McCourt, Isaac Lippincott and W. W. Walters. At 3:30, Mrs. Herbert S. Hadley will be honor guest at a reception in the court at McMillan Hall. A candy booth on the campus will be in charge of Miss Mary Harris.

Franklin George Falkenhainer of 3619 Connecticut street entertained his friends at a birthday party yesterday afternoon. The guests were Fern Ott, Betty Jane Beachler, Janette Mathae, Lorane de Lacy, Lucille Brown, William Mathae, George Ott Jr., Jack Sewing, Edwin Mathae, Donald Johnson and Richard Wright.

Mrs. Robert E. Miller of 3900 Shaw avenue will give a dinner party for 12 guests today in honor of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rohrbach, who will depart tomorrow for Europe to stay six months. Edward Rohrbach of Chicago is in St. Louis to bid his parents bon voyage, and is the guest of his sister.

Famous Movie Actress Once more Slender

Gives full credit to French discovery

Loses 61 Pounds in 10 Weeks. No Diet, Exercises. Dangerous Drugs or Reducing Girdles

"For the last year I had tried everything known to lose the 60 pounds or so of excess fat which had rapidly accumulated on my figure and made me look so matronly and awkward that I could no longer appear in pictures," writes beautiful movie actress, "but not until I used SAN-GRI-NA did I take off any fat, although I had tried diets, exercises, etc. Thanks to this new French discovery, I easily and gradually lost 61 pounds in about 10 weeks. I dreaded to reduce for fear of after-effects, but I must say that I consider SAN-GRI-NA absolutely marvelous, and that is why I fully endorse it. Although I lost such a large amount of weight, I feel perfectly strong and well. My face is not drawn looking or wrinkled, I am not skinny or angular, and everyone seems to think I look so much better and younger." (This letter is on file for inspection.)

If you weigh 10, 20 or 100 pounds too much, you can bring your weight down to normal WITHOUT INJURING YOUR HEALTH, says well-known beauty specialist of New York and Paris. If you suffer from heart trouble, puffing, swollen feet, you can be relieved. NO MATTER HOW MANY THINGS YOU HAVE TRIED BEFORE, AND HOW MANY TIMES YOU HAVE BEEN DISAPPOINTED, I am absolutely convinced from my own results and that of hundreds of others, that anyone burdened with excess fat can be made slender and attractive with SAN-GRI-NA. Before I found out about this new discovery I myself weighed 180 pounds, and many times I had been told that I was a most obstinate case and could never reduce; yet to-day, thanks to this discovery, I tip the scales at 130. Letters of praise from all over the country come in to me daily from men and women in all steps of life, some of them who have been burdened with fat for years who are to-day slender and healthy, thanks to SAN-GRI-NA.

Make this simple test to-day: First weigh yourself, then get a package of SAN-GRI-NA, take it as per directions, and watch your weight go down. No, miracles done overnight. Nothing magic, BUT A STEADY AND GRADUAL LOSS OF WEIGHT AND A DAILY IMPROVEMENT IN HEALTH AND APPEARANCE. SAN-GRI-NA has been indeed wonderful not only as a reducing treatment, but also wins praise from its users because it is incomparable to do away with high blood pressure, puffing and bloating. Be sure you get the right tablets, called SAN-GRI-NA. Do not accept any substitute. Look carefully for the name, and it will not be long before you, well say, like so many others, "I tried everything advertised, but SAN-GRI-NA is the only thing which ever reduced me."

RECENT ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

The Webster Groves Chapter D. A. R. met at the home of Mrs. F. J. Steuber on Lockwood avenue, on the afternoon of May 5. Assisting hostesses were Mesdames O. H. Sawers, D. C. Nicholson, Garrett Wall and Dr. Irene Blanchard, a sister of Mrs. Steuber.

The Regent, Mrs. Frank C. Thompson, who attended the recent National Continental Congress at Washington, gave a report on the financial problems discussed at the convention. Mrs. Frank Below, delegate, gave a general report, and Mrs. William Clegg who also attended the convention, gave her impressions on the social affairs during the Congress.

The chapter voted to divide the proceeds from the card party, held in April, equally between the Patriotic Loan Fund and the School of the Ozarks, which means one scholarship to the above mentioned school.

Two songs were rendered by Mrs. J. P. Margenson accompanied on the piano by Mrs. George L. Furse.

The next meeting of the chapter will be held at the home of Mrs. Jasper Blackburn on June 2, in celebration of Flag Day.

The annual luncheon of the St. Louis Parliamentary Law Club was held at the Town Club on April 27. The following officers were elected for next year: President, Mrs. J. R. Booth; first vice president, Mrs. M. Ney Smith; second vice president, Mrs. James E. Gowenlock; recording secretary, Mrs. L. M. Kallenbach; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. L. Harris; treasurer, Miss Jane Wood; auditor, Mrs. Maurice Murray.

The last meeting of the Friday Club before the summer vacation will be held May 15 at the Forest Park Hotel, with Mrs. H. P. Finigan as hostess. Mrs. H. R. Culling, assistant hostess, is now in California, and will appoint an assistant in her place. Annual reports of officers and committee chairmen will be given and the installation of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Mrs. L. M. Ottofy and Mrs. J. Richmond were hostesses to the Cornelia Greene Chapter, D. A. R., at the Fairmont Hotel, Wednesday afternoon. Reports on the meeting of the national D. A. R. congress, recently held in Washington, D. C., were given by Mrs. John Trigg Moss and the regent, Mrs. John Zahorsky. Several violin selections were given by Prof. Haenel of the St. Louis Public Schools, accompanied by Mrs. Haenel at the piano. The guests included Mrs. Schrader, regent of the Douglas Oliver Chapter, D. A. R.; Mrs. Lon Sanders, Mrs. Shelby Curlee, Mrs. Howard Bailey, Mrs. A. E. Reton, Mrs. Thomas Horn, Mrs. J. C. McCane, Mrs. Sophie Crow and Miss Laura Waters. The last meeting of the chapter for the year will be a luncheon at Midland Valley Country Club on June 2.

The West End W. C. T. U. will give a May day party on Friday, May 15, at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. T. D. Shaffer, 6948 Delmar avenue. The general topic will be, "The Voice of the People," under the direction of Mrs. E. C. Luedde. Readings will be given by Mrs. L. C. Post and music by Miss Eleanor Barry. Members and their friends are invited.

The Home Circle held their last monthly meeting of the year at the residence of Mrs. L. J. Cohen, 18 members attending. Luncheon was served. The meetings will be resumed in October.

The Uandi Literary Club will meet next Thursday at the Forest Park Hotel with Mrs. Myron Medsker and Mrs. Louis Maginnis as hostesses. The new officers elected for the year are: President, Mrs. Herbert F. Boettler; vice president, Mrs. C. L. Newcomb; recording secretary, Mrs. Everett Taylor; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. J. Kettler; treasurer, Mrs. C. H. Cleveland; auditor, Mrs. H. J. Bostwick.

The members of the Board of the Young Women's Christian Association including Mmes. J. J. Fisher, R. F. Edwards, W. K. Bixby, James A. Hooke, Robert L. Hedges, Thomas C. Craig, Lockwood Hill, Daniel S. Brown, Thomas L. Anderson, L. B. Pendleton, A. W. Southward, J. H. Webster, Fred F. Bixby, Ruth Coleman, R. B. Higbee, C. C. Rainwater, Misses Sara Duke, Mary E. Lee, M. E. Ross, Lena Whitson and Harriet Woodruff, are planning a May Day picnic and luncheon for their friends at Montebello Camp, near Kimmswick, Mo., Saturday, May 16. A number of parties from churches and clubs are being organized for this outing, and information as to transportation and reservations for the luncheon may be obtained by phoning Olive 2748. Automobile parties will go via the Lemay Ferry and No. 9 Old State road to the turn-off just north of Kimmswick, plainly marked, to a quarter of a mile from the camp. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Fred F. Bixby, chairman of the Camp Committee, with the members of the committee, Mesdames B. F. Edwards, E. K. Drees, James H. McCabe and Miss Mary R. Lee, and all the members of the Board, will be hostesses for the occasion.

Montebello Camp, situated on the bluff overlooking the Mississippi River, has accommodations for 125 women and girls for vacation and week-end periods. Church and Sunday School services are held each Sunday morning at the camp.

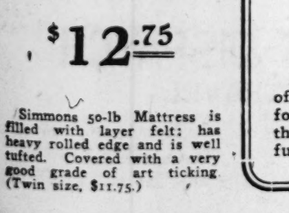
Discontinued Models of

SIMMONS BEDS

At Greatly Reduced Prices

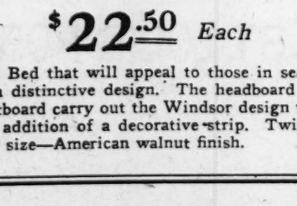
THE Simmons Company has discontinued a number of models which we are offering at greatly reduced prices. Only a few of them are described in this announcement. A visit to our Seventh Floor Furniture Department will tell you more than a page of pictures and prices.



Colonial Bed

$13.50

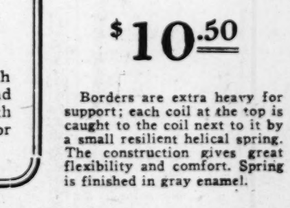
THIS is a square continuous-post Bed, strongly resembling the old Colonial type Bed. Can be had in American walnut, French walnut, ivory or oak finish, in either twin or full size.



Standard Bed

$15.00

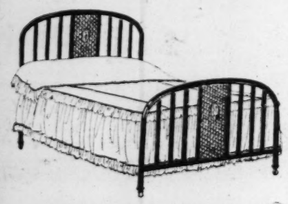
Charming—yet substantial is this sturdy Bed, square tubed with mitered corners and five heavy fillers in headboard and footboard. Comes in double or twin size; French walnut, American walnut or ivory finish.



Simmons Special

$18.00

There is a simple solidity about this Bed that pleases those who wish a practical and artistic style. Made with 1½-inch square tubing, cane-effect panels. American walnut finish—twin or full size.



Medallion Bed

$15.50 Each

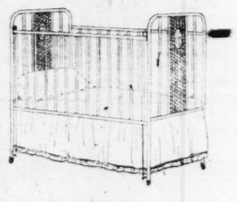
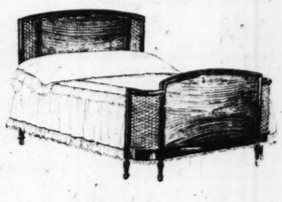
With just a bit of decoration in the cane effect panel these Beds are very attractive. They are finished in American walnut or oak. A gracefully designed Bed that looks well in the twin size, but comes also in the full size at the same price.



Simmons Crib

$19.25

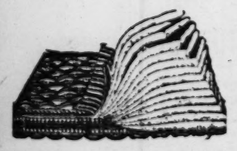
This Crib measures 2 ft. 6 in. by 4 ft. 6 in., and is very sturdily built. It has heavy flat fillers, close together, and very high sides to prevent the child from climbing over. Cane-panel effect ends—American walnut and ivory finishes.



Bowfoot Bed

$35.00

This model is extremely attractive with its Tudor legs and cane panel in headboard and footboard. American walnut finish—comes only in the full size.



Felt Mattress

$12.75

Simmons 50-lb Mattress is filled with layer felt; has heavy rolled edge and is well tufted. Covered with a very good grade of art ticking. (Twin size, $11.75.)

Twin Beds

$22.50 Each

A Bed that will appeal to those in search of a distinctive design. The headboard and footboard carry out the Windsor design with the addition of a decorative strip. Twin or full size—American walnut finish.

Coil Spring

$10.50

Borders are extra heavy for support; each coil at the top is caught to the coil next to it by a small resilient helical spring. The construction gives great flexibility and comfort. Spring is finished in gray enamel.

ter for luncheon tomorrow. The president, Mrs. J. T. Stinson, and the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. A. Rackerby, delegates to the State Convention, P. E. O., will give reports.

The Tuesday Club held the closing meeting for this year on May 5 at the Artists' Guild. The president Introduced Mrs. Gilbert Fox, who gave an outline of the work of the Eighth District of Federated Women's Clubs. Mrs. Fox was followed by Mrs. F. B. Miller, Mrs. J. E. Allen and Mrs. W. T. Midlam, each reporting a different subject that had been discussed at the Eighth District biennial. They stated that art, civics, child welfare and education had taken the place of literary subjects on the program of district meetings. Mrs. F. B. Ebanues reviewed several books written by Henry James. Mrs. Ernest Ohle discussed "My Life in Art," by Stanislavsky. The Russian drama was further interpreted by a reading of the play "To the Stars," by Leopid Andreyess, by Mrs. W. E. Scherr. Music was played by Miss Marie Kessler. The president, Miss Quincy Slocumb, closed the meeting with an invitation to the club to come to her home for a "basket picnic" Tuesday, May 12.

Clotho Club, Mrs. John R. Lanigan, president, held its regular bimonthly meeting at the Chase Hotel on Friday, May 1. Mrs. Lee Schweiger, hostess, entertained the following members and guests at luncheon which preceded the meeting: Mrs. John R. Lanigan, Mrs. H. D. Le Gear, Mrs. J. M. Lemp, Mrs. W. A. Le Gear, Mrs. William P. Diggs, Mrs. Burch, Mrs. F. W. Tarrant, Mrs. Louis Schoenfeld, Miss Catherine Otto, Mrs. A. W. Lawson, Mrs. W. W. Bradley, Mrs. William Jaeger, Miss Helen Musick, Miss Ethel B. Hare, Miss Amanda Otto, Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, Mrs. William John Hall, Mrs. Charles E. Baur, Mrs. Charles Ulman, Miss Minnie Otto, Mrs. Ben Westhus, Mrs. H. J. Symons, Mrs. Adolphe Neuville, Mrs. George J. Dietz, Mrs. E. R. Beach, Mrs. William Bloss, Mrs. Fred Niehaus, Mrs. Lewis Balson, Mrs. Marion E. Beggs.

A musicale was arranged and presented by Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, director of the Mel-Harmonic Club.

The Ensee Study Club will meet at the home of Mrs. C. W. Nystrum, 435 Elm avenue, Webster Groves, Monday, May 11.

The St. Louis Outing Club will give a dance Saturday night in Moose Hall, 3839 Olive street.

Two de Luxe CRUISES Around the World on the beautiful

S. S. RESOLUTE

Queen of Cruising Steamships

(Sister ship of the S. S. Reliance)

From New York Oct. 24, 1925 — From San Francisco Feb. 9, 1926

These third and fourth cruises of the RESOLUTE "Around the World" will be the most interesting and delightful of all.

The RESOLUTE has proved herself the "Queen of Cruising Steamships." Her accommodations are unusually spacious, luxuriously furnished, and specially ventilated. Winter garden ballroom, terrace cafe, grill, gymnasium and swimming-pool are among the features.

The ownership and management are American, but the registry is foreign; the servants are Europeans, trained in the Continental way. This combination of the best American and European service features will be found only on United American Lines cruises.

The itineraries have been arranged by the same experts that planned the first "Round the World" pleasure cruises. Only places of prime tourist interest are included: Hawaii—China—Japan—The Philippines—Borneo—Java—Straits Settlements—Burma—Ceylon—India—Egypt—Italy—Algeria. These are the only cruises visiting both Borneo and Burma.

Three and a half months of perfect vacation without a care or worry, doing those things you have always wanted to do, seeing those places you have always wanted to see.

Smith-Reis Piano Co.,
1005 Olive St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Mr. Miller:

"The Henry F. Miller Piano which you furnished at our concert is one of the finest pianos I have ever played upon. It is capable of the finest shading, and responds wonderfully. I thoroughly enjoyed playing upon it, and Mr. Wall also tells me he fell in love with it.

We certainly appreciate your kindness. I wish you the very best success."

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) TILLMAN MERRITT.

For Health and Fun— Come to MINNESOTA!

COME UP INTO THE GREAT OUTDOORS where the air is pure, fresh and fragrant with the vitalizing tang of the pines [hay fever sufferers find blessed relief here], where the summer climate is invigorating —where the cool nights bring you sound, refreshing sleep—where ten thousand lakes offer you incomparable fishing, swimming, sailing, canoeing, motorboating —where conditions are ideal for golfing, horseback riding, hiking, camping and other outdoor sports—where thousands of miles of good roads through beautiful country make a motorist's paradise.

Here, in the quiet solitude of a camp in the woods, or in a cottage or cabin at the lake, or at a lively modern summer resort—you can get away from your cares and worries and enjoy a real vacation of rest and re-creation. Whatever your ideas of accommodations may be, you can find them here, at reasonable rates.

Start from Minneapolis—the gateway to the great outdoor playground of the northland. You will find a hearty greeting here. We will give you the information and guidance you need to assure just the sort of vacation and accommodations you want. Stop at the Gateway Building on Washington Ave. between Hennepin and Nicollet Avenues, when you come to Minneapolis.

BENEVOLENT ATTITUDE BY U. S. TOWARD PROTOCOL SOUGHT

Chief French Delegate Would Have America Adopt Hands-Off Policy.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 9.—Paul Boncour, head of the French Commission of National Defense and chief French delegate to the League of Nations' international conference for the control of traffic in arms and munitions, said today that all he asks of the United States is that it adopt a benevolent attitude toward any reasonable peace protocol that may eventually be framed by the league for Europe and that the United States not render ineffective any sound blockade arrangement against the aggressor state.

M. Boncour explained in a statement to the Associated Press discussing peace and disarmament prospects that he fully understands the disinclination of the United States to mix in European political affairs.

He said France probably would ratify soon the league's peace protocol and said that he fully expects that protocol to dominate the discussion at the next league assembly.

M. Boncour said that if France finally negotiates a defense pact with Great Britain, Germany and other Powers that pact should enter into the framework of the league's protocol which, he said, France is ready to revise accordingly, but which should remain the essential feature of European peace.

MAN STRICKEN AT GAME OF CARDS TO BE BURIED TODAY

Adolph Derleth, 68 years old of Lebanon, who was stricken with heart disease when playing cards at his home Friday night and who died a short time later, will be buried in College Hill Cemetery this afternoon.

Derleth was entertaining friends at a card game when he collapsed. His wife, Mrs. Blondina Derleth, and daughters, Mrs. Anna Norris of St. Louis and Mrs. Hilda Shannon of Lebanon, survive.

Wood Looks Into Moro Unrest.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, May 9.—Governor-General Wood departed today for Lanao to investigate unrest reported in the Moro tribe. Nearly a month ago a Moro band defied the constabulary and took refuge in a mountain fort. The Moros claim a number were killed about a year ago, without justification, by members of the constabulary and they are now seeking revenge.

APPETITE REGAINED SKIN CLEARED UP

The usefulness of Thedford's Black-Draught has long been known to Mrs. A. B. Leach, of Yale, Okla., who says that she has been using this well known vegetable liver medicine for 28 years.

"I was in very poor health," says Mrs. Leach, telling of her condition at the time she first began to take Thedford's Black-Draught.

"I would eat, but it didn't seem to satisfy or do me any good. I was bloated, felt oppression at the stomach. The fullness in the right side was awful.

"I did not feel like doing a thing. Eating even made me tired. I sat around, feeling so miserable. One day I looked in the glass and my complexion scared me—no color in my face. My ears looked waxy; skin flabby, pale. I was in a bad fix.

"I had been taking medicine, as I was told that it was inactivity of my liver that was causing this trouble. About this time—nothing having done me any good—I began to look for relief.

"I read of Thedford's Black-Draught, and my husband went to the druggist for it. I began its use, and myt how I began to improve. My appetite became more normal. Gradually the bloating disappeared and my skin cleared up. I began to see marked improvement and, from then on now, I have praised Black-Draught as the best liver medicine made.

"I keep Black-Draught in the house and have used it ever since. I regard Black-Draught as my family medicine and expect to keep it for years to come."

Thedford's Black-Draught is made from selected medicinal roots and herbs and contains no dangerous or harmful mineral drugs. It has been in use for 80 years and has been found to relieve constipation, indigestion and biliousness, when due to a torpid liver.

NEW VAPOR AND AIR-COOLED CAR ENGINES READY

Fifty Per Cent Saving of Gasoline Reported in Both Types Perfected by One Factory.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, May 9.—How will the automobile engine of the future be cooled—by air or by steam or by vapor? An unimportant detail, the layman may say. But it is much more important than it appears to be on the surface, so important that the leading engineers of the industry are fighting to prove which type is the better and bending every effort to bring out a car involving his favorite cooling system. Both vapor and air cooling have been perfected to a high degree.

One of the leading companies of the industry in the past two years has expended more than $5,000,000 in cooling experiments. It has evolved an air-cooling system said to be without a peer. Its vapor cooling type has been brought to a point far and away ahead of experiments by other manufacturers.

This company has produced 24 cars, half air-cooled, the other half vapor cooled. Each division of 12 cars has been subdivided as to type of motor, whether poppet or Knight motor, with the former including every kind of poppet-valve engine now being manufactured.

These cars have been subjected to gruelling tests. They have been driven across the continent, driven at high speeds at high altitudes, at sub-sea levels and in the coldest days of winter and hottest periods of summer, in 24-hour and 48-hour nonstop runs and for 24-hour spells at high speeds in dynamometer tests.

The results in both types are said to have been astounding as regards

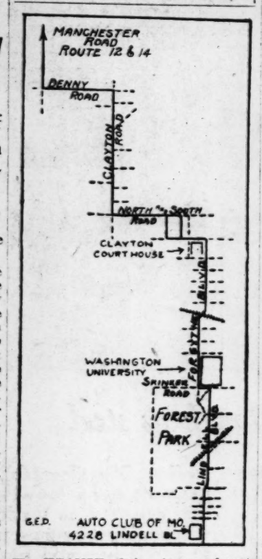
BEST ROUTE OUT OF CENTER OF ST. LOUIS ONTO MANCHESTER ROAD



BECAUSE of the closing of part of Clayton road, it is advisable to use the following route out of St. Louis to the Manchester road, and the Union-Jefferson City route to Kansas City and State highway No. 14 to Springfield, Joplin and the King of Trails route to Oklahoma and Texas:

From Automobile Club of Missouri, 4228 Lindell boulevard, west on Lindell, along north side of Forest Park to Skinker road (end of Lindell), turn left one block to Forsythe boulevard (stop sign on corner), turn right along Washington University grounds. At Pennsylvania avenue, boulevard stop, straight ahead. Cross railroad, curving right and left. In Clayton, Mo., cross car tracks at courthouse, and go ahead one block to end of street. Turn left along west side of courthouse, and right

PLANS CONCRETE TO HOUSE SPRINGS BY END OF YEAR

State Board Asks for Bids for Paving Gap in Gravois Road—Much Other Road Work Planned.

Latest news from Jefferson City is that the Gravois road probably will be paved with concrete all the way from St. Louis to House Springs by the end of this year. Nearly eight miles of 18-foot concrete on this road, from House Springs north, is advertised for bids on May 22 as part of a large amount of State highway work bids for which will be opened on that date. The exact mileage in the House Springs concrete job is 7.542 miles.

Progress on Gravois Road.

The Gravois road is now part of State highway No. 30, to a point about half a mile beyond Cedar Hill, where No. 30 turns off through Dittmer, Oermann and Lone Dell to St. Clair, where it connects with No. 14, the main highway from St. Louis to Springfield and Joplin. The section of the Gravois road from the point where No. 30 turns off to Morse's Mill is not a State highway, so will have to be maintained by Jefferson County.

The fill on the Gravois road across the Meramec River bottom is finished, and laying the concrete on it is scheduled to begin within a few days. The piers and one of the three steel spans of the new bridge across the Meramec River at Fenton have been finished, and expectation is that the bridge will be completed by the time the slab is laid. Laying concrete should be under way soon on the six-mile stretch now under contract, from the new bridge through the outskirts of Fenton to a point about 2½ miles beyond the Rural Jaunt for Sunday Driving

Most of 120-Mile Trip to Troy, Mo., and Wright City Is on All-Weather Roads — Pretty Rolling Country Traversed.

By R. G. BAUMHOFF.

MISSOURI'S road improvement work has opened a region north of St. Louis to pleasant motor travel, which makes possible circuit tours easily within the compass of a day's time.

This is by utilization of the northern end of State Highway No. 3, the Cape Girardeau-St. Louis-Hannibal road. Here follows a description of a trip of about 120 miles, nearly all of which is on all-weather road:

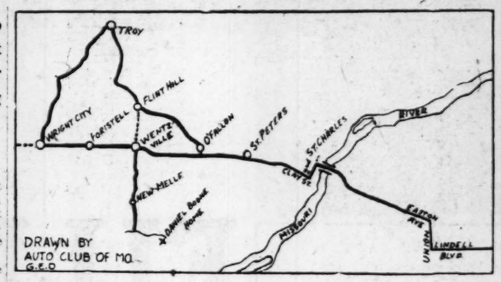
The start is west on the combined highway, No. 2 and No. 9 which runs through St. Louis County as St. Charles road. This road is concreted now on through St. Charles County into Warren County.

Pretty Rural Scenes.

Beauties of the rolling agricultural land in St. Charles County have been described heretofore, and the broad sweep of the Missouri River towards the distant Mississippi bluffs at St. Charles is well known. There is a toll at this bridge, 25 cents for car and driver and 5 cents per passenger.

No. 9 turns north beyond O'Fallon, which lies to the north of the highway, and a short distance east of Wentzville. From this junction on, No. 9 is gravel in excellent condition, a great part of the road permitting reasonably high speed. Flint Hill is the first settlement. About four miles beyond it a bridge over a creek marks the boundary of Lincoln County.

Through the middle-sized hills of that rural county the road winds. The grades and vistas are reminiscent of some parts of Wisconsin. The blue haze that pervaded the countryside on a recent Sunday, when the writer made this trip, camouflaged the scenes so that they also had a Western effect of surpassing charm. As spring advances the attractiveness of this region is increasing.



A Meandering Road.

No. 9, like other Missouri highways, is well marked by the Missouri orange and black signs. The route passes through the town of Moscow Mills, which is on the Burlington Railroad, and on to Troy, the county seat, a picturesque place, with unusually neat and interesting homes and other buildings; rather a lively town, too, for its section.

The circuit tour here described leads to Wright City, in Warren County, on highway No. 2. The turn off No. 9 is made to the west from the main street of Troy, at a corner marked by a public spring. Then there is a turn to the south on the road at the top of the hill, west of the cemetery, on the outskirts of town.

This road, which is unmarked, passes through South Troy, the Burlington station, and meanders through the country to Wright City. There are several creek fords which should give no trouble unless running deep. Only one turn needs to be watched. Several miles beyond South Troy the southbound road forks east and west. A power line turns west, but the main road, with a long stretch of good gravel, turns left. Take the left, or east, turn.

Good Time Can Be Made Home.

Immediately east of Wright City is a break in the concrete, due to connecting either end of the break. The detour crosses the Wabash Railway at each end, and care should be exercised at these crossings. The detour is in good shape a mile long.

Beyond this break is an uninterrupted ribbon of hard road back to the city. The writer made the 50-mile section of the trip from there downtown in the busy traffic of Sunday evening in a Ford in two hours, without undue speed.

The first town east of Wright City is Foristell, just within St. Charles County. Then comes Wentzville. On a passable road in good weather, the motorist can make a 12-mile trip to the picturesque old stone dwelling built by Daniel Boone, where he died more than a century ago.

It is possible on the outbound trip to go into Wright City and thence take a fair road to Flint Hill, connecting with No. 9.

Stretches of the Troy-Wright City road described would not be passable in muddy weather, but it is always possible to follow No. 9 and return the same way. In fact, No. 9 is in good shape all the way to Hannibal, which is about 75 miles north of the junction with No. 2. The writer extended his trip by following No. 9 north of Troy about a dozen miles to within striking distance of the Pike

ROAD MAPS AND TOURING INGORMATION FURNISHED BY THE POST-DISPATCH

Service for Motoring Public Established — Motorists Invited to Consult Travel and Resort Bureau.

ROAD maps for every State in this country, information about road conditions and motoring routes, and assistance in planning short and long tours are now available at the Travel and Resort Bureau of the Post-Dispatch. This bureau is in the main business office on the ground floor of the Post-Dispatch building. It is open from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. daily, except Sunday.

The Automobile Editor will be available for consultation on tours and general touring conditions from 8 a. m. until 10 a. m. every day, except Saturday and Sunday.

All information about roads and motoring will be free. There will be a small charge for maps.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch and the traveling public in general are invited to make use of this service.

Motorists are invited to write to the Automobile Editor about any changes in road conditions they discover, about new trips and attractive objectives for tours; in fact, about anything that they think will be of interest to other motorists.

If you are planning a two weeks' motoring trip down into the Ozarks, or to Wisconsin or Michigan, the Travel and Resort Bureau will be glad to assist you.

If you plan a real long-distance tour to New England or Colorado or the Pacific Coast, the Bureau can give you much information that will be of value.

If you merely want a route for an all-day Sunday trip or an afternoon's jaunt around St. Louis County or over into Illinois, the Travel and Resort Bureau of the Post-Dispatch is at your service.

If you plan a sales or other business trip in the St. Louis trade territory, the bureau may be able to help you make time.

If you are doubtful just what to take in the way of tent, bedding, clothing, cooking equipment and other necessaries on a camping trip, here again the bureau will be able to counsel you.

The best way to make sure of enjoying that vacation trip is to prepare for it, and one of the best ways to prepare is to consult the Post-Dispatch Travel and Resort Bureau.

MORSE ADDRESSES A. A. A. CLUB SECRETARIES' SESSION

Matt F. Morse, manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, addressed the meeting of American Automobile Association Club secretaries at Washington on ways to conduct a club touring bureau. He drove through from St. Louis over the National Old Trails route, and returned via the Shenandoah Valley, Lexington, Ky., Louisville, Ky., and Mt. Carmel, Ill., arriving here Thursday night.

BRAKES MAY NEED USE.

When the brakes don't work very well, and one believes that the trouble has not come gradually (thus indicating possible need for readjustment) use them as much as possible. The linings may need a little drying out or roughing up.

Trip to Gasconade River Region

Many Charming Views and Pretty Rural Bits on Tour, Taken by Party in Star Car, to Mt. Sterling, Bay, Hermann and Washington, Mo.

ANOTHER interesting motor trip of 220 to 230 miles, to Mount Sterling, Mo., on State highway No. 12, the road to Jefferson City, Bay, Hermann, New Haven and Washington, was taken the other day by a party in one of the new Star sedans. The tour can be made in any kind of weather, though some stretches of dirt and Natural gravel would be slippery during or immediately after rain.

Leaving St. Louis at 7:00 a. m., one can drive under 30 miles an hour all the way, yet be at Mount Sterling on the Gasconade River by 11:30 a. m. He can spend an hour at luncheon, and be back home by 6:00 p. m. Or if he elects to return the same way, he can make even better time, whether he goes on through Hermann and New Haven or back tracks through Gerald and Union.

Pretty Country All Along Route.

In either case, he will see a lot of very pretty country, especially beyond Gerald, while the ride from Mount Sterling through Bay to Hermann is especially attractive and there are some fine panoramas over the Missouri River going into New Haven from Hermann.

A feature of this tour is the number of fords—9 between Buford and Mount Sterling, and 13 between the junction of No. 12 and the Bay-Hermann road and Hermann, besides several others on the Hermann-Washington road. But none of these fords necessitates more than wetting one's tires. Several that may have caused trouble in the past have been made safe and solid with concrete bottoms. Even after heavy rain, none of them should stall a car, provided the machine be not slammed through at such a rate that water splashes into the carburetor. Any city driver can make all of these fords without a qualm.

Many Pretty Views.

Starting out the Manchester road, reset the speedometer at 00.0 at Denny road. At 21.2, end of pavement. There is a fine view at 24.1 into a deep valley to the right. At 24.6 the Fiddle Creek road turns to the right. (By a typographical error last Sunday's tour story, this turn was given as 17.6 miles from Denny road, instead of 24.6.) At 25.0, a vista toward the Missouri River down a long, winding valley to the right. At 26.2, another valley view as the car drops down into Gray's Summit. The road continues over the ridges to Union with many pretty views, notably one at 37.4 over the Meramec River. The road is gravel all the way, ranging from good to fair and rough in spots. Union is reached at 42.5.

The road continues gravel, and is generally fine and fast, winding through an attractive countryside. At 50.3, the road becomes exceptionally good, on many stretches being like a park boulevard, and continues fine to 58.0. Then it is somewhat rougher, though not bad, to Gerald at 64.4. Some of the last few miles is a natural gravel, which becomes slippery when wet but does not let a car down. For some distance the road was rougher, then ranged from somewhat rutted to very good.

Into Picnic Country.

At 68.8, Rosebud. At 69.4, swing right on No. 12. The road was rather rutted through pretty wooded country to 74.4, when it became splendid gravel State road through a wooded upland farming country. At 75.6, the road to the right goes to New Haven. There are some attractive picnic places in the next half mile. The road is fine. At 77.9, in Drake, swing left. At 78.4, more picnic country, with roads wandering off to either side. At 79.7, a very lovely sweep over a valley to the right and ahead, then a fine valley view to the left. More picnic country. A region of wooded hills, with lovely pastoral scenes in the vales. A shallow ford at 81.9 and another at 82.4. At 83.4, up grade along one of the prettiest valley in this part of the State. Down again, over a bridge and up a long incline to the top at 84.9 and a view back over the valley.

Beauty at Every Turn.

The next five miles offers beauty at every turn, with four shallow fords, and then the Gasconade River and a bridge at 89.3. There are very pretty views up and down the river from the bridge, from which a fine broad causeway leads across the bottoms and up an easy grade. At the top of the second grade beyond the bridge, at 91.2, the Star party turned back. There was a good picnic place and a fine wind for a Sunday trip. The time was 11:20 a. m. From this hill top and the one nearer Mount Sterling there are interesting vistas down into and across the Gasconade valley, with its far border of low hills on which black cedars look as if inlaid in the lighter green of other trees.

On the Road to Bay.

Returning from Mount Sterling, the Star party turned at 96.3 to the left, where a sign marked the road to Bay, and went up a very steep hill, whose 3 "thank you marms" mark it as a true second-gear grade. The road is very fair gravel, and traverses country so pretty that it is worth the 160-mile jaunt from St. Louis. There are some fords, but all are shallow, really only dips into little rills. At 98.4, a lovely valley to the right. The road winds along the hillside through a leafy bower, up and down, always fair with glimpses of valleys, broad acres and old farmhouses. At 99.1, the village of Bay.

The road continues very fair gravel, and the countryside is even lovelier. At 99.9, a ford through a rill, and left at the fork and upgrade. A beautiful stretch on a shelf road above a creek that is almost hidden among the dense trees. More fords, two with concrete bottoms, the others through rills. One ford is through a rill that comes from an especially picturesque pool among jagged rocks. At 104.3, the road traverses a pretty stretch of slim, second growth timber. The road becomes rutted and for a way is rather rough.

Lovely Countryside.

At 108.2 a very beautiful view to distant hills. The road becomes a fine graveled State highway. The countryside is lovely—tree-clad slopes, pretty woods, graceful trees in the meadows, dark cedars standing out blackly against the lighter greens, red roofs seen through breaks in the hills. At 113.1, a road to the left leading to Fredericksburg and Stolpe ferry, and through Chamois to Jefferson City.

At 114.5, a particularly interesting view to wood-capped hills and the broken country that generally lies back from the river. At 117, a view ahead to the church that sits high on its hills in Hermann. At 118.6, left and along the river bank between railroad tracks and bluff. A mean grade crossing, then sweeping vistas up and down the broad stream. At 119.2, cross the tracks and swin away from the river up lovely ravines, with stiff pulling for the car up well graveled grades. At 120.4, a rough down grade. There are several fords through rills and some rough going at times on the eight miles from Hermann to Berger. At 124.3, there is a bad grade crossing after a curve to the left off a bridge. But there are many pretty scenes along this part of the route.

Inspiring Panorama.

At 126, Berger and a grade crossing. Beyond Berger, there is some dirt road, but mostly gravel. The road traverses exceptionally pretty pastoral country. At 131.0, a bad right curve onto a bridge. At 136.4, one of the finest river views in Eastern Missouri—an inspiring panorama of variegated country to the river and the low hills and bluffs beyond. In fact, for miles the views are all notably fine, one at 137.5 covering fully 200 degrees of an arc and including in its sweep New Haven stretched placidly along the river bank and on its abrupt hills.

Then down a long incline and at 138.7 New Haven. Right over the railroad tracks and up a very steep grade. The road beyond the town ranges from fair to good, with some rough places. One should be careful to keep to the most traveled road. The Star party turned to the right at one place and had mean going until they got back into the main road. The last two miles into Washington are oiled.

Washington is reached at 156.7. Straight ahead on Fifth street into No. 47 for St. Louis and at 167.2 left into No. 12 and presently pavement, then Ellisville, Manchester and back home. The mileage at Denny and Manchester roads was 200.4. So the trip from one's home in St. Louis would be anywhere from 210 to 220 miles, depending thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel

IF you could watch your motor oil in action, you would never again say, "All oil is the same to me." And you would never again entrust the protection of your motor to haphazard lubrication.

You would see, as you watched the oil go into action, that it forms a thin film over the vital parts of your motor. A film that comes between all the whirling, sliding surfaces and prevents the chafe of metal against metal.

The film also seals the space between the pistons and piston-rings and the cylinder walls. It prevents power from blowing past the pistons and wasting itself.

That film must be kept unbroken, in spite of the constant threat of grinding, tearing friction—the lash of searing, scorching heat. No job for a weakling!

The ordinary oil film breaks, leaves hot or bare spots and burns. Through the broken, shattered film, hot metal is bared to friction. The power-seal is gone. Power blows past the pistons and is wasted.

If you could see that actually happening, you would know why poor oil means lost power, scored cylinders, carbon-knocks and burned-out bearings. You would know why poor lubrication causes 75% of all engine repair bills.

The "film of protection"

Tide Water engineers spent years studying the chemical and physical characteristics of oils and oil films. Experiment followed experiment, test followed test, until they perfected, in Veedol, an oil which offers the utmost resistance to deadly heat and friction—an oil which forms a "film of protection" thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel.

To hundreds of thousands of motorists the Veedol "film of protection" has brought added power, greater gasoline and oil mileage and a new freedom from costly motor repairs.

The Veedol Chart at your dealer's is your motor protection guide. It tells you which Veedol oil to use in your car. Have your crankcase filled today with Veedol. Put the "film of protection" to work, safeguarding your motor and conserving its power.

APPETITE REGAINED
SKIN CLEARED UP
The usefulness of Thedford's Black-Draught has long been known to Mrs. A. B. Leach, of Vale, Okla., who says that she has been using this well known vegetable liver medicine for 28 years.
"I was in very poor health," says Mrs. Leach, telling of her condition at the time she first began to take Thedford's Black-Draught.
"I would eat, but it didn't seem to satisfy or do me any good. I was bloated, felt oppression at the stomach. The fullness in the right side was awful.
"I did not feel like doing a thing. Eating even made me tired. I sat around, feeling so miserable. One day I looked in the glass and my complexion scared me—no color in my face. My ears looked waxy; skin flabby, pale. I was in a bad fix.
"I had been taking medicine, as I was told that it was inactivity of my liver that was causing this trouble. About this time—nothing having done me any good—I began to look for relief.
"I read of Thedford's Black-Draught, and my husband went to the druggist for it. I began its use, and my! how I began to improve. My appetite became more normal. Gradually the bloating disappeared and my skin cleared up. I began to see some ed improvement and, from then on now, I have praised Black-Draught as the best liver medicine made.
"I keep Black-Draught in the house and have used it ever since. I regard Black-Draught as my family medicine and expect to keep it for years to come."
Thedford's Black-Draught is made from selected medicinal roots and herbs and contains no dangerous or harmful mineral drugs. It has been in use for 80 years and has been found to relieve constipation, indigestion and biliousness, when due to a torpid liver.
Sold everywhere. Price 25c.

Trip to Gasconade River Region

Many Charming Views and Pretty Rural Bits on Tour, Taken by Party in Star Car, to Mt. Sterling, Bay, Hermann and Washington, Mo.

ANOTHER interesting motor trip of 220 to 230 miles, to Mount Sterling, Mo., on State highway No. 12, the road to Jefferson City, Bay, Hermann, New Haven and Washington, was taken the other day by a party in one of the new Star sedans. The tour can be made in any kind of weather, though some stretches of dirt and Natural gravel would be slippery during or immediately after rain.

Leaving St. Louis at 7:00 a. m., one can drive under 30 miles an hour all the way, yet be at Mount Sterling on the Gasconade River by 11:30 a. m. He can spend an hour at luncheon, and be back home by 6:00 p. m. Or if he elects to return the same way, he can make even better time, whether he goes on through Hermann and New Haven or back tracks through Gerald and Union.

Pretty Country All Along Route.

In either case, he will see a lot of very pretty country, especially beyond Gerald, while the ride from Mount Sterling through Bay to Hermann is especially attractive and there are some fine panoramas over the Missouri River going into New Haven from Hermann.

A feature of this tour is the number of fords—9 between Buford and Mount Sterling, and 13 between the junction of No. 12 and the Bay-Hermann road and Hermann, besides several others on the Hermann-Washington road. But none of these fords necessitates more than wetting one's tires. Several that may have caused trouble in the past have been made safe and solid with concrete bottoms. Even after heavy rain, none of them should stall a car, provided the machine be not slammed through at such a rate that water splashes into the carburetor. Any city driver can make all of these fords without a qualm.

Many Pretty Views.

Starting out the Manchester road, reset the speedometer at 00.0 at Denny road. At 21.2, end of pavement. There is a fine view at 24.1 into a deep valley to the right. At 24.6 the Fiddle Creek road turns to the right. (By a typographical error last Sunday's tour story, this turn was given as 17.6 miles from Denny road, instead of 24.6.) At 25.0, a vista toward the Missouri River down a long, winding valley to the right. At 26.2, another valley view as the car drops down into Gray's Summit. The road continues over the ridges to Union with many pretty views, notably one at 37.4 over the Meramec River. The road is gravel all the way, ranging from good to fair and rough in spots. Union is reached at 42.5.

The road continues gravel, and is generally fine and fast, winding through an attractive countryside. At 50.3, the road becomes exceptionally good, on many stretches being like a park boulevard, and continues fine to 58.0. Then it is somewhat rougher, though not bad, to Gerald at 64.4. Some of the last few miles is a natural gravel, which becomes slippery when wet but does not let a car down. For some distance the road was rougher, then ranged from somewhat rutted to very good.

Into Picnic Country.

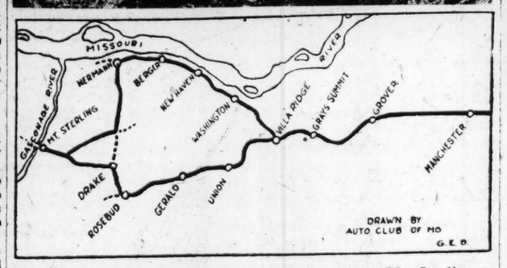
At 68.8, Rosebud. At 69.4, swing right on No. 12. The road was rather rutted through pretty wooded country to 74.4, when it became splendid gravel State road through a wooded upland farming country. At 75.6, the road to the right goes to New Haven. There are some attractive picnic places in the next half mile. The road is fine. At 77.9, in Drake, swing left. At 78.4, more picnic country, with roads wandering off to either side. At 79.7, a very lovely sweep over a valley to the right and ahead, then a fine valley view to the left. More picnic country. A region of wooded hills, with lovely pastoral scenes in the vales. A shallow ford at 81.9 and another at 82.4. At 83.4, up grade along one of the prettiest valley in this part of the State. Down again, over a bridge and up a long incline to the top at 84.9 and a view back over the valley.

Beauty at Every Turn.

The next five miles offers beauty at every turn, with four shallow fords, and then the Gasconade River and a bridge at 89.3. There are very pretty views up and down the river from the bridge, from which a fine broad causeway leads across the bottoms and up an easy grade. At the top of the second grade beyond the bridge, at 91.2, the Star party turned back. Here was a good picnic place and a fine end for a Sunday trip. The time was 11:30 a. m. From this hill top and the one nearer Mount Sterling there are interesting vistas down into and across the Gasconade valley, with its far border of low hills on which black cedars look as if inlaid in the lighter green of other trees.

On the Road to Bay.

Returning from Mount Sterling, the Star party turned at 96.3 to the left, where a sign marked the road to Bay, and went up a very steep hill, whose 3 "thank you marms" mark it as a true second-gear grade. The road is very fair gravel, and traverses country so pretty that it is worth the 160-mile jaunt from St. Louis. There are some fords, but all are shallow, really only dips into little rills. At 98.4, a lovely valley to the right. The road winds along the hillside through a leafy bower, up and down, always fair with glimpses of valleys, broad acres and old farmhouses. At 99.1, the village of Bay.



Top—Vista down a side road on the way from Mt. Sterling to Hermann. Below—Map of St. Louis-Mt. Sterling-Bay-Hermann tour.

The road continues very fair gravel, and the countryside is even lovelier. At 99.9, a ford through a rill, and left at the fork and upgrade. A beautiful stretch on a shelf road above a creek that is almost hidden among the dense trees. More fords, two with concrete bottoms, the others through rills. One ford is through a rill that comes from an especially picturesque pool among jagged rocks. At 104.3, the road traverses a pretty stretch of slim, second growth timber. The road becomes rutted and for a way is rather rough.

Lovely Countryside.

At 108.2 a very beautiful view to distant hills. The road becomes a fine graveled State highway. The countryside is lovely—tree-clad slopes, pretty woods, graceful trees in the meadows, dark cedars standing out blackly against the lighter greens, red roofs seen through breaks in the hills. At 113.1, a road to the left leading to Fredericksburg and Stolpe ferry, and through Chamois to Jefferson City.

At 114.5, a particularly interesting view to wood-capped hills and the broken country that generally lies back from the river. At 117, a view ahead to the church that sits high on its hills in Hermann. At 118.0, the center of Hermann, picturesquely located along the Missouri River and on several hills. Right on East Fourth street, left on Schiller street, right on East First street. At 118.6, left and along the river bank between railroad tracks and bluff. A mean grade crossing, then sweeping vistas up and down the broad stream. At 119.2, cross the tracks and swin away from the river up lovely ravines, with stiff pulling for the car up well graveled grades. At 120.4, a rough down grade. There are several fords through rills and some rough going at times on the eight miles from Hermann to Berger. At 124.3, there is a bad grade crossing after a curve to the left off a bridge. But there are many pretty scenes along this part of the route.

DONALD AGAIN AUTO DEALERS' PRESIDENT

Re-Election as President Marks 18th Year of St. Louis Association.

Re-election of F. C. McDonald, head of the Southwest Nash Co., as president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, at the annual meeting last week, marked the beginning of the association's eighteenth year as a vital factor in the automobile business in this city. F. W. Kardell, president of the Kardell Motor Car Co., who also was nominated for the office, withdrew in McDonald's favor.

J. D. Perry Lewis, head of the Lewis Automobile Co., was elected vice president, George Weber, head of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., withdrawing in his favor. Walter H. Vesper, vice president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., was re-elected treasurer, E. A. Hatch, president of the Mississippi Motor Co., withdrawing in favor. Directors elected were: T. Sallsbury, vice president of De More Automobile Co.; George Berry, president of the Berry Motor Car Co., and Edward Weber, head of the Weber Motor Car Co., for two-year terms, and Joseph A. Blecht, president of the Mound City Automobile Co., for one year. The nominations were made by a committee consisting of H. C. Merz of the Wilson Motor Car Co., chairman; A. E. Spielberg of the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. Louis and E. C. Meissner of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co.

The meeting was preceded by a dinner and was held at the Hotel Buckingham. Addresses were made by Rabbi Leon Harrison of Temple Israel and by Shirley D. Parker of Chicago.

New Production Record.

The Ford Motor Co. is again setting new production records. Tuesday, April 28, all previous records for daily output were broken when the Ford domestic assembly plants turned out a total of 7594 cars and trucks.

WINS SALES CONTEST.

LOUIS WOLF of 3174 Oregon avenue, a salesman for the Southwest Nash Co., distributer of Nash cars, won first prize in a sales contest for Nash salesmen in the metropolitan district held throughout April. He won a $400 ring, selling $27,000 worth of Nash cars and accessories during the month. Lloyd Graf of the same company won second prize, a watch, for selling cars worth $25,000. J. J. Dooley of the South Side Nash Co. won third prize, a silver service, for selling $23,000 worth, while fourth prize, a traveling bag odnated by the South Side Nash Co., went to L. V. Williams, who sold $17,000 worth. All records of points for sales were audited and certified by a committee consisting of Fred W. Gatermann, president of the South Side Nash Co.; C. L. O'Brien, president of the Metropolitan Nash Co., and Charles J. Heintz, head of the Heintz Nash Co. This month the Southwest Nash Co. is holding a sales contest for its own force, with cash prizes of $300 for first, $200 for second $100 for third. Used car sales count double new-car sales, and sales of the more expensive models for more than sale of lower-priced cars.

TIRE SALESMEN MEET.

A conference of the United States tire sales organization in the St. Louis district was held at Hotel Statler Saturday. Salesmen covering Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri and Tennessee attended. The meeting was conducted by G. W. Manchester, local manager of tire sales. Company officials present were G. S. Shugart, vice president and general manager; C. K. Whidden, manager truck tire sales, and Field Sales Managers E. S. Roe of New York, P. C. Anderson of Chicago and T. R. Burton of Detroit.

NEW ZONE SALES CHIEF.

CHANGES in the organization of the St. Louis zone sales force of the Durant Motors Co., Inc., have brought a complete shift in executives. Howard H. Shelton, who has been assistant to Colin Campbell, vice president of Durant Motors, as special representative out of New York, has been appointed zone sales manager, his territory including Missouri, Illinois, and part of Kentucky. Shelton has had seven years of experience in the automobile business.

H. H. Shelton.

George C. Hamilton, who has been branch manager in St. Louis, carrying on the business of the St. Louis Durant Co., which retails Star and Durant cars, has been appointed assistant zone sales manager. Hamilton also has been in the automobile business for a number of years.

G. C. Hamilton.

Edward K. Jeans, who has been retail sales manager for the St. Louis Durant Co., has been appointed Star and Durant branch manager, succeeding Hamilton. E. A. Thomure succeeds Jeans as retail sales manager of the St. Louis Durant Co.

TO HAVE OWN BUSINESS.

Harry A. Schanaker has resigned as automobile, radio and sporting goods buyer for Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, with which he has been connected for 15 years, and has become part owner of the Master Battery and Sales Co., 2834 Washington boulevard, which also has a branch at 1635-37 Tower Grove. The firm handles Pennsylvania vacuum cup tires as well as Master batteries, and is equipped for adjustments and shop and road service on tires and batteries. It also carries accessories and oils.

STARTS ON 30-DAY RUN.

A Moon roadster is being driven on a 30-day endurance run through Wisconsin whichg began May 3. The driver is under sealed orders so that his route from day to day is not known in advance. Each leg of the trip spells "Moon" on the map. During the run the Moon will go to Milwaukee for a 48-hour nonstop run with motor sealed. The Moon also will be the official car to open the new $1,000,000 Wisconsin highway which is to be dedicated May 31.

LEASES NEW BUILDING.

The Diesing Motor Sales Co., St. Louis distributer of Rickenbacker cars, has just leased 2216-18 Locust street so that it can house all its departments under one roof. This building is 80 by 150 feet and is of steel and concrete. It has a spacious showroom and offices, with rear space for quick service work. There is 12,000 square feet of space on the second floor, which will be used for shop service and maintenance work. A concrete ramp leads to the second floor. The showroom is being decorated, and the Diesing Co. expects to occupy it around the middle of this month. F. G. W. Sudrow, general manager of the firm, says the increased demand for Rickenbacker cars has necessitated the change to larger quarters. The floor space is nearly three times as large as that in its present quarters on Delmar boulevard and its Locust boulevard used car salesrooms which will be discontinued when the firm moves into its new quarters.

SPIRITED SALES CONTEST.

The Indianapolis race prize contest is again being held by the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., retail sales department, and will close May 23, having started March 23. Each retail salesman has been given a sales quota, and each man who reaches this quota will have his expenses paid by the company to the race at Indianapolis on Memorial Day. To picture the progress of the contest and to stimulate interest in the contest, a race course has been laid out, showing the start at St. Louis, a roadway to Indianapolis with the well-known towns in between indicated and the finish at the race track where space has been provided to show the names of the winners as they qualify. Each salesman has been given a number, and his position in the race is indicated by placing the car, which carries his number, on the course at a point indicative of his sales volume each day. A similar contest was held by the Vesper-Buick Co. two years ago when four salesmen qualified for the trip.

SCENIC TRIP TO MT. STERLING ON GASCONADE RIVER

on where his residence was located.

How the Car Performed.

This Star car, though so new that it was driven carefully all the way to Mount Sterling, at no time running faster than 27 to 28 miles an hour, performed astonishingly well. It pulled hills in high that looked like sure second gear grades. It slowed down to a walk in high for bad spots on grades, then picked up and sped over the top. It showed real torque and hang-on ability. Incidentally, it rambled up and over the Gray's Summit hill on high with ease and dispatch, in fact, in a way to indicate that it is going to be a bitter-end contender in any hill climbing contest anywhere.

The car in which this trip was made was equipped with balloon tires, which are optional on this model at extra cost. With these tires and the 82 inches of springs, the Star rode very comfortably at all times, whether on the smoother gravel stretches or on the rough, rutted going, the rear end showing a pleasing tendency to cling to the road instead of flinging the passengers around. The tubular backbone, which is a feature of all Durant-built cars, contributes considerably to the comfortable riding qualities, and, in addition, prevents the body from being twisted and racked on rough roads.

The new "Million Dollar" motor in the Star proved itself. It has full pressure lubrication and a water pump cooling system, so does not heat on hard pulling or steady fast running. Toward the end of the trip the car had worn in sufficiently to permit testing it for speed and running ability. It operates quietly and without vibration at 40 to 45 miles an hour and faster, and should maintain high speed for hours at a time without heating or injury.

Acceleration for passing another car on the road or for use in traffic is speedy and powerful. The engine performs at its very best when under heavy load.

Altogether, the trip proved that Durant has built into the Star performing and easy riding ability that make it a snappy, dependable car for city driving or long distance touring.

The car was driven by George C. Hamilton, assistant zone sales manager, and E. A. Thomure, retail sales manager of the St. Louis Durant Co. They were accompanied by a newspaper man.

New Price for HUDSON COACH (Was $1345)
Today's Hudson Super-Six Coach costs less than half the price at which the open models have sold. With the world's largest production of 6-cylinder cars, quality is constantly improved and therefore Hudson is more than ever
"The World's Greatest Buy"
Hudson's leadership is based upon ten years' concentration in refining a great car around the famous Super-Six motor. This exclusive invention added 80% to motor efficiency, yielding 76 horsepower without added weight, size or cost. It almost doubled car endurance. No design, however costly, has been found to excel Super-Six smoothness, reliability and performance.
There has been constant improvement in every detail. Easier steering, greater roadability, more comfort, better materials, finer workmanship, handsomer appearance, and more lasting finish. In all ways it is the greatest Hudson and the lowest priced Hudson.

Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tires are available from Goodyear Dealers in the following sizes:

30 x 3½ (CL)	34 x 4½ (S.S.)
32 x 4 (S.S.)	30 x 5 "
33 x 4 "	33 x 5 "
32 x 4½ "	34 x 5 "
35 x 5 (S.S.)

For those who desire balloon tires Goodyear makes a complete line, including the HEAVY DUTY type in certain sizes.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

Heavy Duty—and we don't mean maybe

A new and extra-rugged Goodyear Cord Tire, for passenger cars, buses and trucks, built especially for punishing service

HERE'S a new and super-stout tire, made in popular standard sizes, whose name describes exactly the use for which it is designed.

It is the Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tire.

Maybe it's a mite too good for the mild and easy driver who pilots a light car always over smooth pavements.

Maybe it's unnecessarily strong and sturdy for the chap who picks his way leisurely and with care.

But for the man who likes to let a good car travel, who is out to pass 'em come rough roads or smooth, who wants to get there and get back without fuss or halt it's the tire of tires.

You won't wonder why, when you learn how this new HEAVY DUTY Goodyear is made.

In the first place, it's a heavier, stauncher, more massive tire than the standard tire you're used to.

Its powerful athletic body is made of SUPERTWIST, the celebrated new Goodyear cord fabric of superior elasticity and endurance, and is made extra heavy to insure extreme protection against stone bruise, carcass breaking and the shocks and jolts of rough roads.

This dependable structure is shod with a thick, deep-cut, full All-Weather tread, combining maximum traction with long slow wear.

Even rut-wear is provided against, by means of stout concentric rubber ribs around the sturdy sidewalls.

A HEAVY DUTY tire and no mistake!—of course costing a little more.

But there's brimming extra value in every extra penny, plus a world of security and peace of mind.

How about you—can you use the extra serviceability and strength built into this splendid product?

If you can, today's none too soon to put these HEAVY DUTY Goodyears on your car.

And when it comes to truck tires—

Goodyear leadership is not limited to passenger car tires only; it includes truck tires as well.

For every hauling condition, for every requirement of service, road and load, there is a right Goodyear Truck Tire—in each case designed and built to be the best truck tire for the job.

Your Goodyear Truck Tire Dealer will advise you what type is the right equipment for you: whether the All-Weather Tread Heavy Duty Cushion, for heavy trucking; the All-Weather Tread Pneumatic Cushion, for lighter work; or the Heavy Duty Pneumatic Truck Tire, for all service where pneumatic equipment is practical and desirable.

Good tires deserve good tubes—Goodyear Tubes

John Smith and His Car

By FREDERICK RUSSELL

BUILDING THE GARAGE.

SMITH had just paid his garage bill when I next met him. It was evident by his expression that he was not at all satisfied with the new rates, nor even with the storage charges he had been paying since owning the car. A copy of an automobile magazine opened to a page on the subject of building one's own garage proved beyond a doubt that he was thinking of a solution to his storage problem.

"But don't forget that a public garage has many advantages," I reminded him. "If your battery goes bad on a cold morning there is always a rental ready for you. If your car refuses to start there is a mechanic at your service. Gas, oil and all supplies are yours for the asking. And if you happen to find a flat tire just as you are starting for the theater there is the garage hand to change to the spare and save you both time and inconvenience."

"Yes, but your car is wrecked in a public garage," he argued. "The garage people are careful, but they can't always be watching careless car owners. Besides, the motorist who keeps his car in a public garage has no incentive to work on his machine and keep it in order. He has no place to leave his things. And he wouldn't work around the car anyway, because the floor is too crowded and the atmosphere is dangerous. I want a garage of my own."

"I want to see you have it," I replied. "But don't forget that the public garage has its place—and an important place at that. There are times of the year when the average private garage isn't very inviting."

"I can install some sort of heating device," Smith said.

"Certainly," I admitted. "But who will shovel your driveway when it's banked with snow?"

"I hadn't thought of that," he said, after I had mentioned a few other objections. "But why not build a private garage and use it eight months of the year? In the dead of winter use the public garage. That would save $15 a month or $120 for the eight months."

"And by renting out the other space in your garage at $8 a month for the same period you'll be putting $184 a year toward the cost of your garage. You'll soon have it paid for."

That settled it. Smith fell to telling me his plans for building it. There were some points he overlooked, however.

"It's too late to think of making the garage part of the house," I suggested "but don't plant it way back in the corner of the lot. You have just that much more driveway to take care of and just so many more feet to walk in the rain. Make your driveway curve around and place the garage so that its side parallels the rear of the house. Another advantage of curving the driveway and making it wide at the curve is that you can turn the car around and drive out to the street forwards."

"Do you think it's necessary to have a side door?" Smith asked, when we began considering details.

"If you have the sort of driveway doors that fold you will have to. This new construction is excellent. The big doors can't be opened from the outside. When you want to take the car out you unlock the side door and step inside the garage. Then the large doors can be unbolted and folded aside. They are never in the way and, of course, cannot blow shut."

Suddenly Smith had a bright idea.

"I'm going to have a work pit in the garage," he announced. "I've always wanted an easy way to get under the car."

"That's all right for street car barns," I replied, "but not for a garage. Others have tried these pits but have learned that they are the next thing to graves. Gasoline vapor always clings to the ground. The pit would be filled with fumes. And if you did happen to be lucky enough not to set fire to them you could hardly escape their poisoning influences. Better make the floor under your car a washstand. And, while I think of it, have a concrete ridge placed at the back of each stall, so that when you drive in carelessly the front wheels will come to a stop at the proper place and thus save you the expense of putting on a new bumper or repairing the garage wall."

"By the way," he asked, before taking up the architectural points, "aren't these garage heaters dangerous?"

"Not if they are properly installed," I replied. "From what I know about them they are satisfactory enough to warrant trying one and saving an additional $60 per year on winter storage. But if you want to be sure, and if you want to build the sort of garage everybody else meant to build, why don't you make a tour of the neighborhood and get a few pointers? After all, you get the best advice from those who have lived and learned, provided you know how to apply their experience to your own case."

the superiority of either over water cooling in increased motor efficiency, in greater power, in lessened wear and tear on the motor and especially in reduced gasoline consumption. In some instances it is declared gasoline consumed was 50 per cent less than under like circumstances in water-cooled engines. The superiority of the one over the other seems not to have been demonstrated to disinterested observers.

The difficulty, however, lies in the internal politics of the organization conducting these experiments. The head engineer favors air-cooled motors, and his particular air-cooled motor is admitted to be a marvel in this type of engine. Every other leading engineer in the organization favors vapor-cooling and is as stubborn in defense of it. Just when and how the controversy will end no one knows. But that it will end soon is asserted by the few who are aware of the experiments and who declare that no matter which type of cooling is selected, it will be an exceptional step forward in automobile motor manufacture.

County line, through picturesque country.

At St. Peters, the first town west of St. Charles, a side trip on highway No. 56 is possible, but the road is dirt, impassable after rain. It affords pleasant spots for luncheon without the annoyance of traffic.

The old Boone's Lick, or Harvester road, turning off No. 2 to the south at St. Charles, may be followed in good weather to a point south of Wentzville, connecting with the cross road to the Boone homestead.

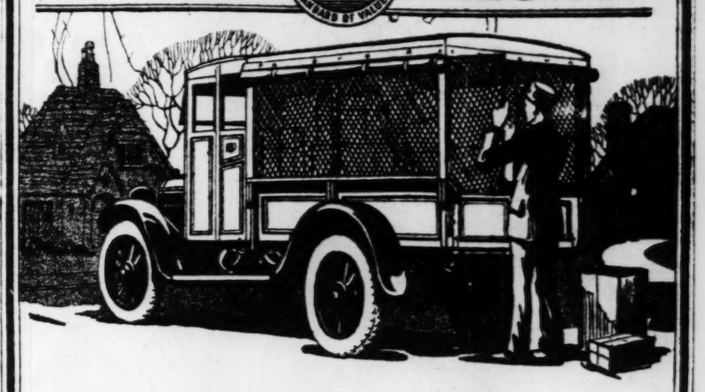
SPEED WAGON



The Speed Wagon has been continuously manufactured since 1914. Each year has meant increased production.

In ten years there have been no radical changes in its design or construction.

These facts explain why the Speed Wagon never has been—or will be—an orphan.

And why interchangeability of parts—one year's make of car with another—is so pronounced.

Both facts largely influence the high resale or trade-in value of the Speed Wagon.

You don't need opera glasses to see big value in this Six

The new Gardner Six is a husky, man-size Six with more built-in value—more beauty, more comfort, more performance, more happy miles between the front bumper and tail light—than $1395 ever before bought in an automobile.

And you don't have to take anybody's word for it, for the car is here and you can easily check up on everything we say.

You'll find new beauty in color and line that will make you sit up and take notice—a smooth, eager motor that will give you a new idea of flashing speed, power and performance—a car that steers and handles as easily as a bicycle. That's value!

You'll find a Six that's built to last—a Six you can keep for years—a Six you'll never have to baby. Note the big, stout axles especially designed for Gardner enclosed 4-wheel brakes. Rear springs almost half the total wheelbase length. The brute-like strength of the chassis, with its 6-inch frame and six cross-members. Less might do, but Gardner doesn't build that way.

Any man with a firm determination to get the most automobile in the world for $1395 is going to be a mighty hard-to-sell prospect for competitive motor car salesmen once he meets the car that's winning wise buyers all over the nation—

The new Gardner Six.

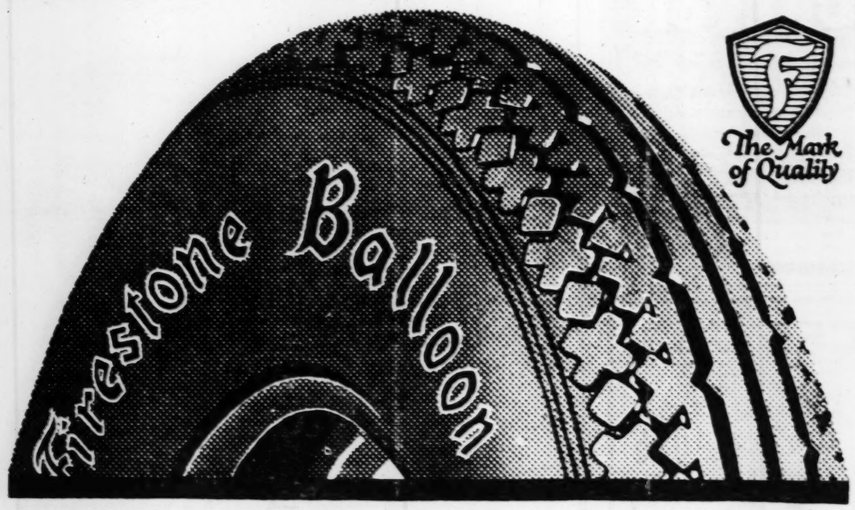
GARDNER PERFORMANCE AND DURABILITY HAVE NEVER BEEN QUESTIONED

No Increase in the Price of Firestone FULL-SIZE GUM-DIPPED BALLOONS



MOST MILES PER DOLLAR

The extra quality built in by the extra process of Gum-Dipping, the economy of these wonderful tires and the added mileage obtained from them during the past two years, has created such a large demand that over 75% of Firestone's mammoth production is now Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

This naturally has greatly increased the total sales volume and the huge Firestone factories are now taxed to capacity, on a 24-hour schedule to supply the demand.

This large volume, produced under the most economical tire manufacturing methods, permits Firestone to sell these extra-process Full-Size Balloons at no extra cost to car owners. And this is in the face of the greatly advanced cost for crude rubber brought about by the operation of the British Rubber Restriction Act.

Bear in mind that Gum-Dipping means longer mileage—greater economy. But there is no extra cost to tire buyers!

Enjoy the safety, economy and comfort of Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords this summer. Any one of the Firestone Dealers listed below is prepared to equip your car now at low cost—with liberal allowance for your old tires.

AMERICANS SHOULD PRODUCE THEIR OWN RUBBER . . . Firestone

AMERICAN TRUCKS IN DEMAND ABROAD

Two-Ton Trucks Made in U. S. Are as Sturdy as Foreign-Made 3 and 4-Ton Machines.

Tremendous expansion of motorized transportation in all foreign countries, with increasing demand for lighter trucks of one, one and a half and two-ton capacity, as feeders to other methods of transportation, is reported by W. Ward Mohun, export manager of the Federal Motor Truck Co., who has just returned to this country after 13 months abroad.

"American users of motor trucks have been demanding heavy vehicles," he reports. "The user in America buys a truck expecting to use it for loads half again and even twice as heavy. But abroad the capacity limit is strictly observed. American two-ton trucks, for instance, are as sturdy as the average three and four-ton truck of foreign make. Everywhere that I have been the crying need is for medium-capacity trucks to relieve and assist railroad and ship transportation.

"The competitive conditions under which American motor trucks are sold are by no means the same as for our passenger cars. American volume car production permits much lower prices for our cars so we dominate the field everywhere, save possibly in some European countries. But American production of motor trucks is more nearly in line with the output of makers of trucks in other countries. Naturally, their units compete more directly with us in price and quality.

"But close attention to our export trade and catering to its peculiarities has been a prominent factor in the development of Federal's export business. It is particularly in the careful handling of our export shipments, with the realization that these trucks were going so far from the factory, that we have won countless friends for our product.

"This is evidenced by the fact that nearly 20 per cent of our total production goes to foreign lands, more than double the percentage of the average export business of the American builders of passenger cars."

PLANS CONCRETE TO HOUSE SPRINGS BY END OF YEAR

St. Louis County-Jefferson County line. The 7.542-mile strip of concrete that is advertised for bids on May 22 will carry the slab through to House Springs.

Detour Will Be Problem.

At present there is a detour on the Gravois road from Sappington over the Denny and Watson roads to Fenton. Motorists still use the road from Fenton to House Springs, though it is rough in places and there is a short detour. But travel on the Gravois road is not recommended beyond Fenton. When the concrete men get at work on the Gravois road, the detour question will be troublesome, as there will be no satisfactory way around. Of course, it will be possible to travel via Valley Park to House Springs, or to go out the Lemay Ferry road and cut across from Antonio to House Springs. Another alternative will be to go to Hillsboro and then cut over to Morse's Mill and swing back through Cedar Hill to House Springs. The Lemay Ferry road grades can be avoided by going on concrete to Barnhart, then using gravel roads to Antonio and House Springs.

Bids Asked for on Other Roads.

Bids have been asked on .746 of a mile of graded dirt on Route No. 21 east from Lesterville, in Reynolds County, at the East Fork of the Black River, and also for building a bridge over this East Fork. No. 21 is the Festus-De Soto-Potosi-Ironton-Glover-Centerville highway into and through Reynolds County, and connects at Garwood with No. 16, the cross-State route from the Cairo ferry through Sikeston and Poplar Bluff to Springfield. Improvement of No. 21 is of interest to St. Louis motorists and vacationists.

Bids also will be received on 10½ miles of 18-foot concrete pavement between Hannibal and Palmyra on Route No. 9, the St. Louis-Troy-Bowling Green-New London-Hannibal-Palmyra-Canton-Keokuk highway. A little over 2 miles of gravel is to be laid on No. 9 between the Marion County line and La Grange.

Cape Girardeau is to get 3¼ miles of concrete southward on Route No. 9, across the Cape Girardeau-Scott County line. This is on the main St. Louis-Festus-Flat Rivers-Fredericktown-Jackson-Cape Girardeau-Sikeston route to Arkansas and Memphis.

Work Planned on No. 12.

Bids will be received for some work on No. 12, the main St. Louis-Jefferson City-Kansas City route south of the Missouri River. It will include 4.95 miles of gravel east and west of Tipton, in Moniteau County, and 8.68 miles of gravel between Tipton and California. Six bridges will be included, among them a bridge over Dry Fork Branch, one over Bailey Branch, one over Long Branch, one over Sappington Branch and another over Birdsong Creek.

Bids will be received for 9.24 miles of gravel between Mexico and Vandalia on Route No. 22, the highway from Louisiana (on the bank of the Mississippi River) through Bowling Green, Vandalia, Laddonia, Mexico and Centralia to a junction with No. 7, the Jefferson City-Moberly road.

Knox County is to get 9.13 miles of gravel south from Edina on No. 15, which is the north and south highway traversing Memphis (near the Iowa border), Edina, Shelby, Mexico, Fulton and Jefferson City.

Bids also will be received for 11.60 miles of 16-foot gravel in Knox and Scotland Counties on No. 15, north of Edina. This gravel will be laid between Baring and Memphis.

No. 14, the St. Louis-Springfield-Joplin highway, will share in the work for which bids will be received May 22. Included will be 7.40 miles of grading dirt road west from Rolla. Little Beaver Creek another stream will be bridged.

Bids to be received will cover work in Howell County, including 6.73 miles of 20-foot gravel between West Plains and the Oregon County line on No. 7, which runs from the Iowa border south through Kirksville, Macon, Moberly, Columbia, Jefferson City, Vienna, Rolla, Cabool and West Plains to Thayer, on the Arkansas line. Work also will be done on No. 7 in Boone County, including 8 miles of graded dirt north from Hinton and bridges over Grindstone Creek and Silver Fork.

Bids will be received for 6.08 miles of graded dirt in Miller County on No. 17, which connects routes Nos. 15, 14 and 7 via Tuscumbia, Waynesville and Houston. Work to be done on No. 47 will be between the Cole County line and Tuscumbia.

Nearly 10 miles of graded dirt road (9.88, to be exact) is planned for route No. 34 in Reynolds County, between Garwood and Leeper. No. 34 runs from Cape Girardeau and Jackson to Piedmont and Garwood, where it connects with No. 16 to Springfield.

PARKING PRECAUTION.

A new car with balloon tires may have rear fenders dipping down closer to the ground. High curbs should be watched when swinging into a parking space, or when the car is backed into a space.

"It Pays to Buy AT THE Reliable"

Twenty-five years ago Velie carriages were famous the country over for their beauty of design and finish and for the fine craftsmanship that fashioned them.

For eighteen years Velie Motor Cars have enjoyed that same enviable reputation.

And it is a significant fact that of all the Velie cars produced during that long period, 70 percent are still in active service.

HAS NEW SHOWROOM.

Methudy & Page, Inc., distributer of Rollin cars, has just finished remodeling its showroom in the old mansion at Grand and West Pine boulevards. The building occupies a strategic position, where Pine and Lawton avenue converge into the cutoff, and stream of traffic past it is increasing rapidly, until West Pine boulevard is coming to rival Washington boulevard in the number of motor vehicles using it. The front of the first floor of the building, which is owned by Eugene St. Methudy of the firm, has been reconstructed into one large showroom, which gives space for displaying the new Rollin models.

OCCUPIES NEW BUILDING.

The Price Motor Co. has taken possession of a new two-story building, 50 by 150 feet, at 1320 South Grand boulevard, which it has erected adjacent to its building at 1312 South Grand. It will use the new building for Ford sales. This building has white tiled showroom and service department for Ford cars and trucks. The older building, which is separated from the new by a public alley, will be used to used car sales. The firm is headed by James E. Price, who has been an authorized Ford dealer since 1921.

TIRE FIRM HAS MOVED.

The Carpenter Tire Co. has moved from 2908 Washington boulevard to a new building at 3923 Washington, where it has more room and a service yard. Thomas P. Carpenter, secretary of the Associated Tire Dealers of St. Louis, is head of the firm.

SALES FORCE GIVES DINNER.

Sewart McDonald, president of the Moon Motor Car Co., Shirley D. Parker, of Chicago, E. J. Krause and Robert E. Lee, were the principal speakers Monday night at a dinner given by the sales force of the E. J. Krause Co., Rolls Royce distributer and Moon dealer, at the Coronado Hotel.

A MILLION MILES OF PROOF

AN automobile is economical only when a low selling price is followed by low operating costs.

Continual repair jobs change a low-priced automobile into a most costly one.

In reliability of operation and freedom from repair bills the Star has acquired recognized leadership.

228 Star owners report driving 2,976,234 miles at a total cost of $1,793.31 for mechanical repairs and replacements—practically 14805 miles per car at a repair cost of $7.86½.

Star owners who made this record live in various States of the Union and in Canada. The record represents Star car performance under all the variable conditions of road and climate that exist in the United States. It is average performance of average Star cars under average conditions of every day work.

Let us show you how the Star performs.

What's New in Cars

NEW LINES FOR THIS CAR.

THE Peerless six is now appearing in a new dress, including a radiator, hood and cowl, similar to that of its companion, the Equipoised Eight. There have been only minor refinements in motor and chassis of the Peerless six. More noticeable, and adding to no small degree to the beauty of the inclosed cars, is the extension of the tops over the windshields, obviating the necessity for separate sun visors. The gracefully curved molding which couples this extension of the top with the molding around the belt and hood is an attractive touch. The general effect is to add to the appearance of length of the car. The belt panel, with its double line of molding, lends itself to effective employment of two-tone color combinations. A new member of the Peerless six line is a sport roadster which, with wheelbase of 134 inches, provides exceptional room for the two extra passengers who can be comfortably accommodated in a seat which unfolds from the sweeping rear deck. Through a wide door on the righ-hand side, luggage or bags of golf clubs may be stowed. Peerless cars are distributed by the Park Automobile Co.

NO GREAT CHANGE IN AUTO PRICES LIKELY, SAYS GARDNER

Commenting on a recent trip through the East on which he visited publishers, bankers, automobile distributers and dealers, Russell E. Gardner Jr., president of the Gardner Motor Co. of St. Louis, says that the stage is all set for a healthy business year. "Business as a whole is just about normal," he says, "and probably not up to the boom expectations of early March, but a feeling of confidence and optimism prevails wherever you go. The automobile business is feeling the stimulation of spring buying. Dealers' stocks are low, and in many centers there is an actual shortage of new cars. The used car situation throughout the East is the best in several years. The supply of used cars of many dealers in the large cities has been exhausted and some dealers are going into the rural sections to replenish their used car stocks.

"While it is obvious that individual manufacturers will make price adjustments, it is felt generally that there will be no great change in the price situation so far as automobiles are concerned, at least not this year."

MOTORING COMMANDMENTS

There are 10 commandments that every motorist should know, says H. J. Klingler, sales manager of the St. Louis Chevrolet factory—10 things that will save money, time and temper after the car has run a few thousand miles.

1. When you buy a new car, read the instruction book.
2. Check up daily on oil, gasoline, battery and tires.
3. Bring in your new car at end of first 500 miles for inspection.
4. Do not make a truck of your car.
5. Don't speed.
6. Always have repairs made by a mechanic skilled on the car you drive.
7. Keep your tires inflated properly.
8. Never drive without oil.
9. Always be sure that your shifting lever is in neutral before using starter.
10. Don't expect $6000 performance from a $600 car.

If these commandments are followed, any motorist can expect maximum service from his car.

Troubled With Pimples Two Years Cuticura Healed

"My skin began to itch and burn and hard, large, red pimples broke out on my face, shoulders and arms. The pimples festered and scaled over and my face looked terrible. My clothing rubbed against the pimples on my shoulders and caused them to bleed. The irritation caused me to scratch the pimples, and the scratching caused terrible eruptions. I lost my rest at night on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted about two years before I started using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using about five cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Imogene Thomas, R. R. 8, Kokomo, Ind., Aug. 2, 1924.

Cuticura Soap to cleanse and purify, Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal and Cuticura Talcum to powder and sweeten are ideal for daily toilet purposes.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

313 DISABLED CHILDREN CURED AT SHRINE HOSPITAL

Figures Do Not Include Large Number of Out-Patients Treated at Clinics.

At the end of April, 31 had been added to the total of children cured of deformities in the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children in St. Louis, making an aggregate since the institution was opened in April, 1924, of 313. These figures are for those requiring a course of treatment in the hospital, and take no account of the much larger number of outpatients, who had minor deformities which were corrected in the clinics sections. During last month 32 were admitted to the hospital, and the number of beds occupied was 100, or virtually full capacity, there being but five beds left available for emergency cases. There were 120 on the waiting list.

Miss E. D. Claiborne, superintendent of the hospital since its opening, has resigned to accept a place on the staff of the St. Louis Children's Hospital, but will remain until July unless a successor is found meantime. She was presented with a watch by the Board of Governors, in recognition of the work performed in organizing and directing the business affairs of the institution.

HOME LABOR-SAVING DEVICES INVENTED BY ENGLISH WOMAN

Among Them Is Electrical Dish-washing Machine Operated at Small Cost.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON.—Women as inventors have applied for more patents in England during the last few months than at any other period in history. Most of these devices are labor-saving machines for use in the ordinary household where there are no servants. Among them is an electrical dishwashing machine which will clean the dishes of a family of 12 within a few minutes at the cost of 1-12th of an English penny.

One of the best-known British women inventors is Mrs. E. M. Bolton, member of a family of inventors and who recently organized a company which will manufacture labor-saving devices. She is a grand-niece of Sir Humphrey Davy, who conceived the miner's safety lamp. One of her inventions is a complete laundry which may be operated by a housewife who has no maid, without getting so much as even a drop of water on her fair hands.

Open House at Sanitarium.

The Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, 919 North Taylor avenue, will observe National Hospital day next Tuesday, by keeping "open house" from 2 until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A special program will be held on the lawn and refreshments will be served. A general invitation is extended to the public.

The committee consists of: W. E. Harkness, New York, chairman; Earle C. Anthony, Los Angeles; Gordon H. Cilley, Philadelphia; John S. Cohen, Atlanta; David Sarnoff, New York; Walter A. Strong, Chicago.

Prominent social welfare workers in various cities, and in some cases the Mayor, have agreed to speak over their local stations for two periods of 10 minutes each. The first period, some time between May 10 and May 13, according to local conditions, will include a brief account of what the conference intends to do and reading a letter sent by President Coolidge to Sophie Irene Loeb of the Evening World, President of the Child Welfare Committee of America. The second period, between May 24 and 27, will sum up the program adopted at the conference. Governors of all states, Alaska and Hawaii, the Children's Code Commissions and the fraternal organizations are sending delegates to the conference. The stations in the broadcast plan are:

WEAF, WJZ, WGY, WGR, WEEI, WBZ, WCTS, WJAR, WTIC, WOO, WFI, WCAE, KDKA, WCAP, WRC, WSB, WMBF, WMC, WHAS, WMAQ, WWJ, WREO, WSAI, WLW, WEAR, WTAM, WOS, WDAF, KSD, WFAA, WBAP, WCCO, WOC, WHO, WOAW, KOA, KDYL, KFOA, KGW, KFI, KHJ, KPO.

This list covers the entire belt of wave lengths and covers the entire country. The Committee of Broadcasters will watch the experiment with interest as a possible future development. The Child Welfare Conference was chosen because of the character of its appeal and the fact that no private enterprise will be benefited.

NEW TWO-WAY RECORD.

A new record has been made by the Naval Radio Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., in establishing two-way communication with Australia on 20 meters Monday night.

Around midnight the operator at Bellevue heard the Australian station calling England. He immediately broke in and called the Australian station. The two stations communicated with each other for more than 30 minutes. There was a particular absence of static or other forms of interference.

Bellevue Laboratory has been making some rather remarkable distance feats on short waves. Australia had been copied before at Bellevue, but it was the first time two-way communication was established.

The transmitter used at Bellevue employed less than two kilowatts, while the antenna was of the vertical cage type with a four-wire counterpoise. Details regarding the circuit used at Bellevue are being withheld until proper patent applications have been made.

It is of incidental interest that during the two-way conversation, it was morning in Australia while midnight at Bellevue.

DEATH VALLEY CRYSTALS

The World's Best Radio Crystal

Marysville, Kansas
April 27, 1925

Wellston Radio Corporation.
Dear Sirs:

Last week I ordered a DEATH VALLEY Crystal, size 0, cat-whisker; that came O. K. Tonight I am listening to W. O. A. W., Omaha, Nebraska.

Just as clear as can be. I have been listening for an hour and it is getting clearer all the time. Just tuned in K. O. A. after hearing a good many so-called long distance crystals, must say that the DEATH VALLEY is a wonder.

Short Wave Equipment For Arctic Expedition

Sending and Receiving Apparatus to Be Used by John L. Reinartz Who Will Go With MacMillan to the Arctic Region.

When the MacMillan Arctic Expedition sails for the North in June the members will be accompanied by John L. Reinartz, the short wave wizard, and complete sending and receiving apparatus to operate on 20 and 40 meters. With one of the pioneers of short wave work on the job and the latest in short wave transmitters and receivers, the expedition hopes to establish and maintain reliable two-way communication with American amateur operators.

The recent short wave tests conducted by the American Radio Relay League proved the efficiency of the higher frequencies for daylight transmission, and in that it is daylight all winter long in the arctic region the short waves are expected to solve the communication problem for the expedition. At the present, however, only a few of the amateurs are prepared to send and receive on the short waves and in that they are going to be relied upon to take messages from the MacMillan Expedition they are urged to change their transmitters and receivers to cover the 20 and 40 meter bands.

The apparatus to be used by Reinartz in the North was designed by himself and built by the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago. Tests have already been made with the apparatus and it was found to be very efficient even during the heavy spring static that was encountered. For the benefit of those who wish to duplicate the sets that are to be used during the arctic expedition by Reinartz descriptions of both the sending and receiving sets are given here.

Short-Wave Receiver.

The receiving set which will cover any range desired on the short-wave band is illustrated in Figure 1. The circuit is extremely flexible and may be mounted in almost any way the individual builder desires. It is necessary, however, to keep very short leads in the grid and plate circuits, in order to reach as low a wavelength as possible.

The tuning inductances, designated by the coil ABC and coil D in Figure 1, may be wound on a form about 3½" in diameter in either the Lorenz fashion, or as a single layer winding on a cardboard tube. Coil D is the antenna coupling coil and should consist of five turns of about No. 16 D. C. C. wire for the 20 and 40 meter bands, and 10 turns for the 80-meter band. Coil ABC is really a single coil tapped in two places, as shown in the diagram. Each part, A, B and C, have three turns each for the 20-meter band, six turns each for the 40-meter band, and 12 turns each for the 80-meter band. Three coils are required to cover the entire range from below 20 meters to over 80 meters.

Coil G is a radio frequency choke coil which may consist of a form one inch in diameter and three inches long wound full of any wire in the neighborhood of No. 30 D. C. C.

Condensers E and F should have about five plates each, and may, if desired, be cut down to five plates from a larger condenser.

Either a dry cell or storage battery tube may be employed with 45 volts on the plate.

The antenna may be the usual receiving antenna, or a single vertical wire about 35 feet high.

Short Wave Transmitter.

The short wave transmitter may be constructed from standard parts. The framework that supports the apparatus should be made of any hard wood which has been boiled in paraffine to drive out all moisture. Bakelite or rubber should not be used. The wiring diagram is shown in Figure 2. Plate and filament voltages suitable for the particular type of power tube used should be supplied.

Condensers A, C, D and E are transmitting variable condensers capable of withstanding the plate voltage, and are of about 250 M.M.F. capacity. B is a fixed condenser of 1000 M.M.F., suitable for the plate voltage used.

Coils G and H are edgewise wound helices about six inches in diameter, supported on three glass rods as shown in the illustration. Twelve turns on each coil should be used for 40 meters and five turns on each for 20 meters.

F is a single layer choke coil one inch in diameter and four inches long, wound full of No. 24 D. C. C. wire. The grid leak, L, may be about 10,000 ohms.

In operation, condensers A and D are set alike and at a low value of capacity. Condenser E is then varied until maximum antenna current is obtained. Condenser C is used to adjust the plate input, and to secure stable operation. Coils G and H are usually placed about 12 inches apart. The key is placed in the circuit as shown at K in the diagram.

The antenna should be a vertical wire about 25 feet high, and should be well insulated.

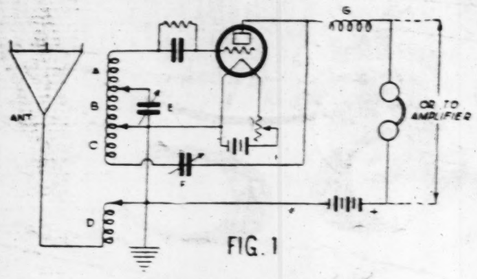

FIG. 1

The Radio Corporation of America has announced two new portable super-heterodynes. Both employ six tubes and have tuning controls very similar to the popular super made by the same company. One of these receivers is enclosed in a walnut cabinet. A loop antenna is built into a door hinged to the front of the receiver. This serves two purposes, that of permitting the loop to be rotated when the set is in use and furnishing a cover for the controls and panel when the receiver is being carried. A separate battery box is furnished with the receiver to hold the dry cell A and B batteries. A loud speaker is built into the cabinet thereby avoiding the necessity of having to carry a separate loud speaker. The other super is enclosed in a similar cabinet covered with black leather. A rotating loop placed on top of the cabinet and a built-in speaker are the features of this set. Both of these new receivers are neat in appearance and are very convenient for portable use.

Universal in design and construction is the Victor Lumiere loudspeaker, the latest product of the Victor Talking Machine Co., of Camden, N. J. It consists of a highly sensitive electrical unit with a special diaphragm, which, in turn, actuates a rosette or pleated diaphragm or parchment. There are two of these diaphragms, one on the face and one in the rear. It has the appearance of a mantel clock, is furnished in brown mahogany, with the diaphragm finished in a mottled brown to match, and uses the same wood as is found in Victor instruments. The speaker is adjusted for volume by means of a lever. It is said to be super-sensitive, to have great volume and reproduce all frequencies or tones faithfully.

A vacuum tube made specially for B battery eliminators has been placed on the market by the Pura-tron Sales Co. of Philadelphia. This new rectifying tube is capable of delivering a constant output of from 30 to 50 milliamperes and is guaranteed to last at least a thousand hours.

BROADCASTING IN BRITAIN.

Radio broadcasting and receiving in Great Britain are becoming more and more popular. It is now estimated that there are about 1,400,000 licensed receiving sets in operation, and if there are four listeners in every home, as is supposed to be the case in this country, then there are about five and a half million listeners in Great Britain alone.

Receipts from broadcasting licenses last year totaled £612,000, of which £472,180 went to the British Broadcasting Co. and £141,200 to the Post Office Department. British fans are probably a bit more stable and constant than those on this side of the Atlantic, as they not only pay for their entertainment but listen in regularly to get their money's worth. Over here, where we are all "dead heads," so to speak, we are a trifle blase when it comes to programs unless they are over par.

The British Broadcasting Co. stands ready to build a second 10 KW station in London, it is reported, although they already face a loss due to the depreciation and obsolescence of their present transmitter, and anticipate a possible reduction in license fees, which would reduce their annual income. However, what was originally sporting proposition to Great Britain a year or two ago, seems to be developing into a paying public service.

Tube Tests.

When using several tubes in a set, test each one in the detector socket to be sure that they are all functioning properly. It is a good plan to do this every few weeks anyway, as some tubes wear out more quickly than others, losing their electron emission value in two or three months.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. I receive all local stations but WCK and have been told that this station can be brought in by the use of a condenser placed between the phone binding posts of the set.—H. D.

A. Not knowing the circuit used in your set, we cannot make any suggestions about the condenser. However, if you hear all of the local stations but WCK your set must be picking up the short wave lengths and the only reason that you do not hear this particular station is that your set is not sensitive enough.

Q. I have a three-tube Reinartz receiver and get anything from New York to California, but cannot hear KSD or anything over 400 meters. Please advise me what can be done to get KSD.—F. X. S.

A. Rewind the coil that you are using and put more wire in the portion that is connected to the grid condenser and filament lead. You might try putting a condenser across this part of the coil.

Q. Will a telephone cable interfere with radio reception if the aerial is stretched three feet or more above it?

A. In most cases it would not cause any serious trouble. However, the presence of any object near the antenna wires, and especially a wire running parallel to them, lowers the efficiency of the antenna system. It is best to place the antenna some distance from all wires and surrounding objects.

Q. Will a 100-foot stranded aerial wire cut in two places so as to make a 50-foot flat top change the distance of reception?

A. This would change the over all length of the antenna and would result in slightly weaker signals, but sharper tuning.

Q. Is a 100-foot antenna, 20-foot lead in and a 10-foot ground wire too long for a five-tube radio frequency circuit?

A. No. Whether to use a long antenna or a short antenna is determined to a great extent by the sensitiveness of your receiver and can best be determined by trying first one and then the other. If your receiver is an efficient one and brings in signals good and strong we would recommend an aerial having an over all length of about 100 feet, counting from the far end to the ground connection.

Q. Can I use 24-volt wet batteries on a set built for 90 volts? A. Yes the six extra volts will make such a slight change in the action of the reciver that you would not notice the difference.

Q. Does it make any difference whether copper or galvanized iron wire is used to support the antenna?

A. No.

Q. In charging storage batteries is a two ampere charge better than a five ampere charge?

A. No, it is only a matter of time. If you have a 20 ampere hour battery it takes approximately 15 hours to charge it at two amperes while it can be charged in about six hours with a five ampere charging rate.

Q. Is there any difference in the results obtained by using UV or C tubes?

A. None whatever when you consider them in quantities. The standard UV and C tubes that are distributed by the Radio Corporation and the Cunningham Company are made by the same concern, the General Electric Co. Some tubes made by the same process and at the same time are not as good as others made under similar conditions. So it is possible that you might get one C tube that is very good and a UV that is only fair and vice versa. This would prove your luck at picking tubes rather than that one kind of a tube was better than another.

Q. I am about to build a B battery eliminator according to the details given in your paper. 1. Will it be all right to put small bolts through the corners of the transformer core to hold the sections together? 2. The filament winding is given as No. 19 wire. Is this correct? C. C. W.

A. 1. The bolts would cause no trouble though it would be much easier to build a wood frame around the core and run the bolts through the wood. The frame can be made of four strips of wood. 2. This figure was an error. The No. 19 wire will do very well but it will take up a little space. No. 18 is the correct size.

Q. What is the address of the Bard Parker Company that makes the wire stripper mentioned in your new arrivals' column last week?

A. 150 Lafayette street, New York.

Q. Who is the radio inspector of this district?

A. E. A. Beane, Supervisor of Radio, Federal Building, Chicago, Ill.

MORE TIME SIGNALS.

In response to several requests for additional time signals transmitted at special hours for field survey parties, the navy has agreed to send out the regular seventy-fifth meridian time between May 15 and Sept. 30 from NSS, Annapolis, and NPL, San Diego.

Following similar successful transmissions last year, for Canadian and United States Geological Survey parties, which resulted in the hitherto impossible accurate location of certain points on the earth's surface, one of which was charted as 15 miles from its exact location, the Naval Observatory and the radio service are planning dual transmission this summer for surveyors operating in the states, Alaska and Canada. A party of United States experts will survey the western extremities of the Aleutian Islands, off Alaska, another field party will carry on longitudinal work in central states, while a party of Canadians will explore the McKenzier Valley.

Exact time signals are essential in this work and will be transmitted from San Diego at 5:55 a. m. daily, and from Annapolis at 2:55 each morning. The wave lengths used are extremely high, so that broadcast fans will not be able to pick them up, even if they are awake at these hours, which are believed most satisfactory for the field workers.

Test for "B" Battery.

"B" batteries should ordinarily last about six months with average amount of use, but sets employing five or more tubes will drain them much faster than this. A voltmeter should be connected separately across each "B" cell unit. When a voltmeter is not handy, a five or 10 watt 110-volt lamp can be connected across each "B" battery block, and should light dimly if the battery is still good.

INCREASE OF POWER IMPROVES RECEPTION

Experts Watch With Interest the Effect of Greater Signal Strength on Summer Static.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Higher power during the coming summer months is expected to overcome static to such an extent that fans all over the country will be able to enjoy programs throughout the year.

With the advent of summer radio has previously suffered a slump due primarily to the fact that static has prevented reception from any but local stations. When summer sets in this year, several stations, practically connecting the entire country, are expected to increase their power to 5000 watts, thus making clear reception possible in spite of static.

Since the third national conference approved higher power many stations have been experimenting to determine the effect of it. Primarily, the increase in power was approved so that reception would be possible during the summer months.

While experts of the Government are not prepared to say to what extent higher power will enable the fan to eliminate the static, they predict that the service range of stations will be greatly increased.

No formal applications have yet been received by the Department of Commerce from stations for an increase in power to 5000 watts. However, judging from correspondence and talks between officials of the Department of Commerce and station owners, it is believed that between six and 12 stations will shortly seek to increase their power.

Radio and Lightning.

A radio antenna will not attract lightning any more than a telephone wire, lightning rod, gutter pipe or tin roof. The antenna, if correctly installed, is much less likely to be struck by lightning than any other object in the neighborhood. It serves as a medium through which atmospheric electricity can pass from the air to the earth, just the same as a lightning rod. There is no risk involved if the antenna is properly installed and equipped with an approved lightning arrester.

Loud speakers are made of fiber, brass, aluminum, cast iron, molded wood mache, copper, molded bakelite, pyralin, vulcanized composition, leaded steel, parchment felt, thorite composition, hard rubber and radion.

Soldering to a fixed condenser is dangerous as the heat may affect the insulation, thereby changing the capacity of the condenser and many times short circuiting it.

A piece of emery cloth tied in the rubber end of a lead pencil makes a good socket-prong cleaner.

RADIO EXPORTS PICK UP

Compared with the total for radio exports in February, amounting to $417,634, the exports in March of $664,726 show marked improvement, even though the first month was a short one. March exports of radio equipment were, however, $114,832 less than those of January, and far below the record month of December, which passed the million dollar mark. The total for the three months, $1,895,978, is indicative of an annual total of over seven million dollars, which would be a new record. According to trade reports, Chinese, Spanish and Scotch dealers are represented American apparatus, including radio sets and parts.

Whistle Caused by Waves.

Because of the increasing number of broadcasting stations, many of which are operating on nearly separated wave lengths, whistling noises are produced in the receiver. These whistles are caused by the slight difference in the frequency of the waves, and cannot be eliminated by tuning.

SOMETHING every radio buyer has awaited! A power-amplifier tube—a factory-matched tube—and one with its performance guaranteed. The MUSSELMAN Certified Tube contains a characteristic curve slip, made at the factory and sealed into the package which reaches you unopened, showing what this means in terms of better radio reception.

Not only is this tube certified as to its performance on the testing instruments in the laboratory, but it is built with far greater care and made from finer materials than most tubes on the market. It costs users a trifle more—$3.50, at your dealer's—but its vastly better performance makes it worth far more.

AMATEUR AND EXPERT FOR RADIO

DISTURBANCES AND WHAT CAUSES THEM

Power Leaks and Defective Electrical Equipment a Great Source of Annoyance to Listeners.

By WILLIS P. CORWIN
Of the KSD Staff.

Radio reception would be much more entertaining if it were not for the many sputtering, hissing and cracking noises that are picked up by sensitive receivers. At least, listeners living in the neighborhood of a bad power leak are of this opinion. Squeals from nearby radiating receivers are bad enough and beat notes produced by the waves of broadcasting stations that are too close together are aggravating at times, but interference from power leaks and defective electrical appliances are simply unbearable.

Some listeners are lucky enough to be free from such disturbances. Others hear them only occasionally and then on definite wave lengths, while a great number are bothered to such an extent that their receivers are useless for the reception of even local stations. City residents living in congested districts are most likely to be bothered by disturbances because of the nearness of their receivers to so many electrical circuits. Those living in small towns are bothered more or less, but not so frequently. In all cases the area over which a disturbance can be heard is limited, depending on the strength and nature of the disturbance.

Power lines or high voltage circuits and their electrical equipment cause more disturbances than electrical appliances because the currents handled are at such high voltages that leaks are most likely to occur. When a disturbance is set up by a defect in a transformer or in some control device it is transmitted along the line in such a manner that all listeners near the line may be disturbed. Such leaks are very difficult to find for they may be strong enough to ruin reception for thousands of listeners and yet not be large enough to show any appreciable losses to the companies owning the circuits. Power companies generally are very willing to correct all defective apparatus connected to their lines when trouble is reported to them. In very small villages where direct current is used for lighting and power purposes it is customary to ground one side of the system. In such cases, and also when the ground connection of a set located very near a street car line in the city, ground currents reach the ground connection of the receiving set and reproduce the commutator noises from the generators. In most cases this trouble can be remedied by the use of a counterpoise or a duplicate of the antenna stretched several feet above the earth.

Electrical devices and appliances are a great source of annoyance to listeners. Defective motors that run refrigerating machines, dental instruments, barbers' clippers and many other devices, electric irons, heating elements, X-ray machines, battery chargers and amateur transmitters are responsible for many clicks, buzzing noises and intermittent disturbances that hinder radio reception. Most of these can be repaired or corrected so that they will not send out interfering waves. The difficult problem is to first find the defective machine and then persuade the owner that something should be done to it.

Radio listeners have asked the question: "Cannot the owner of a machine that is sending out a disturbance be made to either correct it or refrain from using the outfit during broadcasting hours?" The answer is that technically he might be made to change the apparatus, though there is no law that applies directly to the case. There is an old law in regard to radio interference, but it refers to interference between stations rather than disturbances sent out by other than radio transmitters. There are many local ordinances that refer to public nuisances, but he would have to have a good lawyer to prove to a jury that the owner of such a device did not have just as much right to operate it as a listener has to use his radio set. At least any legal action would require a great deal of time and money and the results of a suit would be doubtful to begin with.

Radio inspectors are swamped with correspondence from listeners who are bothered by disturbances. Those acquainted with the inspectors know that they banish all such sources of interference if they could do so by waving a magic wand. In reality the inspectors are busy checking up on the wave lengths of ship, broadcasting and amateur transmitters and assigning call letters to new stations, as well as trying to regulate radio in such a way as to permit only a minimum of interference between stations. There is much that they could do if they had the time, the money, and the help necessary to carry on such work.

The problem is one that must be solved by the listeners themselves. In the case of small disturbances made by electrical appliances such as motors, battery chargers, etc., which are within the zone of the inspectors can very often get together and check their experiences and locate the apparatus that is causing the trouble. Once located several listeners should go to the owner of the machine and ask him to try to correct the trouble. Sources of disturbances differ in so many respects that it would be impossible to attempt to suggest remedies for all of them. However, any electrician or radio engineer can solve the problem. If the owner of the machine will not hire an electrician or attempt to correct the trouble the listeners should take the initiative and, if necessary, bear the expenses.

Legislation must be enacted that will give the Department of Commerce the power and the financial means to carry on a campaign against interfering disturbances. Organizations should be formed and supported by all listeners to obtain information and data on the causes of disturbances and so help the Federal authorities in their efforts. Listeners should then give their whole-hearted support to the inspectors and officials of such organizations. In the meantime, they should make their wishes for relief legislation known to their representatives in Washington.

TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH EXPLORERS

Special Short Wave Station, First of Its Kind in Course of Construction.

NEW YORK, May 9.—A new radio transmitting and receiving station for the maintenance of communication with expeditions leaving the United States for polar and tropical regions is being built at Garden City, Long Island, according to an announcement made public at the offices of "Radio Broadcast" magazine. This is the first time that any radio station has been designed for such specific use. Heretofore communication has been one-way and limited to a single explorer, but the facilities of the new station will be available free of charge to any expedition desiring its services, and when engaged in such activities operators will be on continuous watch, or if preliminary arrangements do not require such observation they will work on regular schedules.

The new station has been designed to transmit and receive on short waves. Much experimental work with short wave radio communication has been done at the laboratories of this magazine and exceptional results obtained. Although very little power is necessary with short wave transmitters, it has been found that high voltage is required for the tube plate circuits. This voltage may be supplied by storage batteries or dry cells. Where communication is not going to be maintained over long periods, light or small dry cells may be used, in this way permitting the transmitter to be portable. Thus in the very immediate future it will be possible for a touring party, either on land or sea, to communicate with this station or with the press by a radio transmitter without a great deal of inconvenience. Such a possibility was not regarded as feasible a year ago, and it is with this development in mind that Radio Broadcast has undertaken this work.

The new station is being constructed under the direction of Arthur H. Lynch, editor of that magazine and sponsor for the international radio broadcast tests which have taken place the past two years, and will take place again this year. In recent experiments with a single receiving tube used as a transmitter, Lynch has experienced some extremely remarkable results and predicts that within a short time direct communication using very low power between this new station and expeditions leaving the United States will be possible in the daytime or at night.

INDIAN ON BILL AT STATION K S D

Address by Gen. Frank T. Hines and Varied Music Features on Week's Schedule.

A special feature on the schedule for broadcasting this week at Station KSD will be an American Indian entertainment given by Chief Skiuhushu of the Northern Blackfeet Indians. This program will take place on Tuesday evening and will consist of an address in the language of the Blackfeet tribe and in English, an Indian poem, and singing of Indian songs in the dialect of several of the tribes of the north portion of the United States. Chief Skiuhushu is an ordained clergyman and is founder of the American Indian Association. He is a fullblood American Indian and is an author and lecturer and a man of considerable power and influence among the white citizens of his native State of North Dakota. Dr. Skiuhushu will give the entire program himself, beginning at 8:30 on Tuesday.

On the same evening Major-General Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, will make an address. Gen. Hines will be in St. Louis to attend a special celebration of Florence Nightingale day at the Veterans' Hospital at Jefferson Barracks. KSD will celebrate Florence Nightingale day by a speech on Monday evening by Dr. Louis F. Burlingham of Barnes Hospital. Dr. Burlingham has been designated by the National Hospital Association as St. Louis' Florence Nightingale orator. He also is president of the St. Louis branch of the National Hospital Association.

Musically, one of the interesting events of the week will be a recital given by pianists and instrumentalists of the music department of Webster College at Webster Groves, Mo., which will take place at 10 p. m. on Monday. On Friday night the program will be given by St. Louis artists, including Hugo Hagen, pianist; John Halk, violinist; John H. Eggert, 'cellist; Harvey W. Ramsey, tenor, and John H. Roberts, basso. The Missouri Athletic Association dinner program on Tuesday evening will be broadcast as usual, beginning at 6 o'clock, and the orchestral and organ music with stage specialties at the West End Lyric on Wednesday, beginning at 7 o'clock. Saturday at 7 o'clock KSD will broadcast the Grand Central Theater program and will follow this at 8:30 with the City Club dinner dance music.

ATLANTIC RECEPTION

Apparently it is easier to transmit by radio over the Atlantic Ocean than it is over the Pacific. Recent field strength tests made at San Diego by Dr. L. W. Austin of the Bureau of Standards on long-wave high-powered stations across the Pacific, indicate that the received signal strength is only a fraction of the average signal's strength after crossing the Atlantic, but of course the distances covered by the far Eastern stations is greater.

The arc station at Cavite, P. I., 7500 miles from California, came in with an average field intensity of only 2.04 intensity, while the Malabar arc at Java, 9400 miles away, was received with 4.02 average intensity. On the other hand, transatlantic reception is usually varied between 20 and 100 microvolts per meter. It is pointed out, however, that as Cavite and Malibar can carry on communication with California, it speaks for the excellent receiving conditions there.

RADIO FOR TENANTS

Secretary Jose Benitez of the Mexican Embassy in Washington, who sailed for home this week, is planning to install a radio relay set at his hacienda in Monterey, Mexico, so that he can furnish radio entertainment for his tenants.

Senor Benitez is already a radio fan, having a fine set at his home, but he is anxious to make radio broadcasts available to some 3000 farmers and villagers on his estates. His scheme is to install a small radio transmitting station at his hacienda so that he can rebroadcast the radio programs heard on his receiver for his tenants to pick up on crystal sets. Naturally he is most interested in the Mexican, Cuban and other Spanish language stations, but he will also relay good musical programs from the States. Music seems to be a sort of 'Esperanto' of the air in that most of it, except perhaps Chinese music, is intelligible to all listeners.

Time Signals From France.

The Lafayette radio station in France, which was built by the U. S. Navy during the World War, is transmitting international wireless time signals every evening on 23,400 meters. The wave length is a little high for the average receiving set, but is for ships and commercial stations. The transmission of time signals, by radio which originated here is now becoming world wide. As is done at NAA at Arlington, Va., by the Navy, station LY, LaFayette, transmits automatically the ticks of its standard clock in the Paris observatory.

A high-powered radio transmitting station is to be constructed at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, by American, English, French and German interests.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART SIX — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1925. — PAGES 13—22

Theatrical Season Boasts Advance in Quality of Dramas

Speaking Stage Has Presented "Saint Joan," "Rain," "The Swan" and "Cyrano," While Movie Houses Hesitate to Show "The Last Laugh."

By RICHARD L. STOKES.
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

On a recent afternoon, we enjoyed the privilege of witnessing, in an Olive street projection studio, a private showing of "The Last Laugh," which connoisseurs of two continents have applauded as one of the masterpieces of the cinema. Needless to say, it was created not in Hollywood but in Berlin. It proved to be a paragon of fastidious direction. The theme, a variant of the Lear motive, is noble and tragic. The narrative rejoices in clarity, detail and pace: it is conducted with an Ibsen-like directness, an austere economy of incident. Here, authentic if silent, speaks the native idiom of the screen.

Three distinguished artists collaborated in the production. The author is Carl Meyer, who devised "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari." The director is F. W. Murnau, one of Europe's most brilliant executants of the films. The pivotal actor is Emil Jannings, star of "Passion," "Deception," "Peter the Great," "Quo Vadis" and other eminent photoplays.

Despite such elements of celebrity and merit, public exhibition of "The Last Laugh" in St. Louis remains problematical. New York and even Los Angeles have admired it during prolonged runs. But here, we are told, movie addicts would find it lacking in "amusement value." One shudders at revealing that it has no love story, no sex interest whatever. It merely portrays the broken heart of an old and unfortunate man. There are no bathing pools, no seminude demoiselles. Moreover, subtitles have been eliminated altogether. It is true that the fiction is mostly so crystalline as to be self-explanatory; but what if a spectator or so were tormented by the necessity of a moment's cerebral exertion?

"The American Ending."

It skills little that the author, in deference to American taste, has added an epilogue in which the senile hero inherits a fortune under the maddest circumstances, and is seen rioting in an orgy of cash and provender. No piercing eye is required for detecting that an opportunity was seized upon to burlesque our aboriginal insistence upon the benediction of the nursery tale—"They lived happily ever after." This farcical antex is too extravagantly vulgar, too wildly and insanely fantastic, for aught but travesty. We are told that it is sometimes displayed in Berlin, derisively, as "the American ending."

Reflecting on the probability that no moving picture manager in this city will venture to offer "The Last Laugh" to the public, we felt grateful that the pontiffs of the speaking stage are beginning to think more flatteringly of their audiences than do the cinema tycoons regarding their congregations in New York—a metropolis suspiciously alien to the United States—the theater has in the last two or three years achieved its independence. The reverberations of that mutiny are already audible as far inland as St. Louis. Certainly the season just coming to an end may boast an emphatic advance in the number of productions concerning which it is honest to speak in terms of praise, ranging from enthusiasm to respect.

"Saint Joan" Leads All the Rest.

In a flight of vernal audacity we shall proceed to list the works presented this season in St. Louis, which have most impressed us, each in its own category and rank of significance. The roll of honor is as follows:

Drama—"Saint Joan," by George Bernard Shaw; "Rain," after a story by W. Somerset Maugham; "The Swan," by Ferenc Molnar; "Cyrano de Bergerac," by Edmond Rostand, and "The Deluge," by Henning Berger.

Classical Tragedy—Fritz Leiber's production of "Hamlet"

Classical Comedy — Sheridan's "The Rivals" and Leiber's presentation of "The Taming of the Shrew."

American plays—"Meet the Wife," by Lynn Starling; "Tarnish," by Gilbert Emery; "The Show-Off," by George Kelly; "The Potters," by J. P. McAvoy; and "Merton of the Movies," after a novel by Harry Leon Wilson.

Revues—George White's "Scandals," the Charlot Revue, the Greenwich Village "Follies" and "Vogues and Frolics."

Musical comedy—"Lollipop."

The Year's Worst Play.

Honorable mention may be accorded to De Wolf Hopper's productions of "The Mikado" and "Pinafore"; to Zoe Akins' "Foolish Virgin," and perhaps "Seventh Heaven," by Austin Strong. The bestirement forays into nudity ever seen on a St. Louis stage were attained by "Artists and Models" and Earl Carroll's "Vanities." The worst play of the season? No, it isn't "Abie's Irish Rose." The choice lies between "Discarded Wives," "Sakura" and "For All of Us," by William Hodge. The prize in the booby class would probably go to "Discarded Wives."

Among actors seen here during the year we remember most vividly Fritz Leiber in a Saturday matinee of "Hamlet." Despite crudities, this was the most vital and eloquent impersonation of the Danish Prince we have ever seen. Memorable also, as an example of broad comedy raised to artistry, was Leiber's drunken tinker, Christopher Sly, in the induction to "The Taming of the Shrew."

Only Two Weeks Until Summer Opera Resumes

Two weeks from tomorrow night the Municipal Theater Association will inaugurate its seventh season of light opera at the open-air auditorium in Forest Park with a production of a distinguished comic opera by Johann Strauss, entitled "A Night in Venice." Rehearsals of the principals will begin tomorrow, while chorus rehearsals have been in daily progress for two weeks.

Eleven works, all new to the Municipal Theater—including one double bill and, for the first time in the organization's annals, two grand operas—will be given in a reason of 10 weeks, with seven performances a week. Unless unforeseen circumstances compel a change, the repertory will be as follows:

May 25—"A Night in Venice," by John Strauss, with libretto by Zell and Genee.

June 1—"Mlle. Modiste," an operetta in two acts, by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom.

June 8—"Ruddigore," a comic opera in two acts, by W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan.

June 15—"Her Regiment," an operetta by Victor Herbert and William Le Baron.

June 22—"Rob Roy," a romantic operetta by Reginald de Koven and Harry B. Smith.

June 29—"Dolly Varden," a musical comedy by Julian Edwards and Stanislaus Stange.

July 6—"Erminie," an operetta

Percy Grainger to Give Recital in Suburb

A pianoforte recital will be given by Percy Grainger on the evening of June 2 at the Armory, in Webster Groves. It is said to be the first full recital ever given in this suburb by a musician of first rank. The concert will be under the auspices of the Young Musicians' Club, consisting of about 100 members.

On Tuesday evening, May 19, the Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club will give its spring concert at the Webster Groves Armory, under the direction of Leo C. Miller. The chorus will be assisted by members of the Symphony Orchestra in a production of a cantata by Goring Thomas, "The Swan and the Skylark." Incidental solos in this work will be supplied by Mrs. Frank R. Peterson, Chester Merton and Gwilym Miles.

Thelma Hayman Carroll, contralto, will sing Gounod's aria, "O ma lyre immortelle," from "Sapho;" and a group of songs. The ensemble numbers will include the chorus of flower maidens, from "Parsifal;" and H. T. Burleigh's "'Tis Me, O Lord."

An impromptu program will close the Mel-Harmonic Club's season next Saturday afternoon at Baldwin Hall. A program of piano, vocal and choral numbers will be given by members of the Morning Etude Wednesday morning at Vandervoort Auditorium. Settings of Shakspeare's poems will be sung at a meeting of the Shakspeare Tercentenary Society Tuesday afternoon at Vandervoort Auditorium. Those participating will be Mrs. Hector Pasmezoglu, Mrs. Carl J. Luyties, Mrs. Esmeralda Berry Mayes and Mrs. Jane Robinson. Richard Spamer will lecture on "Shakspeare's Life in Outline."

One or More Acts of New Opera to Be Sung At Municipal Theater

In the first detailed announcement regarding Guy Golterman's third season of grand opera at the Municipal Theater, it is promised that one or more acts of a new work, "The Music Robber," by Isaac Van Grove of Chicago and Richard L. Stokes of St. Louis, will be included in the repertory. This opera is regarded as marking a new departure, in that an episode of Mozart's life, in eighteenth century Vienna, is set to a score of American syncopated rhythms.

The grand opera season of 17 performances, for which the period between August 22 and September 7 has been tentatively chosen, will also present Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," Verdi's "Aida" and Bizet's "Carmen," besides a program of 12 ballet divertissements to music of Liszt, Ponchielli, Lortzing, Gounod and other composers.

Metropolitan Directors Engaged.

A cast of principal singers, many of them new to this city, has been engaged. Van Grove will conduct several of the performances and train a chorus of 300 St. Louis singers, reinforced by choristers from the Chicago Civic Opera Co. Associated with him in the choral training will be Giuseppe Cesati, one of the younger maestros of the Metropolitan. Vittori Verse, a member of the Metropolitan staff of conductors, will alternate with Van Grove at the director's desk. The list of principals and executives, selected from the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies, is as follows:

Sopranos—Maria Wittkowska, Charlotte Ryan, Maria Luisa Escobar and Elda Vettori.

Contraltos—Rhea Toniolo and Gladys Swarthout.

Tenors—Manuel Salazar, Forrest Lamont, Ludovico Tomarchio and Joseph Cavadori.

Baritones—Joseph Royer and Giuseppe Interrante.

Basses — Giovanni Martino and Sjovik and George Chehanovsky.

Conductors—Isaac Van Grove and Vittorio Verse.

Chorus master—Giuseppe Cesati.

Premiere Danseuse — Florence Rudolph.

Premier Danceur—Walter Troy.

Stage manager—A. Puglia.

Costume Designer—A. Oberding.

Miss Rudolph to Train Ballet.

A ballet of 50, chosen from St. Louis dancing schools, will be trained by Miss Rudolph, who will conduct daily rehearsals for four weeks prior to the opening performance. Miss Rudolph, who is first assistant to Miss Rosina Galli at the Metropolitan, took part in Golterman's production of "Carmen" last fall at the Municipal Theater. Rehearsals of the chorus will begin five weeks before the opening. An orchestra of 80 pieces is promised, with a nucleus chosen

'MIRACLE' TO OPEN FESTIVAL AT MOZART'S BIRTHPLACE

Efforts Are Made to Engage Rosamond Pinchot for "Nun" in Pantomime at Salzburg.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Max Reinhardt's spectacle pantomime, "The Miracle," which may be seen during next winter in St. Louis, has been chosen to open the Salzburg Festival, at the birthplace of Mozart, according to word which has reached Morris Gest. The festival will be held from Aug. 13 to 28.

Lady Diana Manners will play at Salzburg the role of the Madonna, which she created here, and efforts are being made to engage Rosamond Pinchot, an American girl, for the part of the nun. Following a week of "The Miracle," Hugo von Hofmannsthal's "The Great World Theater" will be revived. Simultaneously, Richard Strauss will direct at another theater a festival of Mozart's works.

PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA TO GIVE THREE CONCERTS

Society Decides to Add More of Modern Music to Programs in the Future.

At last week's annual meeting of the Philharmonic Society of St. Louis, an orchestra of amateur players, it was decided henceforth to give three concerts a year and to add more modern music to the programs. Frank Gecks is director.

Dr. Louis Herchenroeder was elected president, together with the following officers: Chairman of the board, John C. Walter; vice president, John Davis; secretary, D. H. Kotthoff; and treasurer, Miss Thelma Matthews.

These officers form the new board of directors, in addition to Miss Sylvia Mae Walden, Hans Glatte and Robert Walsh. Jerome Karst and O. H. P. Grundon were elected honorary members for life.

In Memory of Victor Herbert.

NEW YORK, May 9.—A concert in memory of Victor Herbert will be given Sunday evening, May 24, at the Ritz-Carlton. There will be a program of Herbert's compositions played by his own orchestra, directed in turn by John Philip Sousa, Hugo Riesenfeld, Max Bendix and Henry Hadley.

Play Authors Need Luck to Win Success

With Margin of Error in Casting and Production, Number of Broadway Triumphs Is Remarkable.

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, May 9.

I OCCASIONALLY wonder if "Seeing Things at Night" is a thoroughly accurate title for reflections on the theater. I can go back to Shakspeare for my authority that "The play's the thing," but I am bound to believe that the people involved drag a theatrical venture out of the inanimate category of the thing.

Even in a movie production, essentially a thing of celluloid, cranks, a sheet and some electricity, the personality of the actors is the major matter. Since most movie plays are so feeble and insufficient, I should say that personalities alone are keeping the picture business on its opulent feet.

Also with plays. A play starts with an idea, is elaborated into dialogue and placed into the trained mouths of actors. No idea, however great, added the world's progress or retarded it until people began to talk and write about it. Doubtless there are great ideas hidden somewhere in the tongue-tied minds of smothered geniuses. Doubtless there are great plays unwritten that will be recorded only in the judgment book and never in the money table of variety. I do not have to see these plays and therefore cannot speculate on their merits. I see what people have done with their ideas, thin or magnificent, when they have entrusted them to other people.

Has Only One Chance of Birth.

No play of mine has ever been presented, but I am sure that when I get around to writing one the most difficult part will be deciding what people I can trust it to. I suppose it is much the same as deciding in what hospital your child shall be born. Though all hospitals are fairly alike—particularly in smell—you want to be pretty certain that your child shall have the best. After all he has only once to be born, and it would be a tough break to bungle it.

Likewise a play. Though the rule has been once or twice broken, a play has just one chance to be produced. If it dies in New York it never gets a second chance. It goes up on the dustiest shelf behind the family skeleton and is never referred to when there's company.

Best Lying-in Hospital.

I SUPPOSE that the Theater Guild is the best hospital for a play to get its first glimpse of spotlights. Their death rate is about 50 per cent lower per season than that of the average producer. Their prize babies lead the parade without particular dispute, and nearly every play they do gets at least a few months before it fades away. As plays go that makes it comfortably middle-aged.

The trouble with the Theater Guild is that they are so terribly choosey. They issued a bulletin lately that their next season program would contain almost all of Bernard Shaw in their new repertory project, other English plays, and probably one from most of the other European countries, including the Scandinavian. There wasn't an American entertainment on the list.

They were promptly taken to task and hurriedly announced that three American plays which they had on option would certainly contribute something to their season. I am told that the most likely is a new piece by Sidney Howard, who wrote the Pulitzer prize play, "They Knew What They Wanted!" But that's a hurdle that would discourage almost anybody. If one has to write as good a play as "They Knew What They Wanted" to break into the Theater Guild, about a hundred thousand would-be playwrights might just as well start tearing things up this afternoon.

Failures Not Surprising.

TAKE another less conspicuous example. William Harris Jr. is one of our most accomplished producers. He has given us in the past such entertainments as "East Is West" and "Outward Bound." Yet this season he made two productions. The first never survived the try-out period and the second lasted about two weeks on Broadway.

The Charles Frohman company engages Elsie Fergusen and teaches her the lines of a play by Ferenc Molnar, reputed to be a great continental success. Three or four weeks after it appears the scenery is creaking to the storehouse. The wisest minds and the

DANCE REVUE AT THE ODEON

Jacob Mahler, assisted by several of his former pupils, will demonstrate the dances of half a century ago in the course of a revue which will be given at the Odeon Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Some 150 children will take part in 14 new ballets and dances, including "Powder Puffs," "Holland," "Clowns," "Jardiniere," "Harlequins," "Cards," and "Tambourine Dance."

The Theatrical Calendar

SHUBERT-JEFFERSON—Seventh week of "Abie's Irish Rose."

EMPRESS—The Woodward Players in a three-act farce, "Some Baby," by Zella Covington and Jules Simonson.

ORPHEUM—Harry M. Snodgrass, pianist; Wallace Eddinger, musical comedy star, in "Things Could Be Worse;" the Wright dancers and four other acts.

RIALTO—"A Show of All Nations," led by Pickard's Chinese Syncopators. The film feature is "The Battling Orioles," with Glenn Tryon.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—Billy House, comedian, with five other acts and screen features. "Town Topics," a small musical comedy, will head the new bill Thursday.

New Curtain Call for Actors Is "Author"

NEW YORK, May 9.

BROADWAY observes somewhat cynically that if you want a good role you must write it yourself. At least this was what George Abbott said to James Gleason in the midst of an anguished season of stock, and "The Fall Guy" was the result.

Whatever the cause, the fact remains that more and more actors are writing better and more successful plays with every season. A glance over the list reveals that several of the most picturesque and instantaneous hits of this season were written by playwrights whose natural habitat is on the other side of the footlights. A Who's Who of the highlights would run as follows:

"The First Year."

FRANK CRAVEN: Born into a theatrical family and drifted amiably up to recognition in homespun, good fellow roles. His first serious attempt at creating them on paper was with "Too Many Crooks," a mildly amusing little comedy which caused a faint ripple of appreciation on Broadway.

His real success in the double life of actor and author came with "The First Year," which established itself overnight as one of the shrewdest and most observant studies of married life the American stage has produced. Since that triumph he has written "Spite Corner" and "New Brooms," small town dramas which were fairly successful, though the stage is still waiting for a successor to "The First Year." Meanwhile Mr. Craven goes on acting.

"Mrs. Partridge Presents."

MARY KENNEDY: A debutante of this year as a playwright, but well known on Broadway as an actress. Her earlier literary adventures included newspaper work in Florida and New York, and the publication of uncommonly vivid fragments of verse in the various columns. On the stage she has appeared in such definitely contrasted plays as "Lombardi Limited," "Not So Long Ago," "The Love Habit" and "In the Next Room."

It was while acting in that breathless melodrama that she wrote, with Ruth Hawthorne, "Mrs. Partridge Presents," a comedy which has been one of the wisest and most ingratiating hits of the season. Soon after she took her curtain calls as the provocative little siren of "The Blue Peter" to the accompaniment of further chortles of praise from the press. She has written another play which will arrive with another stage role next season.

"The Hero" and "Tarnish."

GILBERT EMERY: Known for years as the author of introspective little studies in the more academic (and higher priced) magazines. Later identified with stately creations on the stage of strong (and more or less silent) heroes. Wrote "The Hero," as significant and poignant a study of psychology after the war as has appeared in this country. Also wrote "Tarnish," which was less important and more successful. Finished up his stage year with a role in "Episode" and is now engaged on a new play.

James Gleason: Made his stage debut at the age of 6 months and up to this year has been known as an engaging young comedian. His great stage and literary triumph came simultaneously with "Is Zat So?" which he wrote with Richard Taber, and which has been the freak hit of all the plays this season, somewhat to the bewilderment of the young authors. He had hardly caught his breath from this triumph when he scored again with "The Fall Guy."

"The Fall Guy."

GEORGE ABBOTT, the other author of "The Fall Guy," has made a quiet but increasingly favorable impression as an actor in such plays as "Hell Bent for Heaven," "Lazybones" and "Processional." His literary activities have been confined to the somewhat cheerless task of play reading and the writing of one other play, "The Head of the Family." Like "The Fall Guy" it has been cheerfully declined by the managers and now will probably be just as cheerfully accepted.

This would seem to dispose of the smug theory that "actors are no judge of plays." It is a representative but by no means complete list of the group of actors who now find the shouts of "Author! Author!" confused with their curtain calls.

AUTHORS' RIGHTS SUSTAINED

Berlin Court Rules Copyright Law Applies to Broadcasting.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN.—Broadcasting a writer's poems, essays or other literary productions is subject to the same copyright provisions as is the publication of such works in print, according to a decision of the Berlin courts.

Gerhart Hauptmann and Hugo von Hoffmannsthal, two of the best-known authors of Germany, filed suit against a Berlin radio sending company for broadcasting their works without their permission and without paying the authors any royalties. In the case of Hauptmann the Court issued a preliminary injunction restraining the radio concern from broadcasting his works. It was understood that the decision in the Hoffmannsthal case was pending and would serve as a precedent. The Court sustained Hoffmannsthal.

from the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

The plan is that "Cavalleria Rusticana" and such portions of "The Music Robber" as are presented will be given as a double bill at some performances, while at others the one-act opera of Mascagni will be combined with a ballet program.

Story Has Historical Basis.

THE fable of "The Music Robber" is developed from the singular circumstances under which Mozart wrote his last composition, "The Requiem." A few months before his death, he was accosted by a stranger whose very appearance was calculated to excite superstition. He offered Mozart money to compose a Requiem, and warned him never to seek to penetrate the identity of his patron.

Mozart fell into a fixed idea that this commission was a portent of his approaching death. He did not live to complete the work, some parts of which were composed by his pupil, Franz Suessmayr.

The mysterious visitor, it proved, was one Leutgeb, steward to Count Johann von Walsegg of Stuppach, a nobleman ambitious for fame as a composer but totally lacking in talent. It was his custom to purchase works from impecunious composers, copy them in his handwriting, and have them performed as his own creations. Mozart's "Requiem" was publicly produced in Vienna, after his death, with the announcement that it was written by Count von Walsegg.

The first and third acts occur in the garden of Mozart's lodging in Vienna, and the second presents a contest of composers before the Emperor at his palace of Schoenbrunn. In the cast, besides Mozart and his wife Constanze, are such historical characters as Ludwig Van Beethoven, Josef Haydn, Antonio Salieri, Giuseppe Bonno, Emmanuel Schikaneder, Franz Suessmayr, Nancy Storace, Count von Walsegg and the Kaiser and Kaiserin of the Holy Roman Empire.

Pageant and Ballets.

IN the first act is a costume pageant and ballet representing characters from Mozart's operas. In the second, Haydn presents a ballet, and Salieri a miniature operetta, entitled "The Beloved Coquette," based on a tale of the Arabian Nights. Walsegg wins the contest with the mass which he has stolen from Mozart, but in the third act is exposed as a thief.

For his score, Van Grove has made no attempt to quote entire numbers from Mozart's music, as was done in the Schubert operetta, "Blossom Time." At the opening, fugitive themes from "The Magic Flute" flash across the orchestration, for Mozart, as the curtain rises, is composing the overture to that opera. In the pageant, some use is made of the famous minuet from "Don Giovanni." The only direct quotation is a choral passage from the "Requiem." It is essentially an original and not a borrowed score.

The singers have melodies which are Mozartian in refinement and grace, but beneath them beats incessantly the vital rhythm of popular American music, stripped, however, of all vulgarity and the instrumental buffoonery of jazz. It is Van Grove's theory that a true national opera must be written not only in the language but in the rhythms of the country in which it is created. He plans to borrow a sextet of saxophones and perhaps a banjo from what Paul Whiteman calls "the American orchestra."

Under the auspices of the Chicago Musical College rehearsal performances of the first act of "The Music Robber" will be given at the Central Theater, Chicago, on the Sunday afternoons of June 7 and 14, together with Mrs. Archibald Freer's one-act opera, "The Piper of Hamelin." The performance will be broadcast by WGN, the radio station of the Chicago Tribune.

THEATRICAL SEASON BOASTS ADVANCE IN QUALITY OF DRAMAS

virtuosity in the portrayal of character. Before the mind's eye still vibrates the gallant, tragic figure of Miss Julia Arthur's Joan of Arc. Stately Eva Le Gallienne swims before us, shy and tender, as the heroine of "The Swan," and Walter Hampden, huge of proboscis, stalks the boards, wielding the swashbuckling sword and intoning the poetry of Cyrano de Bergerac.

Mrs. Fiske rattles off, not too intelligibly, the malapropisms of "The Rivals," and Miss Mary Boland invests a hateful role in "Meet the Wife" with a throng of artful touches and unflagging gusto. Glenn Hunter almost redeems, with his personal charm and ensnaring smile, the cretinous hero of "Merton of the Movies." Among the comic gentry, we recollect indelibly Miss Beatrice Lillie of the Charlot Revue, Jimmy Savo of "Vogues and Frolics" and "Chic" Sale of vaudeville. Nor do we forget Ada May in "Lollipop," Margaret Anglin and William Faversham in "Foot-Loose," De Wolf Hopper as Koko and Dick Deal-Eye, the bewitching Dolly Sisters in "Sitting Pretty," Frederick March as the desperate hero of "Tarnish," and Clark Blandick as the dour mother-in-law in "The Show-Off."

Good Plays Prospered.

A HOPEFUL omen may be read in the fact that some of the best plays were also financially triumphant in St. Louis. "Rain" and "The Swan" were notably prosperous, and even "Saint Joan," we believe, more than paid its keep. And while on the subject, it may be remarked that the most impressive orchestral performance of the year was that of Dr. Vaughan Williams' "London Symphony," and that the most imposing operatic exploit was Feodor Chaliapine's ribald fiend in "Mefistofele."

Clear among these delectable memories will stand Emil Jannings in "The Last Laugh," majestic in the gaudy uniform of a door porter at the Hotel Atlantic (Aldon); then, stripped of his splendor because he can no longer hustle ponderous trunks, and relegated to the washroom, there to potter about with soap and towels; next, stealing the uniform to wear at his daughter's wedding, and his gorgeous vision, inspired by wine, of tossing garzantuan baggage skyhigh to the applause of multitudes; the discovery of his fall from greatness, the cruel laughter of his neighbors and his daughter's desertion of the broken man; and finally his solitary death in the lavatory, according to the original version—or, as the epilogue has it, his rescue by an eccentric millionaire.

July 13—A double bill, consisting of Mascagni's one-act opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," by Gilbert and Sullivan.

July 20—"The Count of Luxembourg," a comantic operetta by Franz Lehar.

July 27—"Martha," a comic opera by Friedrich von Flotow.

Six Newcomers in Cast.

ONLY three of the list of principals for this season have ever before sung at the Municipal Theater. There are Detmar Poppen, bass; William J. McCarthy, second comedian; and Roland Woodruff, juvenile. The newcomers are Yvonne d'Arle and Eleanor Henry, prima donnas; Beatrice Mershon, contralto; John E. Young, first comedian, Forrest Huff, tenor, and Leo de Hierapolis, baritone. The chorus consists of 90 St. Louisans, and the orchestra will again number about 50.

Max Koenigsberg this year makes his debut as chairman of the all-powerful steering body, the Executive Productions Committee. David E. Russell will serve his seventh season as general manager, while Frank Ralnger and Charles Previn return as stage and musical directors. A newcomer is David Andrada, of the Shubert executive staff, who will act as stage manager.

It is announced that advance season subscriptions now total $30,000 and are expected to approximate $100,000 when this sale closes Wednesday. General ticket sales for individual performances will open Thursday.

From $8,000 to 25,931.

FIGURES as to attendance and receipts given out at the offices of the Municipal Theater Association to illustrate its growth show that in 1919, the opening year, 8,000 persons paid $20,202 during a season of six weeks. In 1920 the attendance at 48 performance was 204,000. In 1921, 220,860 persons paid admissions to 46 performances, two having been prevented by rain.

The attendance increased to 268,092 during the 1922 season of eight weeks. In 1923, the cycle was extended to 10 weeks and seven instead of six performances were given weekly, with the result that attendance leaped to 425,921, and the receipts to $295,738. This was the Association's banner year. For various reasons, including inclement weather, the attendance in 1924 fell to 369,013 and the receipts to $289,610.

best of artists sometimes fail to find in a manuscript the values that the author has undoubtedly contributed.

For this reason I say that a theatrical production is by no means a thing. From the time it leaves the author's typewriter until the curtain rises before its metropolitan audience it seems to me that there is more scope for human error than in almost any other enterprise. Plays are built on ideas emotionally developed. No two people have exactly the same conception of an idea; certainly emotions spread themselves in curious ways when they pass from heart to heart.

Therefore a dramatist must first of all be lucky. His mind and his material must be tuned exactly to the minds and interpretive abilities of many strangers. It is not surprising to me that there are so many failures in a Broadway season. It is rather more remarkable that there are so many sound successes.

BIG SIX BROUGHAM

THE new Studebaker Big Six four-door Brougham is a car of smart lines and marked distinction.

It will appeal to the discriminating buyer who wants the best and who will be surprised to find such a fine car available at such a moderate price.

Its low price is due to the fact that Studebaker builds this car complete—both body and chassis—in Studebaker plants.

Most automobile manufacturers must buy closed bodies from outside concerns and must include the extra profit in their prices. Studebaker eliminates this profit, thus assuring highest quality at the lowest possible price.

Come in and let us show you the value Studebaker offers in this new Big Six Brougham at $2575, f. o. b. factory. The price includes front and rear bumpers and extra balloon tire, tube and tire cover.

R YEAR

1500 TO APPEAR IN THE TURNERS' JUBILEE PAGEANT

ectacle, in Celebration of 75-Year Gymnastic Or- ganizatio, to Be Given Friday Night.

ILL BE STAGED AT MUNICIPAL THEATER

Theme Written by George Voges to Portray Notable Events in History of St. Louis.

About 1500 persons will take part in a pageant for the diamond jubilee celebration of the St. Louis Gymnastic Society, St. Louis Turnverein, Friday evening in the Municipal Theater.

The pageant, depicting historical landmarks of St. Louis and the Turnverein, was written by George Voges and will be directed by him. About 750 persons in the cast will be supported by the 750 mixed voices of the United Singing Societies, directed by Hugo Anschneutz. Pictures presented will begin with a camp of an Indian council on the banks of the Father of Waters before the time of levees and Federal barge lines. An Indian dance will be presented by the Concordia Gymnastic Society.

Scenes to Be Depicted.

The discovery of the Mississippi by De Soto in 1541 will be represented by the Southwest Gymnastic Society. The Swiss Gymnastic Society will show Joliet and Father Marquette going down the river in 1673. The raising of the standard of France over this "trading post" by Laclede and Chouteau will be presented by the North St. Louis Gymnastic Society. This group also will present a minuet in the episode of the Lafayette ball at the Chouteau mansion. Another feature of the same episode will be a ballet by pupils of Miss Adeline Hotty.

Descendants of founders of the Turnverein will take part in the pantomime of its birth. The call for volunteers and mobilization for the Civil War and the surrender of Camp Jackson will be reviewed, and the pageant will close with a historical parade of the turners.

Banquet Tuesday Evening.

Opening of the Diamond Jubilee will be signalized by a dinner Tuesday evening at St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 Chouteau avenue. Former Circuit Judge J. Hugo Grimm will preside. Charles Nagel, Shepard Barclay and George Seibel of the National Turner Society of Pittsburg will speak.

GIRL RESERVES TO PRESENT PAGEANT AT FOREST PARK

"Mothers and Daughters of the World" to Be Title—500 to Take Part.

A pageant, "Mothers and Daughters of the World," will be presented next Sunday afternoon in Forest Park by 500 Girl Reserves of the Young Women's Christian Association. The organization is composed of various Girl Reserves clubs in Sunday schools, high schools and industrial organizations.

The pageant is to replace the annual "Mothers and Daughters Banquet" which is given by the Young Women's Christian Association. In addition, there will be a special musical program, with both orchestral and vocal numbers.

The playlet is to serve as a direct appeal to the spirit of Christianity from the mothers of the world to their daughters. Each country will be represented by special costume, with Mrs. Georgia Webster, of the Y. W. C. A., acting as interpreter. The spirit of the Girl Reserves will be portrayed by Miss Italine Lytle, president of the Girl Reserve High School Intercity Council.

CZECHS WOULD HONOR HUSS

Vatican Recently Denied Request to Proclaim His Birthday.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

ROME, April 17.—Recently the Czechoslovakia Government presented to the Vatican the curious request that it approve the proclamation of the birthday of John Huss, first influential pioneer of Protestantism, as a national holiday. Naturally the Vatican refused. The request is perhaps partly explained by the fact that Huss' activities were political and nationalistic even more than they were religious. To the Czechs, though most of them are devout Catholics, Huss figures as one of the great leaders of Bohemian independence. Political guessers hazard this further explanation: The Czechoslovak Government is using its influence toward the establishment of a Czech national church organization, administered independently of Rome. To arouse a spirit of independence among its Catholic citizens it wished to place the Vatican in the position of refusing to approve the proclamation of this patriotic holiday. However, the incident has had little repercussion outside Czechoslovakia.

New Discovery for Removing Superfluous Hair

Well-known Chicago chemist announces wonderful discovery of a snow-white, fragrant cream for removing superfluous hair. For years chemists have been trying to produce one without success. Women are enthusiastic over this new cream depilatory called Nu-Del. It's ready for immediate use. Removes hair in three minutes.

Ask your druggist or department store for Nu-Del. If they haven't it, send $1.00 for large tube or 10c for sample (in plain wrapper) to the Nu-Del Laboratories, Dept. 94, 540 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago. Money back if not satisfied. Be sure you get

How to Peel Off an Unlovely Complexion

The face which is admired for its beauty must have a satin-smooth skin, pink and white and youthful looking. The only thing known that can make such a complexion out of an aged, faded or discolored one—a natural, not a painted, complexion—is ordinary mercolized wax. This remarkable substance literally absorbs the unsightly cuticle, a little each day, the clear, healthy, girlish skin beneath gradually peeping out until it is wholly in evidence. Of course such blemishes as freckles, moth patches, liver spots and pimples are discarded with the old skin. If you will procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, use like cold cream at night, washing this off mornings, the results will astonish you.

Physician Surprised

"Hearing of some good results from the use of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy I decided to try it on a chronic case of indigestion and gastritis I was interested in. After the first dose the patient was relieved of gas trouble and was soon able to eat radishes and many things he had not eaten in years." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores and Druggists Everywhere.

LABOR MOVEMENT 'STILL FIGHTING FOR EXISTENCE'

Churchmen Feel Need of Translation of "Reward" and "Profit" From Both Social and Biblical Angles

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The new immigration policy adopted by the United States, which has enormously cut down the supply of unskilled labor, the reversed tide of agricultural labor from country to city, and the influx of negro labor from the South to the North, have probably ushered in a new era in American industrial life, says an exhaustive report on the industrial situation in the United States to be made by the American Section of the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work to be held in Stockholm Aug. 19-30 of this year.

The adjustment of thought and attitude, however, which approaching developments have rendered necessary, is as yet found to be backward. "American business men still cling as a rule to that individualism which resulted from boundless resources, and unhampered enterprise which no longer exist. New legislation for the protection of labor is still opposed instinctively by most employers. Labor organization has not yet been accepted in principle by employers, in general, although there are large areas of industry where labor relations on a union basis work smoothly and in the main satisfactorily."

"The trade unions," according to the report, "do not put before the public sufficiently the constructive side of unionism. The public tends to know only its controversial aspects." For the most part it is regarded by most employers as an evil to be avoided if possible, or to be resigned to if necessary, and it receives also a considerable public hostility. It is further declared that "the typical American employer considers that wages are properly determined by the play of the labor market, although there are many exceptions." The labor movement, therefore, with the exception of a number of powerful trades and the Railway Brotherhoods, is believed to be still in the stage where it is fighting for its own existence and its methods are said to be characterized by a "belligerency which also operates as a selective principle in the choice of labor leaders."

A new definition of service, as applied to industry, is necessary to accommodate the changed situation, the report continues: "As for the contention that the purpose of industry is to make profits, we must distinguish between 'rewards' in the sense of market value of labor or of money, and 'profit,' in the economic meaning of the term. There is a disposition today within the Christian community to question the ethical validity of pure profit in the economic sense, that is, a return from business enterprise or a business transaction that is quite beyond and separate from the 'going rate' upon invested capital and the 'wages of superintendence.' In practice, speculative enterprises demand a return according to the risk involved without reference to the question whether the enterprise is socially legitimate; or to the further question whether, granted that it is legitimate, the risk involved should not be socially insured. Although most would accept, probably few critical minds would attempt to justify by a Christian standard the enormous profits which are frequently reaped from fortunate investment and which are often dependent upon values created by the community when it is impossible to show any corresponding service which the community has received. It is increasingly questioned by many in church circles how the accumulation of profits in the economic sense—a gain in addition to the normal reward for service rendered—can constitute a tenable motive from the Christian point of view.

"It should be noted in this connection that the word 'service' is an ambiguous term. It is used in two very different senses, an ethical for which there is no pecuniary reward, and that vast and intricate interchange of labor and commodities upon which society largely rests, by which men work for each other. That it is for reward does not destroy its service quality. It becomes exploitation only where reward is disproportionate to service, or where the service is supplanted only by the acquisitive spirit. An individual or a corporation serves the public when it supplies a real need at a just price. It is commonly assumed that to meet such a demand of the market is a fulfillment of the service requirement, and justifies the accumulation of a fortune in the process. Not only so, but industries which have their beginnings in a bona fide demand, frequently lose the service motive in the rapid accumulation of wealth and by various expedients which may not violate statutes but are yet unethical, plunder rather than serve the consumer."

WELL-KNOWN FUL NIGHT SAYS HERB HIS LIFE

Had About Given Friend Told Him

"It is an honest fact that I have used your Herb Juice I thought at times that I would die on account of stomach trouble. Today I feel better than I have felt in forty years, and I give your medicine credit for restoring my health again," says W. J. Morrow, who resides at 3961 Wise Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., in conversation with the Herb Juice man a few days ago.

"For years," continued Mr. Morrow, "I have suffered with a bad case of stomach trouble and chronic constipation. For the past few years I have had to take some kind of a physic continually, and as I grow older I find that my constipated condition, along with my stomach trouble, continued to grow worse. I am now passed 70 years of age, and have been a night watchman the greater part of my life. I attribute a great deal of this trouble to irregular eating and sleeping which I have experienced during the years. Something like a year ago I had a severe chill which was followed by a fever. CAILLAUX CLEANS OUT DEAD WOOD IN HIS MINISTRY

Employes, Trembling for Jobs, Redouble Efforts After Pensioners Are Fired.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 9.—The new French Minister of Finance, Joseph Caillaux, has taken hold of his ministry with great vigor and is making things hum in the vast palace extending from the Tuileries galleries to the Louvre. Already he has got rid of some "pensioners," injected new blood into some administration bench warmers and has relegated others to retirement. There is now an air of hustle and bustle throughout the entire ministry, even in the silent deserted corridors where somnolent ushers once greeted visitors with steady deliberation. The Cabinet Minister himself reaches his office closer to 8 than 9 o'clock in the morning and makes a personal round of the various bureaus. Late arrivals have been warned that 9 o'clock is the hour for work.

Caillaux's announced policy of economy has caused the employes at the ministry to fear that the practice of the doctrine may begin at home and therefore many are trembling for their jobs and are displaying more energy than generally is noticeable around Government offices in France. Thus far, however, the greatest sufferer from Caillaux's edict has been a large cafe immediately across from the ministry, on the Rue de Rivoli. The emptiness of the restaurant at 3 o'clock in the afternoon has resulted in questions to the head waiter who replied: "The gentlemen from across the street used to come here every afternoon to play chess. Now they are too busy; our chessboards are idle and our tables are vacant."

FIREMEN WERE INCENDIARIES

BERLIN, May 9.—Two [illegible] young firemen of Elberfeld [illegible] been revealed as firebrands [illegible] sentenced to two years in pri[illegible] for starting 11 conflagrations [illegible] which they were heroes. They [illegible] Rudolf Stratman, 20, and Herm[illegible] Londak, 19, both of good families. They joined the volunteer brigade a year ago and upon their first appearance showed such bravery that they were publicly praised by the fire chief, who held them up as models for the other members of the organization. The young men liked the praise so much that they lighted five more fires within a month, and others during ensuing months. On each occasion they were the first volunteers to appear to fight the flames.

ENGLISH PEERS RENT GOLF COURSES TO STEADY FORTUNES

Landlords Are Now Carrying Idea Further to Include Tennis Courts and Polo Grounds.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 9.—Many of England's great landlords are taking the defensive to steady their waning fortunes by putting idle sections of their vast estates on the credit side of the ledger. The novel remunerative method adopted last year on the estate of old Cecil family, in laying out and renting an 18-hole golf course, has been adopted by many other owners this year, and carried further so as to include tennis courts and polo grounds.

Those cases where the estate are near cities of fair size have found the idea most practical. On weekends there have been steady streams of middle-class golfers, who cannot afford to join expensive clubs, to these links, where they are able to play for about a half crown a round. The landlords find this method more profitable than putting their land into crops and, besides, it does not detract greatly from the beauty of their estates.

The Marquis of Queensberry has built tennis courts on his estate.

Men! Don't Come Home Fagged Out by Hard Work

DOCTORS say that in an enormous number of cases when men come home physically and mentally "all in," nervous and cranky, the real cause is not hard work, but thin, pale, watery blood, deficient in strength giving iron. Once this iron is restored to the blood it is often astonishing how quickly these men gain new strength, nerve force and endurance.

But be sure the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not the old-fashioned liquid medicines and pills made by the action of powerful acids on ordinary mineral iron. Nuxated Iron is a natural organic iron, like the iron in your own blood, and like that in spinach and lentils. Does not injure teeth nor disturb the stomach. So remarkable are the effects of Nuxated Iron that thousands of weak, nervous, fagged-out men and women have often increased their strength, energy and endurance in only two weeks' time.

Try Nuxated Iron just two weeks. Money back if not delighted. But make certain you get genuine guaranteed Nuxated Iron tablets with the letters NI on every tablet. At all good druggists.

WELL-KNOWN AND FAITHFUL NIGHT WATCHMAN SAYS HERB JUICE SAVED HIS LIFE

Had About Given Up All Hope When a Friend Told Him About Herb Juice.

Mr. W. J. MORROW

It is an honest fact that before used your Herb Juice I thought several times that I would die on account stomach trouble. Today I feel better than I have felt in forty years. I give your medicine credit for storing my health again," said W. J. Morrow, who resides at Wise Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., in conversation with the Herb Juice a few days ago.

"For years," continued Mr. Morrow, "I have suffered with a very bad case of stomach trouble and chronic constipation. For the past few years I have had to take pills some kind of a physic continually, and as I grow older I find that this constipated condition, along with my stomach trouble, continued to grow worse. I am now passed 70 years of age and have been a night watchman the greater part of my life. I attribute a great deal of this trouble to irregular eating and sleeping which I have experienced during all these years. Something like a month ago I had a severe chill which was followed by a fever. This laid me up for several days, and, try as I would, to find something to give me relief, it seemed that nothing helped me. A friend of mine advised me to try a bottle of the much-talked-about Herb Juice. And as I had tried everything else, I thought it wouldn't hurt to try one more. So I sent for a bottle of Herb Juice and started taking it at once. Before I had finished the first bottle there was a marked improvement in my condition, so I continued the use of Herb Juice and now I am on my third bottle. And believe me when I tell you that I have not felt as good in forty years as I do today. All the aches and pains through my back and chest have completely disappeared. I am never bothered with gas, and today I eat anything I want and sleep like a baby. I have found Herb Juice to be a wonderful tonic laxative and through its natural action it has completely restored my health. Again I say Herb Juice saved my life, and I will always praise it to everybody wherever I go.

The Herb Juice man has established headquarters at Sage & Dolph Drug Company, 514 Washington Avenue, where he will meet the local public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

"STRONG AND PROGRESSIVE"

CHICAGO

F. R. S. No. Age

(HEREINAFTER CALLED THE COMPANY)

The date of this policy is ____ day of ____ 192__

In Consideration of the payment of the premium of One Dollar, THE FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY HEREBY DOES INSURE ____ against Death or Disability resulting directly and independently of all other causes, from bodily injuries sustained through EXTERNAL, VIOLENT and ACCIDENTAL MEANS (subject to all limitations and conditions herein contained), for a term of twelve (12) months beginning at Noon, Standard Time of the day this policy is dated, and at the place of residence of the Insured.

If the Insured shall suffer any of the Specific Losses set forth in Part V, the Company will pay the sum set opposite such loss, if the injury causing such loss is sustained in the manner described in Part I, II or III.

Indemnity for loss of life shall be payable to ____ (hereinafter called the Beneficiary) if surviving, otherwise to the estate of the Insured.

PART I

By the wrecking or disablement of a railroad passenger car or street, elevated or underground railway car, passenger steamship or steamboat, in or on which the Insured is traveling as a fare-paying passenger, in a place regularly provided for the sole use of passengers.

PART II

(a) By the wrecking or disablement of any Public Omnibus, Taxicab, or Automobile Stage plying for public hire, which is being driven or operated at the time of such wrecking by a licensed driver, and in which such Insured is traveling as a fare-paying passenger; (b) or, by the wrecking of any private horse-drawn vehicle, or private motor-driven car in or on which the Insured is riding or driving, or by being accidentally thrown from such vehicle or car; (c) or, by the wrecking of any passenger elevator (elevators in mines excepted) in which the Insured is riding as a passenger.

PART III

(a) By being struck or knocked down or run over while walking or standing on a public highway, by a vehicle propelled by steam, cable, electricity, naphtha, gasoline, compressed air, liquid or horse-power excluding injuries sustained while working in the public highway or while on a railroad right of way; (b) or, by being struck by lightning or a cyclone or tornado; (c) or, by the collapse of the outer walls of a building; (d) or, by the burning of any church, theatre, library, school or municipal building, in which the Insured shall be at the beginning of such fire.

PART IV

ACCUMULATIVE BENEFITS FIFTY PER CENT

Each consecutive full year's renewal of this policy shall add ten per cent to the specific losses as set forth in Schedule A, Part V until such accumulation reaches fifty per cent at the end of the fifth year as set forth in Schedule B, Part V, there being no further accumulations after the fifth renewal.

This Policy Protects You as Follows:

Pays $5,000 for fare-paying passenger's loss of life by wrecking of railroad passenger car, street car, elevated or subway car, steamship or steamboat. Pays $5000 for the loss of both hands, both feet or both eyes under conditions just described. $2500 for loss of one hand, one foot or one eye.

Pays $2,000 for fare-paying passenger's loss of life by wrecking of public omnibus, taxicab, auto stage, horse-drawn or motor-driven vehicles or passenger elevators. Pays $2000 for the loss of both hands, both feet or both eyes under conditions just described. $1000 for loss of one hand, one foot or one eye.

Pays $1,000 for loss of life, sight of both eyes, both hands or both feet by being struck or knocked down while walking or standing on a public highway or being struck by lightning, cyclone or tornado, collapse of outer walls of building, in the burning of any church, theater, library, school or municipal building.

Pays $10 a Week for a period of fifteen weeks for all injuries sustained in the manner described above. If insured person is injured the company will defray all expenses (not to exceed $100) to put the insured in communication with and in care of relatives or friends.

An Exceptional Policy At An Unusually Low Price

This Policy, at a cost of $1.00, offers you protection in amounts ranging from $5000 to $500 for death or injury in accidents sustained while traveling in street cars, omnibuses, automobiles, wagons, railroad cars or steamboats or while walking on the street, or in certain other accidents such as those caused by tornadoes, cyclones, lightning, as fully set forth in detail in the facsimile of the policy itself, reproduced on the left.

Policies will be issued to persons between the ages of ten years and seventy years, except those who are blind or deaf, or so infirm, physically, that they may not travel with ordinary safety.

Heretofore, Travel Accident Insurance Policies of this character, BUT LESS LIBERAL IN TERMS, have been offered to readers of St. Louis newspapers with the requirement that the policy holder must subscribe for the newspaper offering the policy.

This Post-Dispatch offer excludes this subscription requirement. Those who want this limited type of travel accident insurance may have it at the sole cost of one dollar per year.

The risk of policy cancellation following a stopped subscription is not present in this offer. Your purchase of the policy for one dollar, accompanied by the application clipped from this advertisement is a completed transaction.

A thorough examination of policies of this type has been made to secure the best obtainable, and, as a result, the Post-Dispatch makes this unusual offer of a $5000 Federal Life Insurance Company's Travel Accident Policy at a cost of only one dollar a year.

Arrangements have been made with the Federal Life Insurance Company of Chicago, established twenty-five years, and with assets of more than SEVEN MILLION, FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, to issue the policies promptly on receipt of the Application Blank and One Dollar.

Caution—No Policy of this type, and at this cost, can protect you against ALL accidents

These policies are specially prepared with an m to protect against certain kinds of accidents ommon in the life of today. Necessarily they fford only limited coverage. The language of he policy offered here is plain enough for all to ad and understand, but it is necessary, if misderstanding or dispute is to be avoided, that l be cautioned to Read the Policy Carefully

It is a fact, borne out by experience and statistics, that hazards and exposure to accident have increased many fold in recent years. Protection against loss from certain accidents common to present-day life and activity is offered by this Federal Life Insurance Company's Travel Accident Insurance Policy, and at small cost.

The signed application and One Dollar will give you this protection for a year—renewable at expiration at the same cost.

So that no one may be misled, or misinformed, we point out that the policies do not offer indemnities for such common accidents as

A fall downstairs.

Being struck with a falling object.

Cuts, abrasions, sprains, etc., occurring at home or in places of employment.

Nor does the policy protect, while on duty, engineers, firemen or others engaged in operation of railroad trains, public conveyances, etc.

The coverage is definitely limited to the kinds of accidents enumerated in the policy itself. These cannot be more clearly outlined than in the accompanying facsimile reproduction of the first page of the policy shown at the left in this advertisement.

The Company Back of the Policy

The Federal Life Insurance Company of Chicago is, in the judgment of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, amply able to fulfill all its obligations. It is one of the leading companies in America issuing accident and health insurance. It has been in business twenty-five years—an old, established company.

Its assets exceed $7,500,000.00. It has $56,000,000.00 worth of insurance in force. Since its organization it has paid out to policy holders and beneficiares more than $10,500,000.00.

The president of the Federal Life Insurance Company of Chicago is Mr. Isaac Miller Hamilton.

The home offices of the company are in Chicago. The company owns its own building at 168 North Michigan Boulevard. A picture of the building is shown at the right.

Medical News Service of St. Louis Tuberculosis Society

No. 2—Sources of Infection in Tuberculosis.

This is the second of a series of articles on matters pertaining to tuberculosis which are being prepared and distributed among St. Louis physicians by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The others will be sent out every two weeks, and will contain the latest medical information on the subject.

There are two types of tuberculous infection in man. One is caused by the bovine tubercle bacillus, and the other by the human type of tubercle bacillus. In the United States, it is estimated that about 6 or 8 per cent of all tuberculosis is bovine in origin. In the British Isles and on the Continent of Europe, it is estimated that the incidence of bovine tuberculosis is between 18 and 35 per cent. Therefore, in this country, approximately 95 per cent of all tuberculosis is from human sources.

The open case of pulmonary tuberculosis is the great disseminator of infection. Human sputum, therefore, demands our closest attention for bacteriological examination and for our control of tuberculous infection. These organisms may be swallowed, or they may be inhaled through droplets of dust. Tuberculous ulcers and stools play a minor role in the dissemination of the disease. Approximately one of every 100 individuals has a positive sputum. Autopsies have shown that approximately one in five have, or have had, ulcerative tuberculosis of the lungs.

Frequency in Cattle.

The frequency of bovine infection in man can be explained if we consider the number of cattle that have tuberculosis and the frequency of tubercle bacilli in market milk. In France, Calmette was able to demonstrate with tuberculin injections, that the cattle of France, depending upon their age, reacted as high as 45 per cent. The incidence of tuberculosis among dairy cattle is higher than among animals slaughtered for beef. About 1 per cent of meat cattle have tuberculosis. It has been variously estimated in this country that the proportion of animals reacting to the tuberculin test ranges from none in herds which have been subjected to the test for several years to 20 per cent and over, in herds in which no attempt has been made to control the disease. Of course, tuberculosis of the udder is the most dangerous type in cattle, and has been estimated in this country as existing in 10 to 30 per cent of all dairy cattle. Milk from such udders may contain from 50,000 to 100,000 tubercle bacilli per cubic centimeter, and may remain infectious for guinea pigs when injected in high dilutions.

Bacilli Found in Milk.

The incidence of tubercle bacilli in market milk, which represents the mixed milk of many cattle, has been determined in many large cities. In the United States, tubercle bacilli have been found in market milk in 6.7 per cent to 16 per cent of samples examined. These cities included Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Chicago. In Germany, 16 to 27 per cent; in England 10 to 25 per cent; Paris, 20 per cent, and Copenhagen 4 per cent.

The importance of the sources of infection in tuberculosis is obvious. Human sputum is the great stream which floods our population to 95 per cent of infection with tubercle bacilli. In 6 to 8 per cent, our failure to control milk infects our children particularly, because milk forms the bulk of their food. All milk for human consumption should be pasteurized, and all milk for infant feeding should come from tested herds, or be boiled. The argument that the boiling of milk and the pasteurization of milk destroys vitamins, is a weak one. In adults, the vitamins are furnished mainly by other foods. In infants the antiscorbutic vitamins can be replaced with simple fruit juices. The antirachitic vitamins can be replaced by cod liver oil, etc.

In conclusion, therefore, our attention must be directed to the sources of infection, if we wish to control tuberculous disease.

FORMER NEW YORK CHAUFFEUR WINS HONORS AS PAINTER

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 9.—From New York chauffeur to artist with an international reputation is the career of the Amsterdam painter, Adrien Lubbers, who is now showing a collection of paintings with Italian motifs in the Berlin Art Gallery, after giving similar exhibitions in Rome, Paris, Dresden, Hanover and Hamburg. When his Dutch father refused to approve his desire for an artistic career, young Lubbers went to America, where he was a chauffeur in New York, then successively sold automobile supplies, violins, herrings, worked as an automobile mechanic, farmhand and was a singer in a seamen's saloon in Hoboken. He married the daughter of a New York manufacturer and later succeeded in overcoming his father's objections to art. When he returned to Europe he quickly won recognition.

Lubbers expects to exhibit in New York in the autumn and to paint a series of pictures in the American Metropolis. "I want to make a series of paintings to take to Europe to show how the most modern and the most picturesque city of the world looks through the eyes of a modern painter," he said recently. "I believe that only modern artists understand and translate New York."

PRAISES NEW BELL BUILDING DESIGN

Architectural Critic Says It Gives Promise of Achievement on Rational Lines.

High praise of the design of the new Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. building, on the block between Tenth, Eleventh, Pine and Chestnut streets, is expressed in an article which will appear in the forthcoming number of The Architectural Record (New York), by A. N. Rebori, a nationally known architectural critic. The architects are Mauran, Russell & Crowell and J. R. Timmons. Rebori writes in part:

"The building for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in St. Louis, now in course of construction, gives every promise of real architectural achievement along rational lines freed from the shackles of traditional 'classic' influence. Here is an amazing endeavor which grasps the potential possibilities of a modern commercial problem and presents a comprehensive example of a tall building covering an entire city block, designed on the setback principle, pointing the way to a logical, ideal solution of a typical American structure.

(The size, height of 400 feet or 30 stories, is discussed.)

"This brilliant mass fills us with a warm glow of satisfaction and we do not hesitate to predict for it a future wide-spreading influence of high achievement in skyscraper architecture.

"It is, of course, too early to judge of the results, but the careful study devoted to nicety of design shows an unusual structure that is perfectly logical and at the same time decidedly monumental. The building itself will be completed during the middle of the year 1926, and then can be judged by everyone. In the meantime the architects give striking evidence that they have begun it wisely and well and are courageous enough, and willing to face public opinion with some degree of equanimity. Both the owner and the architects of this inspiring work are to be congratulated for a noble effort in the right direction, expressing the high romance of steel."

$40,000,000 MORE FOR COFFEE

Brazilian Planter's Profits Increase 5½ Cents a Pound in 1924.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

SANTOS, Brazil, April 21.—An increase of $40,000,000 in the coffee bill of the United States in 1924 is shown in the shipping records of this port. The figures indicate additional profits of nearly 5½ cents a pound to the coffee planters in a single shipping season. American housewives can compare the 5½ cents more a pound in Santos with the higher prices they have been paying for coffee at their retail groceries.

In 1923, $98,542,505 was paid in the United States for the 5,775,085 sacks of coffee shipped from this port, as compared with $139,007,766 paid for 5,681,018 sacks last year. In 1924 the average declared value per sack in Santos was $24.47, or 18.4 cents a pound, while in 1923 the average declared value per sack was $17.24 or 13 cents per pound.

11,000,000 Onions Set Out in Texas.

By the Associated Press.

McKINNEY, Tex.—Eleven million Bermuda onion slips have been set out in the Farmersville and Princeton districts this spring. Extensive planting followed successful experiments by Farmersville farmers.

Feel Blue?

Intestinal congestion may be to blame

MEDICAL science today looks for physical causes when a patient is constantly troubled with depression.

It has been established that chronic constipation has a great deal to do with that distressing condition most of us describe as "feeling blue."

Certainly, there can be no harm in thoroughly flushing the intestines of disturbing accumulations, when something of this sort is the matter. And, of course, the safe, effective physic to take is Pluto Water.

Unlike slow, uncertain, over-night cathartics, Pluto Water acts promptly—in 30 minutes to two hours. A cleansing internal bath, its result is to make a person feel better all over—more interested in life and living. The poisons that cause depression are eliminated from the system.

Pluto Water is prescribed by physicians, sold by druggists and bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

Money back if you don't gain 5 pounds quick

New treatment costs you nothing unless you put on this much weight in a month

What's the use of being skinny and run-down? Why not be plump and ruddy-cheeked and attractive?

You can make yourself that way very easily with Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. They'll put flesh on you and do it in a hurry.

Sugar-coated, pleasant to take as candy, these tablets sharpen appetite, increase energy, build up weight and strength in men and women. Great for puny children, too.

Try them, at our risk. Get three bottles of Dr. Gross' Tablets from your druggist, take as directed, and if you don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days and feel like a new person your money will be refunded.

Mother Says They're Fine For Kiddies

"My little girl (age nine years) looked so thin and pale I was worried constantly about her health. Your Tablets seem to be all she needed, and she picked up so rapidly I am now giving the Tablets to my other three children. Several of my neighbors' children are taking them also. They like to take them and they are doing them a world of good. Their appetites are enormous."
Mrs. E. Thorn, Illinois

Gains 11½ Pounds

"I tried your tablets and almost at once my appetite, which had been very poor, improved noticeably. I have been taking the tablets ever since and have gained eleven and one-half pounds and am feeling fine."
Mr. Eugene V. Fagan, Chicago

Built Him Up—Now Wants Brother to Take Tablets

"I took the treatment and gained twelve pounds. Now I want some tablets for my brother. He needs them and I know they will do him good."
Mr. L. W. Britton, Illinois

Best Tonic He Has Ever Taken

"Beyond any doubt your Tablets are all that you claim for them and I will gladly recommend them to people who need something to build them up. Several friends are now taking them on my advice. I tried many other medicines without effect and had all but lost confidence until I tried your Tablets. They have made me feel ten years younger."
T. Terrell, Illinois

Skinny Man Increases 15 Pounds

"For the past ten years I have been trying to annex a little flesh. I tried a lot of remedies without any gain. Last October I started to use Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Then I weighed 112 pounds. Since then I have gained 15 pounds and never felt or looked so well as I do now."
Mr. Harry Paige, Chicago

Gains 10 Pounds, 3 Ounces

"On September 10, I weighed 130 pounds, which was the day I started taking your tablets. After ten weeks of using your tablets I weigh 140 pounds, 3 ounces. The only fault with your tablets is that they make my clothes too small."
Mr. H. E. Stevenson, Illinois

WHO KILLED "DOC" DILLON? -:- An Irate Husband? A Petty Blackmailer? A Woman Scorned?

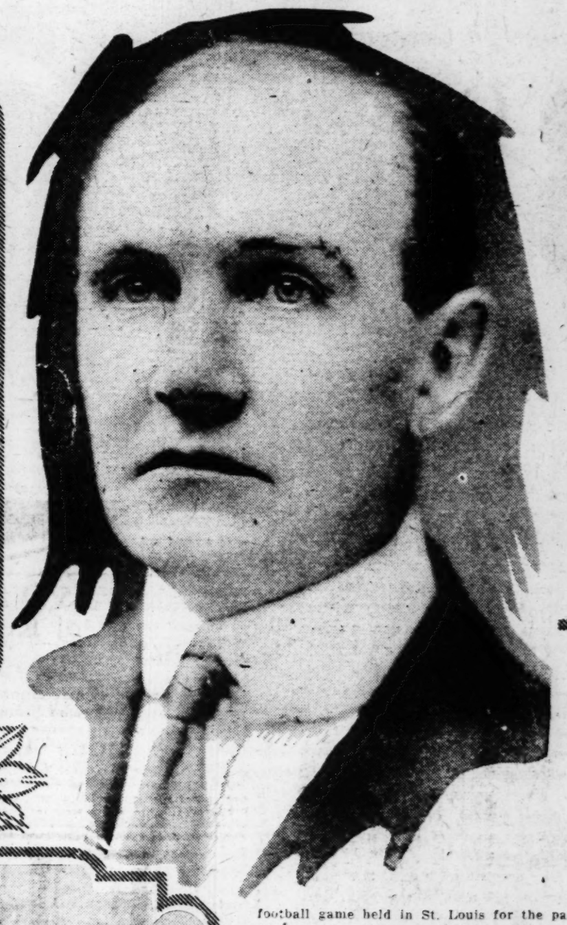
Boisterous Career of Physician, Son of a Distinguished Family, Searched for Clews

In a Maze of Theories Police Are Agreed on One Point: That "A Woman Was at the Bottom of It"—Hotel Telephone Girl Says the Doctor Was Threatened Twice by Man in Quarrel Over the Wire About a Woman—Two Women Friends of Dr. Dillon Have Been Questioned, But Threw no Light on the Crime.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN.

DR. WILLIAM A. DILLON.



Miss Marie Addis, who went to the theater with Dr. Dillon the night before he was killed.

Miss Eleanor Lynn, telephone operator who overheard conversations.

DR. WILLIAM A. DILLON created no comment when he entered the sedate lobby of the Fairmont Hotel, Maryland and Euclid avenues, about 9:30 p. m. April 30. In fact, only an elevator boy and Miss Eleanor Lynn, telephone operator, noticed his entrance.

To Miss Lynn he may have nodded or passed a cheery word; the Doctor had his social side. To the elevator boy he may have flashed a grin. Yet he said nothing either remembered long; nothing that would indicate he was particularly happy or particularly sad. They saw merely that here was Dr. Dillon back from a short evening out and ready to retire to his room for the night. It would take a business call of urgent nature, apparently, to bring him downstairs again. A guest or so as he passed to the elevator may have eyed him with lazy pleasure, for the Doctor was a handsome man—big, husky, meticulously groomed.

Street sounds closed over the little stir made by his passing feet. The shrieking brakes of an automobile. The dang of a car bell. A newsboy on the corner . . . In the lounge a man crackled the cover of his magazine . . . . A matron dozed . . . . A girl laughed. It was rather a warm evening. A little dull at the Fairmont Hotel, as evenings go. . . .

"Dr. Dillon?"

Miss Lynn, the telephone operator, had a call.

"Dr. Dillon? Oh, yeah, he's in. Wait a minute and I'll connect you. There you are!" She watched the small light before her go out and settled back in her chair. She did not listen in, though on other occasions she had. The Doctor's phone calls of late had been interesting. But this was probably a patient.

No one remembers seeing the Doctor come downstairs and leave the hotel. He must have left so hurriedly as to escape notice. His call must have been an urgent one. No one knows the time of his departure, but it probably was soon after he had come in. An urgent call.

* * * * * * *

The next morning, Edward Hilderbrand, a janitor, at the Washington University gymnasium saw, upon arriving for work at 6:30 o'clock, a man lying on the cinder track which circles Francis Field.

"Some fool kid," he said to himself, "has got up early and put on his sweat clothes to get some running and has gone to sleep before he started."

The Murder Scene

But on nearer approach he realized it was a student who lay there. No sleeper. The man was dead.

When St. Louis County Deputy Sheriffs and city detectives arrived persons in the crowd about the body had identified it.

"That's Doc Dillon," said a man who knew him well. "What was he doing out here on the running track? The Doc was a great athlete in his day, but he gave that up long ago."

The body was examined. It lay face upward, the head resting in a pool of blood. One hand was in the pocket of his topcoat, the other was thrown upward toward the face, fingers half clenched. There were no marks of struggle in the cinders about or on the clothing. The doctor's eyeglasses were still on his nose. His shoes were shiny, his white collar clean, his cravat in place. The legs were bent as if he had slowly crumpled to the ground.

He had been shot twice. One bullet had entered the right ear and ranged upward through the brain. Another had struck him in the left knee. Seeing the location of these wounds, detectives searched for a revolver or pistol. There was none, only a .38-caliber cartridge which lay near the body. Physicians who examined the body said the wounds could not have been self-inflicted except by extreme contortion of the arm and back.

Dr. Dillon had been murdered.

The scene was as secluded as could have been chosen within a settled portion of the city. The body lay a block in each direction at right from a building occupied at night. Francis Field is guarded on the south by a concrete wall and stand which banks against Forsythe boulevard and cuts off all view and many sounds from this street. After 10 o'clock there are few passersby on this stretch of Forsythe and only an occasional automobile. On the western edge of the field there is Pennsylvania avenue, running north and south, a badly paved street. The field is shut off from pedestrians by an iron-picketed fence grown with vines and backed by a row of poplars. An arc light at the corner of Forsythe says he saw three men quarreling, apparently unfastened, due to negligence of a caretaker.

A deserted prospect, then. But on the night of the murder there were passersby and there were a few who heard things. Ted Uelk, who lives at 7011 Lindell boulevard, said that he was returning to his home from a meeting at 10:55 p. m., when he saw an automobile standing in front of the west gate to Francis Field. The car was facing north on Pennsylvania avenue and its lights were burning.

Uelk said he entered his house and went upstairs to bed. While he was undressing he heard three sounds like shots or backfiring from an automobile. He went to a window commanding a view of the west gate of the field, 100 yards away, and saw the automobile drive off. He did not make out the number of occupants.

This machine was also observed about 11 o'clock by David Fehndrich, a fireman employed at Washington University. He drove by it in his own car on his way to work and two of them united against the third. He is hard of hearing and was unable to make out any of the conversation. Nor did he hear any sounds later.

Ed Summers, a night watchman, a negro chauffeur and Russell Holman, a student were within a block of the scene at 11 o'clock. They all heard the three shots but thought the sounds were from an automobile backfiring.

Search For a Motive

The body lay about 150 feet from the corner of the gymnasium on the north side of the field and in the center of the cinder running track which sweeps its edge. Dr. Dillon had fallen at the 100-yard mark used by sprinters, precisely on the mark. The spot was at least 300 yards east of the open west gate.

Having gathered sufficient facts to establish the time of the shooting as about 11 p. m., and having observed all details of the scene the police passed temporarily from the questions as to when and how.

Who did it? And why?

These were the questions that engrossed a startled city and sent detectives scurrying.

Now when a man is killed police naturally think of his enemies. Dr. Dillon had not been murdered for money. His gold watch still ticked in his pocket and in his purse were two $1 bills and some change. No, he had been slain by someone, or more than one, who hated him.

It could not have been said even by the Doctor's friends that he had no enemies. He had played football in the flying wedge period and he had never seemed to realize that life was not a football game. He was always hitting the line with a roar. Those who liked to be bullied called him a card and said, "The Doc has a heart of gold." He doesn't mean half he says or does." At every big football game held in St. Louis for the past 20 years Doc Dillon had been conspicuous, howling and waving his arms until he was red in the face—his eyes were sometimes red from another stimulant—and cutting capers on the side lines. He was a charming fellow on the football field. But off it he was usually trying.

Strangers who saw the "Doc" in action at football games or hotel dances were always forcibly struck by his behavior and as a rule wanted to know his name. "That's Doc Dillon," they were told. "A great cut-up, the Doc, especially when he's drinking." If the subject was pursued further the informant generally added that Dillon came from an old and respected St. Louis family and had been educated at St. Louis University. Pride of family or training sat lightly on the Doc, however, and he much preferred to boast "I'm hard" than to refer to the respect shown the Dillon name.

This is not to say that the police or anyone else believed some man whom the Doctor had slapped on the back heartily, or made the butt of some coarse prank had killed him. His drinking and his bragging and his bullying could be avoided.

The Doctor had more subtle expressions of personality. He had been charged with shady medical practice. Police brought him to book in two malpractice cases, one of which resulted fatally. However, he was not even tried in either instance. It had been whispered, too, that the Doctor dealt in liquors for his friends. The police were warmer here. Bootlegging and blackmail, perhaps? But few believed he had been killed for such reasons as those.

Women? Ah! The Doctor was 46 years old, divorced, and fond of the company of the ladies. His popularity with women had been a paradox which puzzled and amazed his friends. He had a way with him where women were concerned quite different from his treatment of men. With men he was brutally candid, loud-voiced, fond of crude jokes; with women he was another person altogether. One saw him handing them about in gentle, almost courtly fashion. He who lived roughly and stamped about in the company of men, trod softly where women were concerned. In his profession, in sport and in play, his methods were direct, almost carelessly blatant. But when it came to women the Doctor became an intrigant. There was complication in his dealings with women.

That is why police stopped short when they reached this phase of Dr. Dillon's career. His relations with women were the twisted threads of an otherwise simply planned life. It was hard to think of the Doctor being murdered for a handslap, a jest, a liquor prescription or even an illegal operation. But it was easy to place murder at the end of those devious ways he had followed with women.

"Was he killed because of a woman?" the police asked.

So they set out to find the woman. The simplest procedure was to start with the last one the doctor had escorted and work back.

She was named quickly as Miss Marie Addis, 27 years old, of 4125 Lindell boulevard. The public knew her only as the fiancee of the late Herman C. G. Luyties, wealthy patent medicine manufacturer, who had bequeathed her $10,000. Miss Addis readily admitted she had been with Dr. Dillon on the evening of the murder. She said they had attended a picture show on Grand boulevard together from 7 p. m. until about 10 p. m. and then had taken a bus on Lindell boulevard westward. She left him at her corner and he continued on the bus, saying he was tired and would go to his hotel, four blocks away.

"I'll Kill You"

That brought the investigators to the Fairmont Hotel. Here Miss Lynn, the operator, was ready to state that Dr. Dillon had come in about 9:30 or 10 and had left after receiving a telephone message. From what number had the message come? She did not know. She had not traced it. She had not listened in that evening. But——

"A man has several times threatened to kill Dr. Dillon," the girl told her eager questioners.

Miss Lynn declared that on Wednesday evening, the night before the murder night, a man had called Dr. Dillon and had left a Cabany telephone number with the request that Miss Lynn ask the doctor to call it when he came in. This the doctor did and, according to Miss Lynn, the following conversation ensued:

Dr. Dillon: If you come between Mary and me I'll kill you.

The Other Man: If you go near her again I'll get you.

Dr. Dillon: I've got a date with her tonight. What do you think of that?

Other Man: Well, you'll never keep it.

Dr. Dillon: I'll grab a taxi and come right out to Clayton and see you on that.

A bellboy corroborated Miss Lynn's statement in part, claiming to have oberheard a portion of the doctor's statment while he was in and out of the room on an errand. Miss Lynn said further that she had kept the Cabany number; that the man who had called Dr. Dillon from it Wednesday night had called him the night of April 18, and that this same man had come to the hotel with the doctor on two occasions. Had this man also called Dr. Dillon Thursday night? She couldn't say.

Tracing the Cabany number, reporters Friday night went to the home of Rudolph Hammel at 6828 Kingsbury avenue. Miss Lynn was confronted with Hammel, a man of about 60, and she said he was the man who had come to the Fairmont with Dr. Dillon. She also said his voice was similar to the voice that had threatened Dillon from the Cabany phone number. Hammel, however, calmly denied ever talking to Dillon on

GOVERNMENT IS PROBING 22 MURDERS OF RICH INDIANS IN OKLAHOMA

White Wife of "Millionaire" Osage Declares Paleface Traders Seek to Drive Indians From Oil Lands

Mrs. John Kenney Has Offered $10,000 Reward for Arrest of "Terrorist Ring" Which She Believes Has Perpetrated All the Outrages — Tells Blood-Curdling Story of Occult Trickeries Practiced on Simple Red Men — Government Detectives Go Into the Osage Hills to Ferret Out the Mystery.

GUTHRIE, Ok., May 9.

THE official count is nine, but some swear the more correct figure is 22—murders. This indefiniteness as to the number of "millionaire" Indians slain throws mystery about the case before it is even approached. Those Government detectives who have gone into the Osage hills know now, if they did not dream before, how great is their task. Were nine Indians or 22 murdered? And did it stop there? Many an Osage has fled this strange region of scrub timber and oil derricks, crossing himself, and vowing that a hundred of his brothers and sisters died in the reign of terror. Such fugitives usually have ended by getting drunk, in which state they are ready to say that not 100 but 200 Indians of the richest tribe in the world have been murdered.

But ask an Indian, drunk or sober, to tell you why the Osages were murdered and who murdered them, and he will cringe in terrified silence. Take him to the middle of a field with no cover for eavesdropping; make oath to him that his name or his news will never be disclosed; and still he will say nothing. "No, no," he mumbles, "if do, me be next." The awe of the Terror is upon him. You know from his face, paled to the color of buckskin, that he believes the ear of the Terror is between him and you.

The Little Father in Washington—Meestair Col-lidge—has sent men to the Osage Country to protect his red brothers from the Terror. J. Berry King, a great chief—(Assistant State's Attorney-General) has held a court of inquiry in Osage County. Eustice Smith, another white chief, has made investigations. But the Indians fear to tell them what they know. Witnesses summoned to hearings disappear overnight and cannot be found. If cornered and questioned they evade. The curse of the Evil Spirit is upon the Osages, they say, and it is not wise to talk.

The Osage Outrages

The Osages are a sadly demoralized tribe. Their wealth, which amounts to virtually a millionaire's annual income for each member of the tribe, no longer gives them courage. Was not Roan Horse found dead, seated at the wheel of his Packard one sad evening? A bullet had crashed through the windshield and into Roan's temple. And did not George Bigheart die frothing at the mouth from a mysterious poison in an Oklahoma City hospital, for all his motor cars and fine clothes? Two parties of Indians, one riding in a Cadillac and the other in a Pierce-Arrow, stopped their cars on railroad tracks and were killed by trains. The hand of the Terror stopped their engines, say the Osage tribesmen. Furthermore, what good did Reta Smith's fine home with a bathtub in it, do her? She was blown to pieces in her own living room by a charge of dynamite planted beneath the house.

Osage County is dark and bloody ground. It lies northeast of Guthrie. The county seat is Pawhuska, surrounded by territory four times as large as the State of Delaware. When murder is done in Oklahoma and the murderer flees the newspapers report as a matter of course, "He has taken to the Osage Hills." When Sheriffs cannot find their man they say: "He is hiding in the Osage Hills," as if that were sufficient explanation. Osage County is a refuge for every desperate, hunted man. In its woods and gullies outlaws light their camp fires and do not worry about the smoke. Killers, bank robbers and absconders hold rendezvous in the Osage hills.

"Don't go poking about up there," one is warned at Guthrie. "It isn't a safe country."

The Murders

For a year now Government agents have been at work in Osage County. Yet they have made few arrests and no indictments have been announced. Small wonder that the Osage, surrounded by bad men, haunted by the horror of a murderous hand that strikes and leaves no trail, terrified by the thought that he may be the next one marked, is loath to talk. Families have buried their dead and said nothing. Relatives have seen their loved ones murdered and have declared they died natural deaths.

The murders on record, it seems safe to state, do not complete the total outrage. The list which follows is fragmentary.

Roan Horse, also called Henry Roan, full-blooded Osage, found shot to death in his automobile in February, 1923.

Reta Smith, wife of a white man, who was blown to pieces when a dynamite charge exploded under her house, March 10, 1923. Her husband, William, and a white servant also were killed.

Joe Yellow Horse, toppled over dead after frothing at the mouth from some strange poison in April, 1923.

Alfred McKinley, found suffering from a fractured skull and died, unable to tell who had hit him.

Billy Stepson, famous Osage roper, died after a sudden illness from poison.

Anna Brown, found shot through the head in a clump of brush, May 21, 1921.

Lizzie Q., mother of Anna Brown, poisoned.

Nina Smith, Indian wife of a white man, poisoned.

George Bigheart, died in Oklahoma City, June 29, 1922, from poisoning.

Charles Whitecorn, killed just outside Pawhuska, date unknown.

The strangest murder of all was the taking off of Judge W. W. Vaughan of Pawhuska, who had acted as an attorney for the Indians. He was a white man. Vaughn had represented George Bigheart and was summoned to his client's deathbed. Bigheart, it is believed, told him who had plotted several of the murders. Anyway, Vaughan left Oklahoma City hastily for Pawhuska after Bigheart's death. Between the two places he was taken from his Pullman berth on a Katy train and murdered. His body was found beside the tracks next morning. Police supposed that the murderers had trailed Vaughan from the hospital and had contrived his murder to stop him from talking.

Detectives' Theories

Now, the Government detectives have not been slow in developing theories to explain the murders, though no important arrests are yet on record. The secret of the reign of terror in the Osage is contained in one word: "Headrights," these investigators assert.

The headright came about in this way: Years ago the Osages held land in Kansas. Pressure of settlement there made it necessary for the Government to move the tribe to Oklahoma. Osage County was set aside for the Indians, the tribe then numbering 2229 fullbloods. Each Indian was given surface right to 649 acres of land, but the mineral rights of Osage County were held to be the property of the tribe as a whole. That was before the discovery of oil in the Osage, when the land was deemed valuable only for farming. The mineral rights were to remain vested in the tribe until 1931.

The white man entered the arrangement through decision of the Indian Bureau to allot five quarters of 160 acres each for townsites. On these locations arose the towns of Pawhuska, Foraker, Hominy, Fairfax and Big Heart. Whites were allowed to settle and hold property in these towns. A motley throng of traders and adventurers who hoped to exploit the Indians rushed to the towns and settled.

Then oil was found. Immediately the Government declared all oil rights to belong to the Indians, and in 1906 the allotment act went into effect. This divided the oil rights equally among each member of the tribe whose name was on the tribe roll that year. The individual Indian's interest in the communal oil holdings of the tribe as a whole was called his headright. The headright was made hereditary and its holder was authorized to collect and use the income, bequeathing it to his heirs upon his death. These headrights became very valuable and as members of families died the heirs collected more than one headright. Some Indians today receive the income from two or three headrights.

The Indians murdered were slain for their headrights, argue Government investigators.

Such a theory leads equally well to two conclusions. Either the Indians were murdered by members of their own families who hoped to profit by their deaths through inheritance of headrights, or they were murdered by white settlers who owned surface rights to the land on which their victims held the mineral rights. Perhaps both explanations are true, some of the murders being actuated by the first motive, others by the second motive.

In the Osage country, however, business men and officials not afraid to talk seem to feel that all blame for the reign of terror must be placed on white settlers. There is talk of a secret cabal among unscrupulous white traders which has plotted all the crimes. It is said that these white men are determined to drive the Osages from their lands through terrorism. The obvious design is to so frighten the Indians that they will ask the Government to move them elsewhere. Then, when the Osage oil rights lapse in 1931 the oil wealth will revert to the owners of the surface rights of land in Osage County. If the Indians are driven off, white men can buy up or homestead the surface rights, thus wresting in time this vast oil territory from Osage owners. Millions are involved, and there are many desperate rogues in the Osage hills.

Each headright now brings in about $12,000 a year. Through accumulation by inheritance many Indian families receive $50,000 or $60,000 a year. Whether the crimes were committed by white man or red man, hope of rich gain was the certain motive.

A Wild, Bad Land

The Indian viewpoint of the Terror, when ferreted out, is bizarre in the extreme. So far only one person has dared to speak for the Osages—a white woman who married John Kenney, wealthy full-blooded Osage. Mrs. Kenney has offered $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men guilty of these outrages. She tells a weird and blood-curdling story of the situation at Pawhuska; a story credible only if one is steeped in the atmosphere of the Osage country and the superstitions of its Indians.

John Kenny, full blooded Osage Indian, who was hypnotized by the "Terror Ring," his wife declares.

There are only a few places remaining in the United States where lawless men can make a stand. The Florida Everglades, the Bad Lands of South Dakota, the Tonto Basin in Arizona harbor fugitives from justice. But for wildness and wickedness the Osage country of Oklahoma is the worst. Its population is recruited from three classes—renegades who know no law; oil huskies who are indifferent to law, and Indians whose attitude toward law is a strange mixture of respect and ignorance, superstition and fear.

Thrown together in a vast region visited by but one short-line railroad with only the amenities of five small towns to relieve the rough unrestraint of hill farm and oil camp and only a Sheriff and a handful of deputies to keep order, the inhabitants of the Osage country are at liberty to prey upon each other. Wealth is concentrated in the hands of the Indians or absentee landlords. It is inevitable that the whites should be the hunters and the Indians their prey. And what chances there are for villainies! The Indian who is muicted may appeal to the Sheriff. But what then?

There are treacherous roads in the Osage hills and trails that have led to many an ambush. If an Indian complains, reprisal is taken swiftly by the accused. He can hide in a ravine and pick his accuser off with a high-power rifle. He can use dynamite or poison. Having slain, the murderer can take to the hills. But this usually is unnecessary. He can walk the streets of Pawhuska, brazenly confident that the terrified redskins will not appear as witnesses against him. "It ain't healthy to testify" in Osage County.

Finding themselves in this situation, the Osages, still childlike and usually uneducated, have recourse to their superstitions. They believe their white enemies to be vested with hypnotic powers. They are convinced that white men invoke the Evil Spirit, and are therefore immune from punishment. Ghastly tales of hypnotized victims doing the bidding of those who have them in their power are whispered among the Osages.

Mrs. Kenney's Story

Absorbing the superstitions of her adopted race, Mrs. Kenney has become a firm believer in the occult. She married John in 1909 before he became an oil "millionaire," when he had only his farm in the Osage reservation. He had attended Haskell Indian school and was regarded as one of the more intelligent Indians. She was a Boston girl of French-Canadian descent. Her stipulation at the time of the marriage was that John must go to work. Together they started in on his farm and succeeded in laying up considerable money, so that they were independent before oil was struck. Now they have an income of $30,000 a year from the two and a fifth headrights John holds.

"White men in the Osage have hypnotized Indians and are carrying on a reign of terror to drive them from their oil lands," Mrs. Kenney declares. "Husbands have been given hypnotic suggestions that they should kill their wives and parents have been induced to mistreat their children. Indians have been hynotized and compelled to drive their automobiles over embankments or to stop on railway crossings. This white terror ring has sold drugs and liquors to my husband's people. I believe doctors and officials are in league with the ring."

Afraid of consequences to John and herself, Mrs. Kenney moved from Pawhuska to Guthrie, which lies outside the Osage territory. The Kenneys now spend most of their time in travel. A 2-year-old adopted daughter is kept in a home in Washington, D. C., because Mrs. Kenney fears the alleged terrorists may strike at her through the child. Her explanation of the Osage outrages is as follows:

"This is the way they worked: In each of the five towns a group of traders and lawyers sprung up who selected certain Indians as their prey. They owned all the officials, for although the Indians had a vote they had no interest in politics. These men had an understanding with each other. They coldbloodedly said, 'You take So-and-So, So-and-So and So-and-So and I'll take these.' They selected Indians who had full head rights and large farms.

Hypnotism

"Indians know nothing of money, and when the white traders could, they got the Indians to sign notes and leases they didn't understand. They'd keep the Indians drunk, break down their morals and then ask that a guardian be appointed. As soon as a guardian was appointed, he'd put the Indian's land on sale. The law permits a man to act as guardian for only five Indians but these men worked their wives into the game, so that they really controlled ten Indians. [illegible] groups of guardians would sell the [illegible] each other. In this way they kept [illegible] in their own hands.

"A group in Pawhuska decided to get [illegible] and me because I had been making [illegible] for them. When my brother-in-law was murdered, I jumped into the fight and [illegible] one fellow pay back $8000 that [illegible] paid twice. I'll say they got me, but [illegible] possible to suffer hell on earth, I suffered.

"I didn't realize that it was possible to keep a person in a hypnotic state [illegible] Of course, I had seen exhibitions of [illegible] but I thought that was all a joke. [illegible] not completely recovered from the spell put on him and it will be years before [illegible] normal again.

"These men have become so good in hypnotism that they don't even have to look at a person they hypnotize. They put their spell on me when I was working on the ranch, miles away. About 50 men worked on the ranch, but I must have had a strong mind, for the spell didn't really work until I had been given the 'finishing' touch in Pawhuska.

"It is a horrible feeling. A dull pain begins in the back of the head, the lungs seem cramped, the heart sounds like wind whistling through telegraph wires, your head becomes clumsy and your feet seem like lead. You can't sleep and you'd give anything if you only could.

Her Dilemma

"The 'finishing touch' was put on me in Pawhuska. I went there on July 17, 1923, to settle the estate of my brother-in-law. While I met a man named Shepherd, who claimed there was $650 due him. I had the money to pay him if he could prove his claim. We had a lot of talk and he threatened me. Then we had a fight and all of us were arrested. I paid my fine, but Shepherd sued me and my husband for $11,000 punitive damages.

Mrs. Kenney says she engaged [illegible] man, an attorney of Guthrie, to defend herself and husband in this case. From the [illegible] tionship between lawyer and client was established a controversy developed. The [illegible] max came when Mrs. Kenney shot and [illegible] ly wounded Tillman on the street in Guthrie June 4, 1924.

She was tried on an attempt-to-kill [illegible] at Guthrie last December. The jury [illegible] for conviction and she was sentenced to [illegible] years in the penitentiary. Her counsel appealed and a new trial was granted. She will be tried again in September. The prosecution in her first trial took the stand that Mrs. Kenney's act was the unreasonable burst of a woman crazed by too much knowledge of occult lore. Tillman has declined to discuss the case except to assert that Mrs. Kenney "is mentally irresponsible."

So the shadow of the occult hangs over Mrs. Kenney, champion of the Osages, who darkens the whole story of their present past. Those Government detectives who have gone into the Osage hills to track down the facts in a score of mysterious killings are up against more than tangled clews. They must pry from frightened Indians evidence about the Evil Spirit. What will it turn out to be—this Evil Spirit? A group of white men banded in a murder compact? A band of greedy Osages who have slain their wards for the headrights which they despised for their herit? Or will it be the black tale of the Osage scene itself, which in the end will defeat all attempts to solve the enigma?

9305 AND 9306---TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY DAYS AFTER

Drab Days and Silent Nights Have Sunk the Iron of Prison Life Into Slayers of Robert Franks

Leopold, Stoic and Philosopher, Appears to Have Suffered More Than Loeb the Light-Hearted — Both Have Been Model Prisoners and Not a Demerit Mark Has Been Recorded Against Them, But Hostile Public Sentiment Prevents Extending to Them the Mild Privileges That They Have Earned.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JOLIET, Ill., May 9.

TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY drab and dreary days of prison life have left their mark upon Richard A. Loeb and Nathan Leopold Jr., 9305 and 9306, serving life terms here for the murder of Robert Franks. The spirit has suffered more than the flesh. The mocking, jesting youths who came through the penitentiary gates on the night of last Sept. 11 have come to realize what it means to look forward to a life of imprisonment.

It is a curious fact that Leopold, the stoic and philosopher, appears to have suffered vastly more than Loeb. When they came here it was freely predicted by those who had observed them that Leopold's iron composure would endure the suffocating montony of prison existence better than the boyish irresponsibility of Loeb. Like most others who had watched them in jail and on trial, this writer was certain the younger would be the first to crack under the strain.

At this time it would be inaccurate to say that either has cracked. The fact is, however, that in eight months Leopold has aged in appearance at least five years, while outwardly Loeb has changed but little. Leopold's smooth cheeks have hollowed. His loose, sensuous mouth has grown hard and grim. There are deep lines in his face. The sardonic little smile which was his habitual expression has been supplanted by a fixed expression of sadness. Except for one or two special circumstances, which will be related, he rarely speaks, even when the rules permit.

Loeb, on the other hand, while bearing abundant evidence of confinement, is almost as prone to laugh as ever, and still is fond of chaff when the occasion allows it. His face has become hardened rather than thin. It is in his mental attitude that the greatest change is to be observed.

Not Together in Prison

Through force of habit and association, one invariably thinks and speaks of Loeb and Leopold together. To realize their present situation, however, it should always be remembered that they are not together in prison. They see each other an average of about once a week, and then only at a distance. They have talked together only four times since their incarceration began. They are living their prison lives apart and working out their spiritual problems totally independent of each other. This was the best arrangement, in the judgment of prison officials, and in that judgment most people will quickly concur. It is hardly necessary to point out that their earlier association did not produce happy results, either for themselves or society.

Members of their immediate families can visit them once a month, and their attorneys have the right to confer with them at similar intervals. Clarence Darrow, their chief counsel, has visited them twice here—not, as he explained, because there was anything to "confer" about, but simply to cheer them up. All visits with prisoners take place in a special room. A guard is present, and all conversation must be loud enough for him to hear. If anything unusual is said, the guard reports it to the Warden. The prisoner sits on one side of a wide table and the visitor on the other. Their feet are separated under the table by a solid partition built up from the floor.

The only way in which a reporter can see Loeb and Leopold is by making a general inspection tour of the prison workshops. If he recognizes them he may say "Howdy-do" as he passes, but there can be no conversation. Save in rare and specified instances, prisoners are never permitted to speak for publication. In fact, they cannot speak to any outsiders, except family and lawyers. Being in the penitentiary means considerably more than merely being shut up.

Have Been Model Prisoners

Loeb and Leopold have been model prisoners. Not a single demerit mark of any sort has been recorded against them. Indeed, they have made high grades under the finer shades of classification by which prisoners' industry, efficiency and earnestness of purpose are graded by the prison staff.

The ironic fact must be recorded that the heat of popular opinion against them actually has prevented them from receiving the mild privileges which, under the prison rules, their conduct has earned. It seems strange to suggest that Loeb and Leopold might have a just grievance against the people of Illinois. Seldom have individuals sinned so shockingly, so deliberately and so wantonly against society. It is hard to think of a punishment which could be considered too severe for them.

Joliet, however, like nearly all large penitentiaries, has a very definite system of prison discipline. Here it is known as "the progressive merit system." Under this system the prisoner may, by his conduct, earn certain minor privileges which serve somewhat to break the terrible monotony of the prison life. And the cold fact is that Leopold and Loeb have earned some of these privileges, but have been prevented by popular clamor from receiving them.

No Privileges for Them

It is a discrimination which the prison officials freely admit, but which they profess themselves powerless to avoid. The public who will say the prisoners have only the brutality and wantonness of their crime to blame for this situation. The question is whether or not a sovereign State can afford officially to take such an attitude.

At any rate, the facts are that Loeb and Leopold today are living exactly the same lives they lived their first day in the prison. Leopold weaves reed chairs, Loeb makes kitchen chairs. It is purely manual labor, requiring no skill. There is nothing whatever interesting about it. This total absence of anything interesting in their work is the only subject about which the youths have expressed any complaint. They spend their nights in the 7x4-foot cells.

Makes Friend of Priest

There is interesting work to be done in the prison. The classification and study of statistics concerning the inmates themselves, to be used as a basis for scientific studies in penology and criminology, is a task for which their fine education particularly fits Loeb and Leopold, particularly the latter, with his singularly studious mind. It is work which needs to be done, and, by common consent, no in-simply will not stand for any form of leniency in the cases of these two prisoners, regardless of whether they have earned it or not, and until the intensity of this feeling is softened by time, the prison staff can do nothing about it.

One attempt was sufficient, and it is not likely soon to be repeated. Two months after they entered, in conformity with the rules pertaining to the conduct, character and capacity demonstrated by inmates, Warden John L. Whitman made Leopold an instructor in the prison night school, devoting two hours a night to the teaching of reading, writing and spelling, and planned to give Loeb a class in arithmetic.

Their daily tasks in the chair factory were not lightened in any particular. They kept the same hours, occupied the same cells and observed the same discipline. The new job was simply added work, which amounted, of course, to a slight but welcome diversion of the routine. Only those who have witnessed it can appreciate how deadly that routine is.

Immediately, however, there was a tempest of protest from all over the State. Newspaper stories went out that Loeb and Leopold had been "made members of the prison faculty." One rural editor denounced it as "the greatest travesty on justice in the history of Illinois." Wise crackers wagged their heads and said it was what they had expected. A few days later Warden Whitman received instructions from the State Department of Public Welfare to deprive Leopold of this privilege immediately, and to rescind the order affecting Loeb.

Thus, curiously enough, Warden Whitman finds himself compelled against his will to break his own rules, and prevented from living up to his promise, given to Loeb and Leopold the day after they arrived, that prison life would be "exactly what they made it."

To be sure, there will be plenty of people

mate of the prison is better fitted for it than Leopold. The Warden does not dare assign him to it, for fear of the public reaction.

A friend of Leopold's family, who has visited the prisoners here, was asked by the writer what aspect of prison life seemed to bear most heavily on Leopold, and he replied instantly that it was the absence of interesting work and study. He deeply misses the opportunity to frequent the reference libraries in which, prior to his sally into kidnaping and murder, he spent much time. Well, this always was a queer case, baffling, and contrary to most human experience.

Leopold's chief and, aside from his reading, virtually only diversion, consists in long conversations with the Rev. Father Leo Kalmer. Catholic chaplain of the prison. Father Kalmer is a man of wide education, and it is on the basis of their common erudition that this strange association rests. Together they discuss the origins of religion, and dispute its values. Leopold is an atheist, and there has been no wavering in his unbelief, but he has a wide knowledge of religious history. Aside from his reading, which occupies three hours every night, these philosophical debates with the priest comprise the only experience which seems to lighten the burden of his imprisonment.

It will be recalled that alienists who testified at the trial of Loeb and Leopold declared that the power and scope of Leopold's mentality were unequaled by any case of which there was scientific record. His intellectual capacity, they said, bordered closely on genius—which, no doubt, is the explanation of his prison privations and preferences.

Loeb, who during his trial was pretty much of a "kid," still is. But the almost inexplicable attitude of unconcern which he maintained before and during his trial toward the sufferers from his act has melted. He had not been here long before his father died, an event undoubtedly hastened by his son's crime and its consequences. Loeb was hard hit by his father's death and by the knowledge that he had precipitated it. Since then his every expression of concern has been for his mother.

Wants to Comfort Mother

Prison officials say that he apparently has no desire except to do what he can to lighten his mother's grief. They say that even his good conduct in the prison seems largely inspired by the fact that it will comfort her. Soon after he came in, he wrote:

Mother, you remember how I always wanted to sop my bread in my gravy at home and wasn't allowed to because it wasn't considered good table manners? Well, we have plenty of gravy here, and I can sop my bread in it all I want to, and nobody minds.

It was expected by many that the two prisoners would have a hard time at the hands of other prisoners. There was an undoubted hostility toward them on the part of the prison population when they arrived, because of their wealth, breeding, education and the feeling that money and influence had saved them from hanging. It was very evident on their first morning at chapel.

Now, however, they are quite popular. They have never taken on airs, no effort has been made to obtain any special consideration for them and they have never complained of their lot. In this connection an unusual incident is related.

The prison fare is substantial but not dainty. In particular, the coffee is by common consent very, very poor coffee. Prisoners complain of it constantly. There is no cream to dull the edge of its bitterness. The first time that Loeb and Leopold came to mess they were closely watched by other prisoners, who expected they might turn up noses at the coarse fare. Loeb and Leopold always were blessed with hearty appetites, and the first thing Loeb did was to drain off a cup of the bitter black coffee and ask for more. Each of them drank three cups of it at that meal and guards reported that the whole attitude of the prisoners at the table seemed to change.

Two days later a prisoner voluntarily told them how they could get their ill-fitting uniforms and shoes exchanged for sizes that came nearer to their own, and others furnished similar bits of helping advice.

No After-Dinner Speeches

The man who shirks and whines in the penitentiary has a hard time. He must stand the gaff. It must be said that these soft-boiled millionaires' sons have done so. So far as the prison population is concerned, they have won their place.

Jewish prisoners, of whom there are 59 here, were permitted to observe the Feast of the Passover a month ago, and Loeb and Leopold were included, although they profess no religious faith. On this occasion these prisoners were permitted to have a supper, at which several of them made short talks, the Warden being invited. Because of his superior intellect and education, the others urged Leopold to say something at the supper. He promptly vetoed the suggestion.

"Next day," he said, "the Chicago papers would say we were having banquets down here, and that I was making after-dinner speeches. The Warden would have to make explanations, and the reaction would be bad. All of you might suffer on my account. It won't do." The Leopold of a year ago would have scorned the suggestion that he regulate his conduct out of consideration for others.

Not long ago a reporter who had covered the trial was being shown through the prison shops. Recognizing him, Loeb made a sweeping bow, and then gestured derisively at a gay necktie which the reporter wore, but, the newspaper man reported, there seemed something lacking in the humor of it. Somehow it was transparent and pathetic, like a dying man whistling to keep up his courage.

There is no disposition in this narrative to enlist sympathy for Loeb and Leopold. They are merely two among many "lifers" here. This is merely an account of how they have reacted to prison life, written because of the tremendous public interest in their individual case. Life in a penitentiary is an awful thing—how awful, few realize. Loeb and Leopold committed an awful crime. They are receiving their punishment. There is no disposition anywhere to lighten or shorten that punishment. There is no such disposition on the part of their families. Their attorneys have told them they are here for life. To look forward to the hopeless monotony of the workshop, the mess hall and the cell, to understand that never again can they do anything except what is laid down by others, to realize that life, as most of us know and enjoy it, is forever ended for them—that is the bitter lesson they have been learning for 240 dragging days and sodden nights. And the iron has begun to sink into their souls.

Who Killed "Doc" Dillon?

the phone; in fact, he said, he did not know the doctor.

Mrs. Estelle Hammel, 30 years old and comely, the second wife of Rudolph Hammel, questioned, was asked whether she had ever telephoned to Dillon from the Cabany number. She first denied, being loath to have her name involved in the investigation of a murder, then admitted phoning Dillon. It developed she had known him three years.

The Hammels, both husband and wife, accompanied the police to the Page District Police Station the next day and discussed the case for several hours. It developed that Mrs. Hammel had become a patient of Dr. Dillon's on the recommendation of a woman relative.

The Hammels had spent Thursday evening at home with Hammel's mother, who was visiting them. They had listened to the radio and had retired at their usual hour. Here the police interest in the Hammels as possible aids in the solution of the Dillon mystery ceased.

Then the police, delving into phone call records at the Fairmont discovered that several women had called the Doctor during the week before the murder. Miss Addis had called him. A woman from the Cabany number had called him. Another woman had telephoned the hotel on the morning the Doctor's body was found, but she proved to be a patient.

There the investigation halted while detectives find more women who have known Dr. Dillon.

When it came to police theorizing about the case the first question which arose was whether Dillon had been murdered where he fell or killed elsewhere and his body taken to Francis Field. Heavy footprints in parallel lines, as of two men walking side by side carrying a burden, were found in the sand of a tackling-dummy pit which is just in front of the west gate to the field. This and the fact that there were no signs of a struggle in the cinders where the body lay gave some support to the theory of another murder scene.

But police pointed out that shots were heard; the body lay in a most unlikely spot if it were true that the murder or murderers had carried it into the field; sounds of quarreling indicated that Dr. Dillon had met his enemy or enemies at the field. The body, if it had been carried onto the field, was carried 300 yards to an open spot near lights while it might easily have been disposed of in the weeds near Pennsylvania avenue. Therefore, the police accepted as fact that the murder occurred where Dr. Dillon was found.

That Dillon was lured to Francis Field by the voice on the telephone wire the evening of the murder; that he left the Fairmont Hotel with a definite purpose was the next hypothesis advanced from police sources.

Was it a man's voice or a woman's?

Here the theories diverged. They diverged because of the obvious unreliability of the telephone operator's memory, owing to the multiplicity of calls she had handled. Because of this mass of business there was confusion in her mind as to some of the calls. Though she remembered the substance of conversations she was vague as to the speakers or from where they had called. The police do accept it as a fact that there were telephone conversations between Dr. Dillon and someone else, in which there were threats of death, and also that there were calls from one or more persons on the evening of the murder, but that these calls came from an uncertain source.

Some of the detectives were of the opinion that the doctor's pugnacious nature moved him to arraige a showdown with a man who called him Thursday night. They proposed that Dr. Dillon left the Fairmont having made an appointment to meet this man at Francis Field, there to settle their differences over a woman verbally or fistically. The reconstruc-

HALL FOR UNUSUAL MUSIC AT WASHINGTON

Building Under Construction Gift of Mrs. Frederic Coolidge to Congress.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—A single story structure where concerts featuring the unusual in music are to be given, is rising in the courtyard of the famed Congressional Library. The rectangular building, the gift to Congress of Mrs. Frederic Shurtliff Coolidge of Pittsfield, Mass., will seat 511 persons. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, is of the opinion that the programs from the auditorium will be broadcast by radio. Music now on the shelves of the Congressional Library for reference purposes will be included in the programs. The conductor will have 1,000,000 pieces from which to select.

$25,000 Annual Endowment.

The auditorium is being erected under the supervision of David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, from designs by Charles A. Platt of New York, consulting architect. Mrs. Coolidge's original gift was $60,000, but she added an additional $30,000 and provided an endowment of $25,000 annually. Under her plan, prizes will be awarded for original compositions performed in public for the first time at concerts given under the auspices of the Library of Congress.

Mrs. Coolidge set forth her conception of the mission of the auditorium she presented in a letter, in which she said:

Precedent to Musical Quality.

"I have wished to make possible, through the Library of Congress, the composition and performance of music in ways which might otherwise be considered too unique or too expensive to be ordinarily undertaken. Not this alone, of course, nor with a view to extravagance for its own sake; but as an occasional possibility of giving precedence to considerations of quality over those of quantity; to artistic rather than to economic values; and to opportunity rather than to experiment.

"For this reason, I believe that advice should be sought from broadminded and disinterested musicians, whether or not official—whether or not professional."

WHO KILLED "DOC" DILLON?—CAREER IS SEARCHED FOR ANSWER

tion of the crime ran as follows:

Dr. Dillon, who did not own an automobile, rode out on street car or bus or in a taxicab to some point near the field. The man he was to meet drove to Pennsylvania avenue and Forsythe boulevard in his machine. They met and started to talk it over. One of them suggested that they walk into Francis Field. Arguing bitterly, they sauntered around the cinder track to the point by the gymnasium. Here the murderer, suddenly enraged, or come to the point of his premeditated plot, drew his revolver and killed Dillon.

Did He Meet a Woman?

Opponents of this theory argue that Dr. Dillon would not have been foolhardy enough to have gone to such a spot to meet a man who had threatened to kill him. They pointed out that two men in blood heat of a quarrel would not have walked so far before reaching the open break. If the Doctor had meant a showdown with his enemy he would have arranged it with witnesses present to insure fairness in the battle.

These theorists believed Dr. Dillon went to Francis Field to meet a woman. They contended that such a secluded spot was very well for a rendezvous with a woman, but the doctor would not have wanted to meet an angry man there. Their supposition was stated in this manner:

A woman called the doctor that night. They arranged a meeting at Francis Field. A man trailed Dr. Dillon and her. As the lovers strolled around the track the man confronted them and made good his threat. He killed Dr. Dillon and forced the woman to flee the scene with him.

There were still other theories. One which the police have worked on is that a woman killed Dillon.

The angle at which the fatal shot was fired, with the bullet ranging upward, would seem to indicate that a person much shorter than Dillon did the shooting. If this hypothesis it was reasonable to presume that Dillon went to the field to meet one of his sweethearts, and that another of his sweethearts followed him. The second woman, in a jealous rage killed the philanderer. This theory was weakened by the logical assumption that the first woman would have gone at once to the police with her story.

Another theory along this line of reasoning was that the doctor met a woman by appointment on Francis Field and that she killed him because of infidelity to her or because she had tired of him.

When the love angle was passed by for suppositions of a bootlegging affair or an illegal practice contretemps the case went into endless ramifications. Police theorists abandoned these last-mentioned positions early in the case. "A woman was at the bottom of it," they insisted.

It was suggested that the doctor might have been slain by some petty blackmailer among his gangster patients. Police were reminded that "Doc" Dillon would have been likely prey for a man who knew his professional misdeeds and was resolved to profit by them. Did he go that night to meet such a man? Did he quarrel with him and did the blackmailer shoot him? No, said police theories, this was not a fruitful avenue of inquiry. It counted the woman out and they were sure that in some way a woman figured in the murder.

But what woman? The doctor was a squire of dames. Who among the doctor's lady friends? There were so many.

What husband or what brother or what sweetheart stepped in that April evening and sent him crashing down behind the 100-yard line on Francis Field?

Thus have speculations and hypotheses run through the minds of city and county detectives working on the case, thus far, and only thus far had progress been made to ward a solution when this edition of the True Life Section went to press.

Historical Papers Brought From Washington Cellar

Priceless Documents Were Interned During War to Make Room for Enlarged Staffs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Treasures of the greatest sentimental, historical and monetary value are being brought to light from the sub-basement of the State Department, where they were relegated during the war to make room in the State, War and Navy Building for the enlarged staff. These treasures are described by Gerhard Gade, diplomatic secretary of the State Department, in the current number of the American Foreign Service Journal.

"There are documents encased in tooled leather, velvet, silk, bamboo, lacquer, gold brocade, and even ivory," Mr. Gade writes.

"One of the most interesting agreements to an American is the so-called Wayne Treaty between the United States and various tribes of Indians, signed by George Washington in 1795.

"There is the convention ceding Louisiana and the treaty marking the close of the American Revolution. There is the evidence presented in the Northwest and Northeast boundary disputes, including many age-mellowed charts and note books of explorers.

Original U. S. Laws.

"Bound volumes contain the original laws of the United States, signed by the Presidents. The leather bindings have rotted away, but the tough parchment documents are, fortunately, in good condition. There are also all the original pocketed laws, records of the presidential elections, executive orders and proclamations, including the Emancipation Proclamation, signed by Lincoln and countersigned by Seward.

"For one Manila package alone the Department of State has offered half a million dollars. It contains the original ratifications by the various states of the Constitution.

"Other items are a copy of the famous Nurenberg Chronicle, published in 1493, gift swords from Japan and Siam, an ebony box inlaid with gold, a Chinese ceremonial robe, four Revolutionary daguerrotypes which have not yet been identified, a plan for an airship (in Russian) dated 1846, the letter from the Emperor fo China accrediting Anson Burlingame as his Minister to the United States, an address from the inhabitants of Birmingham to his excellency, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, expressing sympathy with his efforts to free the negroes, a stone from the great wall of China, and the 'royal whale's tooth.'

The Whale's Tooth.

"The whale's tooth is probably the most curious item. Tradition among the Fijians gave to it a marvelous age as an heirloom in their royal family, a gift from the mythological God of Good and Evil, Delgai, who was supposed to inhabit an immense cave in the interior of the largest island.

"King Thakobam, the last of the Fiji Kings, sent it in 1870 and his most precious treasure to President Grant by way of an earnest of his desire to negotiate a treaty of friendship with the United States in a vain effort to maintain his country in its independence.

"A number of the most valuable articles have already been transferred to places of safe keeping by executive order."

COMPULSORY VOTING FAILS

Argentine Courts Too Busy to Try Delinquent Voters.

Correspondence of Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

BUENOS AIRES, May 9.—Compulsory voting does not seem to have solved the problems of bad government in Argentina. For several years this country has had compulsory voting laws, but the idea does not seem to fit the Latin temperament. After every election it is found that the percentage of blank ballots cast is very high.

Though the law provides for fines of 10 pesos for citizens who do not vote, thousands fail to vote every election in Buenos Aires. But the courts are so behind in their regular calendars that the authorities do not begin action against the vote shirkers. In recent elections in the province of Cordoba there were five parties in the field, but the number of blank ballots was larger than the numbers cast for two of the candidates.

May 18 "World Goodwill Day."

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Children throughout the world are being urged by the world conference of educators to observe on May 18, the twenty-sixth anniversary of the opening of the first Hague conference on world peace, as "World Goodwill Day." A call for the Sunday school children of America to join in the movement on Sunday, May 17, has been issued by Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches.

Wash Away Pounds of Fat Double Chins and Years of Age with La-Mar Reducing Soap

Shrinks the Skin as it Dissolves the Fat

The new discovery, La-Mar reducing soap, brings quick and amazing results. No dieting, no exercising, nothing to take internally. Reduce any part of the body at will without affecting any other part. La-Mar acts like magic on double chin, big abdomen, ugly, shapeless ankles, wrists and arms, large hips or breasts, or on superfluous fat on any part of the body or all over it. It is easy and pleasant to use and absolutely harmless—cleansing, cooling, soothing and effective. La Mar Reducing Soap is sold on a money-back guarantee at all good drug and department stores the country over, or direct to you by prepaid parcel post, if your dealer cannot supply you. Price 50c a cake or three cakes for $1.00; one to three cakes usually accomplish its purpose. You will be surprised at results.

Assassination Plot in Japan.

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1925.)

(Copyright, 1923.)

TOKIO, May 9.—Patriotism which has its climax in political assassination, illustrated throughout the history of Japan and China, has appeared again, advocated now by Ryohei Uchida. Uchida is prominent among the reactionary politicians who have been baffled and will be tried after procurators have investigated charges of a plot to assassinate the Premier and Cabinet members. Two others, also influential, have been similarly imprisoned. Uchida is the leader of the "Conservative patriots" who opposed universal manhood suffrage because they believed it would weaken family representation at the polls solely by the head of the family group. The police say many others are involved in the alleged plot, including one M. Toyoma, known as the "Robin Hood" of Japan.

MUSSOLINI'S AID 'LEADING WILD MAN'

Farinacci Proposed Extreme Means to Restore Order After Assassinations.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1925.)

ROME, Italy, April 28.—Roberto Farinacci, general secretary of the Fascist party and, after Mussolini, most powerful man in the movement, has at least one political talent—that of getting himself talked about. His proposed methods of restoring normality, following three recent assassinations of Facist militiamen, are the following:

Death penalty for the assassins (this has never existed under the Italian kingdom).

Prison for all persons suspected of "subversion"—a word used by the Fascisti to include everything from plotting red revolution to complaining of the high cost of living.

Exile for Opposition.

Exile for opposition leaders, including Senator Albertini, publisher of the independent Corriere della Sera; Amendola, leader of the Democratic party; Turati, leader of the Moderate Socialist party, and Donati, editor of the Populist newspaper, Il Popolo.

Immediate arrest of the leaders of the "Aventine" (the Deputies who have boycotted Parliament since the Matteotti murder) under accusation of criminal conspiracy against the Powers of the state.

Proposals such as these have earned for Farinacci the title of "leader of the wild men." But there are Italians who say that the ex-boss of Cremona is a far-sighted politician who breathes fire and brimstone in order to let off steam. If the wild men talk violence to their hearts' content they are less likely to do violence. Such, at least, is the theory.

Over 5000 Socialists Slain.

Assassinations of Fascisti in the small towns have been a recurrent and sinister concomitant of the suppressed political excitement which has persisted ever since the Matteotti murder. But they are probably not the result of systematic political plots as the Fascisti like to suggest, but acts of personal vengeance. The Fascisti, according to their own statements, killed between 5000 and 10,000 Socialists and syndicalists during their "cleaning-up" campaign. Such killings in Italy are always regarded as personal, not political. According to the ancient law of the vendetta, the relatives of the slain man are in duty bound to kill the slayer. In the small towns Fascisti who are known to have killed one or half a dozen persons during "punitive expeditions" walk about the streets in constant danger of their lives.

One of the perils in the present situation is that if the Mussolini regime should ever seem to waver, thousands of suppressed vendettas might flare up in acts of bloody vengeance, which would provoke equally bloody retaliation. It is partly this fear which persuades many moderate anti-Fascists to prefer the continuance of the present regime to any sudden change.

Hawaiian Sugar Records Broken.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, May 9.—All sugar records for the Hawaiian Islands—production, manufacture and shipment—have been surpassed this year, the Sugar Factors Co., Limited, declares in its May business statement. The 1925 crop is estimated in the statement at 725,000 tons.

K. OF C. MAKE $40,000 PROFIT BY SALE OF LOT

Get $70,000 for Lindell and Sarah Corner Bought Two Years Ago for $30,000.

BREAKS RECORD FOR PROFIT ON LINDELL

Purchasers Will Erect Filling Station; Society Acquired Land as Site for New Building.

By Berry Moore.

Two years ago the Knights of Columbus with John S. Leahy, attorney, as their guiding genius purchased the northeast corner of Lindell boulevard and Sarah street for $20,000. Yesterday they sold it for $70,000 to parties who will build a filling station, breaking all records of profit-taking on the boulevard.

The purchase embraces approximately an acre with a frontage on Lindell of 150 feet and a depth on Sarah street of 308 feet, and is one of the largest vacant lots on this section of Lindell boulevard. The price paid is on a basis of $466 a foot for the Lindell boulevard frontage of 150 feet, but the extensive depth of the lot doubtless was taken into consideration by the purchasers in determining the price to be paid.

The Knights of Columbus purchased the site for a 10-story structure to cost $1,250,000, through W. R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., representing the Collins Realty Co., the holding corporation of the Peter Lindell estate, which at that time owned the site.

Leahy confirmed the sale but declined to disclose the identity of the purchasers. He stated that the Knights of Columbus had no other site under consideration at this time for the proposed new building. The organization's present building at 3549 Olive street is inadequate and was to have been sold on completion of the proposed building.

Another notable sale on Lindell boulevard was that of 100 by 200 feet on the north side of the thoroughfare between Taylor and Euclid avenues, which was acquired by John Craven from the heirs of Hugh Fox of Philadelphia through the Franciscus Realty Co. The price paid was not disclosed. Craven, it is understood plans to erect a large building. The site was formerly occupied by the Fox residence.

Attention was directed to the broad favor in which St. Louis real estate is held, yesterday, when Claude Fooshe, general life agent for the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, purchased the block of ground bounded by Biddle, O'Fallon, Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets, with the exception of 72 by 102 feet on Biddle street.

The deal was made by the Franciscus Realty Co., through James M. Franciscus, local loan correspondent of the Prudential company. The amount involved was not announced. The site is occupied by the J. H. Heydt Bakery Co., under a 40-year lease at a substantial rental, thus constituting one of the strongest investments in this part of the city. It belonged to the estate of the late Maj. Biddle of Philadelphia.

Another Out-of-Town Deal.

Another sale through the Franciscus Realty Co. was that of 1222-24 North Ninth street for Misses Elizabeth N. and Meta Vandervoort of Philadelphia, to Angelica Derosa. The purchase consists of an old building with lot 34 by 125 feet.

Other noteworthy transactions reflected the diversified character of the demand included those of the northwest corner of Sixth and Walnut streets and 109 North Eighth street.

The Sixth street corner, 50 by 125 feet, improved with stores and a 40-room hotel and owned by Dr. Wade Hampton Nash of the Commercial Building, was purchased by the Ben Altheimes & Bro. Realty Co., for a client whose name is withheld. The consideration was not disclosed.

The Eighth street holding, owned by Mrs. E. T. Moore, and consisting of a three-story building with a lot 21 by 127 feet, was acquired by Frank Dubinsky through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, represented by Roy J. Nobel.

Owns Nearby Property.

The Ivory Realty Co., of which Dubinsky is president, owns the Lafayette Hotel at the northwest corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, acquired several years ago as an investment, through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust.

As the site for a store for Wellston, the S. S. Kresge Co. has taken a 99-year lease of the northeast corner of Hodiamont and Easton avenues, owned by the Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Co. Vernon Clark, industrial realtor of East St. Louis, represented the Polar Wave company, and Samuel Bowman acted for the Kresge company. Plans for the new building are going forward.

Final Papers Executed.

Final papers have been executed in the sale of the southwest corner of Washington boulevard and Spring avenue to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. through the Mercantile Trust Co. The site was acquired for a branch exchange as was told exclusively in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

The site has a frontage of 91 feet on Washington and 233 feet on Spring and is occupied by 13 old residential structures. The price paid was $100,000, or more than $1000 a foot for the Washington boulevard frontage.

The grantor in the transaction was the D. F. Kaime estate, which was represented by the Gerling Realty Co. and B. F. Gray.

Total sales of the Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co. for the month of April aggregated more than $500,000, according to C. E. Craven, sales manager. They included holdings in both the city and county, several embracing large holdings in these areas.

42-ACRE PROPERTY ON MANCHESTER ROAD SOLD

Kent Jarvis reports closing the sale of 42 acres on the south side of Manchester road, at Des Peres, St. Louis County, for the account of the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and Samuel W. Fordyce Jr., executors of the estate of Elizabeth Waddingham, to a client. This property fronts about one-half mile on Manchester road.

This is one of the largest county real estate deals closed during the past week. The purchaser has also acquired about 50 acres adjoining this property on the south, making a total of about 90 acres. Plans for development of this property are not yet decided upon.

C. M. M'DONALD ELECTED SAVINGS TRUST DIRECTOR

At the annual election of officers of the Savings Trust Co. Wednesday, C. M. McDonald, former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, was elected a director. Sam L. Wimer, a member of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, and Dr. M. J. Seelig were also elected directors.

The officers of the Savings Trust Co. are Henry Carter, president; John J. Dowling, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, vice president, and A. W. Alexander, treasurer.

House under construction on Moorelands drive for Jesse T. Friday—Saum, architects.

A. H. HANDLAN BUYS LARGE SITE ON FIRST STREET

John B. Krieger of the John B. Krieger Real Estate Co. reports having sold to A. H. Handlan the large property of the Regina Flour Mills, which covers a half block of ground on First street, running from Plum street to Poplar street with a depth of 165 feet, comprising about 38,000 square feet, on which there is a five-story brick building and a two-story corrugated iron building. This property is served by two switches from the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The purchaser, A. H. Handlan, president of the Handlan-Buck Manufacturing Co., has not divulged the use for which he purchased this property and the price paid has not been stated; but the property was held at about $75,000.

The John B. Krieger Real Estate Co. represented Handlan and A. L. Lynch of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. represented the Regina Mills Co.

MODEL HAT COMPANY TAKES LONG LEASE ON NEW LOCATION

A long lease has been taken by the Model Hat Co. on the fourth floor in the eight-story building at 1128 Washington avenue. This is one of the transactions of the Mullin-Walters Realty Co. The millinery firm expects to use this entire floor as a factory, office and salesroom after repairs and alterations are completed. This lease was made for the account of the Pickerill Rubber Co.

The Stanger Mercantile has taken a long term lease on the entire second floor and a portion of the first floor in the building at 1128 Washington avenue. They will use this entire space as a salesroom and office for the purpose of handling a general line of belt dry-goods.

RESIDENCE IN WASHINGTON TERRACE SOLD BY TERRY FIRM

Albert T. Terry & Co. and the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., co-agents, representing Aaron Fuller, report the sale of the residence at 32 Washington Terrace to Guy A. Thompson.

The residence is a double Colonial three-story structure. The lot is 100 by 195 feet. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will take possession of their new home in the near future.

APARTMENT HOUSE SOLD BY EPSTEIN

W. H. Hobbs Buys New 12-Family Building at 5633-39 Page Boulevard.

Stanley Epstein announces the sale of the newly completed 12-family apartment at 5633-39 Page boulevard, corner of Temple place and Page. The property was purchased by William H. Hobbs.

The exterior of the building is adorned with stone and terra cotta trim, and the individual apartments have 16-foot bedrooms and living rooms with concealed beds, built-in ironing boards, metal bathroom cabinets, etc.

Epstein sold the building for the account of the Marget Realty Co., the builders, who at the present time have in course of construction in various parts of the city 26 apartment and flat buildings, all of which have been placed under the management of Epstein.

RECENT SALES REPORTED BY BLUMENFELD-WISE CO.

The Blumenfeld-Wise Realty Co. reports the following sales: 5314-16-18 West Florissant, resale for F. Bernstein to Florence Gruber, three stores; 1522-24 Chouteau, four flats and one store, for Ely Sanders to Irl Rosenblum; 1826-30 Papin, six flats, for Morris Steinbaum to a client; 1311 South Broadway, three-story commercial building, for Ablert Co. to Grace Miller; 4045-47 De Tonty, four-family flat, for Albert Co. to Grace Miller; 50-foot vacant lot on Delmar, east of Hanley road, for Abe Lerner to Bertha Lieberman.

LOTS ARE BEING SOLD IN GRANITE CITY SUBDIVISIONS

Westmoor Place, a subdivision of Granite City, is being improved. The Gus M. Arendes Realty Co. is selling lots and homes there. This subdivision comprises approximately 117 acres.

REAL ESTATE MEN TO HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET MAY 21

The Committee on Entertainment of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, as appointed by the president and approved by the Board of Directors at a special meeting held on Thursday afternoon, May 7, is composed of Edward M. Thornhill, chairman; William Appel, P. C. Beynon, William E. Caulfield, Eugene W. Christy, Ray R. Dolan, Stanley Epstein, Nathaniel Glick, George F. H. Heffernan, Albert Lipp, C. M. McDonald, John J. Reardon, Charles Roeder, Fred D. Schnell, Frank J. Schramm, Clarence M. Turley and Will C. Wissmath.

This committee will have charge of the annual banquet of the Real Estate Exchange to be held Thursday evening, May 21, when the president and members of the Board of Directors, elected April 21, will be installed.

The officers of the exchange to be installed are John J. Dowling, president; William W. Butts, Joseph M. Darst, John W. Gibson, Chauncey P. Heath, Isaac A. Hedges and Wm. H. Proetz as members of the Board of Directors. Charles J. Daly, Julius S. Peydt Jr., Orman J. McCawley, William L. Protzmann, E. D. Ruth Jr. and Edward M. Thornhill are holdover directors, having been elected in 1924 for a term of two years.

MERCANTILE TRUST COMPANY SELLS SHELTON RESIDENCE

The Mercantile Trust Co. closed the sale last week for the account of Alfred J. Rivera to Catherine and Anna Corby of the premises at 5969 Page boulevard, a six-room residence. After repairs and alterations are completed the purchasers will occupy it as a home.

The same company reports the sale of 4069 Westminster place for the account of Mrs. A. L. D. Shelton to Ida Weinberg, who will improve the residence and erect several modern stores on the Sarah street front. This property had been in the Shelton family practically ever since Westminster place was put on the map. The purchaser was represented by the Harris & Weinberg Real Estate Co.

$100,000 IN SALES IN TWO WEEKS AT HOLLY HILLS

Much Activity in Purchase of Vacant Ground at Big Subdivison Reported by Federer Realty Co.

More than $100,000 worth of ground in Holly Hills has been sold during the past two weeks, according to the Federal Realty Co., agent for the subdivision.

In spite of the cool spring weather, prospective home builders have been out in force looking over the subdivision, whose beauty and progress of development have been a revelation to them, it is declared.

Holly Hills proper, comprising 130 acres, represents not only one of the largest subdivisions in St. Louis, but also one of the biggest engineering jobs in subdivision development. Particular stress has been put on securing excellent grades and drainages in this instance. More than 500,000 yards of clay have been removed, the work requiring almost one year's unceasing work on the part of two tractor outfits and 100 teams. This huge grading job is now virtually completed.

The installation of all sewers has been completed. Some of these are seven feet in diameter, connecting with the 15-foot Glaize Creek sewer, one of the largest in St. Louis. The city Water Department has finished the work of installing mains throughout the subdivision.

At present there are several hundred men and teams engaged in shaping the streets preparatory to pouring concrete, as well as in the setting of curbs and gutters and the laying of sidewalks.

The installation of conduits for the electric street lighting system, which will be completed as soon as street work is finished, is well under way.

The Federer Realty Co. announces that contracts with the Riley Contracting Co. and the Central Paving Co. call for final completion of work before Aug. 15. With a view to having the work completed earlier, the company is offering a liberal bonus to the contractors for every day that the work may be completed prior to that time. Thus the company believes that they will be able to present a complete subdivision in every detail on that day.

Approximately over 70 per cent of the property has been sold. Members of the Federer Realty Co. predict that before the completion of the improvements every lot will have been disposed of. Total sales to date aggregate $1,100,000.

In the next two weeks three new homes will be started by lot owners, each costing in excess of $20,000. From estimates gathered from lot purchasers, the company figures that nearly $500,000 of construction work will be started in the next 60 or 90 days.

15 LOTS IN DELMAR HEIGHTS SOLD DURING WEEK

Delmar Heights, an addition of 85 lots, at Delmar boulevard and the North and South road, is attracting the attention of both home seekers and investors. The tract is being marketed by the William J. Abbott Realty Co. of 806 Chestnut street.

A total of 15 lots in this plot was sold during the week at prices ranging from $28 to $40 a front foot. The addition fronts on the North and South road, Delmar boulevard, Gannon and Warder avenues. It lies on both sides of Delmar boulevard.

TESSON TRACT OF 60 ACRES SOLD, WILL BE SUDIVIDED

A notable sale of the week was that of the Ava P. Tesson property, comprising 60 acres of land on the north side of Denny road, overlooking the Meramec valley, and just opposite the golf links of the Sunset Country Club. It was acquired by the Fassen Realty & Investment Co., represented by the Haase Realty Co. The grantors were represented by John H. Moore, vice president of the Kirkwood Trust Co. This tract will be subdivided into high-class residential sites for which a survey is being made by the Reck Survey Co.

HARRY J. BLUMER LEASES SEVENTH STREET BUILDING

Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., representing Harry J. Blumer and the Federal Credit Clothing Co., arranged a sublease whereby Blumer will occupy the three story and basement building at 416 North Seventh street and conduct a delicatessen, bakery and lunch room similar to the one he now operates in the United Home Building at 209 North Seventh street.

The new store will be open about the end of May. Cook's office also leased the building at 5116 Locust street to the Meyer-Price Motor Co. for an automobile sales room and shop.

The second floor of the building at 1410 Pine street was leased to the Rhees Dental Laboratory, now located at 1400 Olive street.

Richmond Heights Office Opened.

S. H. Morton of S. H. Morton & Co., land dealers, has opened a branch office at 1402 Maryland boulevard, Richmond Heights, for the sale of Richmond Heights and suburban property.

VICTOR MOTORS CO. ACQUIRES BIG PLANT

Manufacturer of Busses Will Begin at Once in East Side Property.

The Victor Motors Co., manufacturers of motor trucks and busses, has acquired the properties of the East St. Louis Cotton Seed Oil Co. plant at Twenty-fourth street and McCausland boulevard in East St. Louis. R. Vernon Clark, industrial realtor, handled the transaction.

The value of the real estate and equipment involved together with improvements to be installed by the Victor company, is placed at $500,000.

The building is a one-story structure with saw-tooth roof of modern construction, measuring 567 by 105 feet and occupying a site 590 by 600 feet, located on both the Terminal and Southern Belt Lines, which allows for the company's contemplated expansion.

Guy Wilson, president of the Victor company, stated that work of installation would be begun forthwith. Besides its present complete line of commercial vehicles, ranging from light delivery speed-trucks to powerful, heavy-duty trucks, the additional manufacturing facilities provided in this new property will enable the Victor company to begin the manufacture of busses at once. Its plan of bus manufacture includes the three sizes covering all present demands. This will be the only plant of its kind in Southern Illinois, Clark stated.

The Victor company, which has been established in St. Louis for two years, has had a steady growth. Its St. Louis retail sales and service department is at Twenty-eighth and Locust streets, where it will remain.

V. George Harper, export sales manager of the Victor concern, stated that the company was already doing business in five foreign countries, including Germany, Greece and New Zealand, two large orders having been received from the latter country during the past few days.

The assembly line in the main manufacturing plant, according to Sherman H. Dorsey, vice president and chief engineer of the Victor company, will be one of the most modern in the country, allowing a production of 50 vehicles a day in the earlier stages of operation, but later to be greatly increased. There are two distinct compartments to the structure in addition to that of the assembly plant—the planing mill, and the metal working plant, already equipped with the highest type of modern machinery.

WENZLICK COMPANY SELLS EIGHT BUNGALOWS AND FLATS

The Wenzlick Real Estate Co. reports the following sales for the week:

6411 Page avenue, single flat with 50 feet front. Sold for Dickens Real Estate Co. to F. W. Blank.

4811½ and 4815 Natural Bridge road, flats with 40 feet front. Sold for a client of the Chauncey Heath R. Co. to Walter Studt.

2653 Ann avenue, seven-room residence. Sold for H. H. Sims to August L. Tuck and wife.

2589-91 Farrar street, double three and three room flats. Sold for B. Levandowski to August Gerlach and wife.

4926 Maffitt avenue, six-room bungalow and sun parlor. Sold for A. A. Flickinger to B. F. Jostes.

5457 Neosho street, six-room bungalow. Sold for J. W. Robbins to a client of H. J. Schleper.

6296-98 Bartmer avenue, four-family flat. Sold for a client of B. A. Thompson to Mrs. Louisa Millerspaugh.

4642 Tennessee avenue, five-room bungalow. Sold for Mrs. A. Asburg to a client of Naert Realty Co.

MUCH INTEREST REPORTED IN PROPERTY IN MARS PLACE

The Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co. reports much interest in Mars place on the south side of Natural Bridge road, extending from Clara to Belt avenues, which has been placed on sale by that company. Sixty two and four family flat buildings are included in the offering in this addition, besides the lots, which are available at comparatively low prices and liberal terms to prospective builders.

The tract is in the heart of the industrial center of this section of the city, of which the Chevrolet plant of the General Motors Co., at Union avenue and Natural Bridge road, is the center. The houses have been erected with a view to expediting the sale of the lots.

A special force of salesmen will be on the premises today to aid prospective purchasers in their selections.

DAVIS PLACE

Examples of the modern two-family dwellings being erected in Davis Place. They permit of the same freedom of design as the single residence, the ordinary features of a duplex being concealed. The arrangements on the interior are equally attractive. The modern two-family dwelling has the appearance and the comforts of a single home.

—the Exclusive Section for Two-Family Dwellings

"IT IS a beautiful place. How I would enjoy living here." That is a common expression among the thousands who are visiting Davis Place, the new exclusive section for two-family dwellings in the West End.

Go out today, stand on Wydown Boulevard in the center of Davis Place, look toward Polo Drive on the north, Hanley Road to the east, Clayton Road to the south and North and South Road to the west. Get the full benefit of this panorama of lovely homes, rolling country, attractive landscape, and you too will fall in love with the home-building sites that stretch out before you.

The place where you would be proud to live is a good place for you to buy. Investors are going to make $2000, $4000, $6000 and $8000 profits on one, two, three or four lots in Davis Place in the next 12 to 18 months. People are buying from two to four lots each because they realize that in the expansion program now under way in St. Louis, Davis Place is the ideal location.

Locations for income-homes are limited. The modern two-family dwellings being built in Davis Place will make property in that section extremely valuable. They can be bought for all cash, half cash, or as low as $600 and $35 a month.

Buy 6% Real Estate Gold Bonds

Careful investors who have a practice of putting away each month high-class securities are turning more and more to First Mortgage 6% Real Estate Gold Bonds sold by the Davis Realty Company. They are obtainable in denominations of $50 and upwards, with maturities to suit the investor. The 6% Gold Bonds are secured by a deed of trust on a modern income two-family dwelling. The Davis Realty Company has not had a loss in 18 years on any deed of trust sold by them.

NEW DELMAR HEIGHTS

Delmar Avenue and North & South Road

7800 West on Delmar Avenue

Restricted to Residences

Lots 50x140

Sewer, Water, Gas and Electric

Sidewalks and Cinderized Streets

Prices $28.00 to $40.00 per Foot

At these prices, lots in New Delmar Heights are cheaper than other ground, without improvements, in the same neighborhood. For homes or for investments that will return handsome profits, we recommend these lots without reservation.

The inevitable increase in values in New Delmar Heights lots, which is sure to come within the next few months, makes investment in them particularly attractive to those who do not care to speculate with their savings.

We will sell you a lot on very easy terms and lend you the money to build your home. Select the lot you want—then see us.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

HIKER—Koch Hospital is about two miles from Jefferson Barracks along the river front.

BLUE EYES.—Bobbed hair for girls is still in fashion but it is impossible to predict how long it will remain so.

BEGONIA.—Shaws Garden is open to the public on week days from 8 in the morning until sundown, and on Sundays from 2 in the afternoon until sundown.

J. H. F.—Hair dressing parlors, as a rule, do not purchase real hair, unless it is unusually long and thick. However, you might be able to sell your hair to some small beauty parlor.

THANK YOU.—A woman should never speak to a man to whom she has not been introduced. As you attend the same church someone who knows both of you could introduce you.

REGULAR READER.—(1) A verb must always agree with its subject in number, so the sentence "The months of May, June and July are the busiest season" is correct, the "are" agreeing with the noun "months."

WIFE.—When wash silks may be cleaned by rubbing with stale bread crumbs, mixed with a little powdered blue. White silk and other light-colored dresses which have only been slightly soiled can be made fresh and clean again by rubbing with stale bread crumbs.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

ELECTION.—The law provides for transfer of elections officials.

DEFENSE.—There would be sufficient criminal intent in a case where the defendant shot at one man and killed another.

DOG POUND.—A license is necessary for the dog at all times and a muzzle at such times as the authorities may require.

SUNDAY VOTER.—(1) If there is no real estate involved, she and her son can change their names by simply using the new name.

OBLIGED.—Inquire at the Naturalization office on the Federal building Eighth and Olive streets, for full information regarding naturalization papers.

H. W. K.—(1) The official count of the last election was taken from a recheck of the tally sheets giving the total votes cast at the polling places. (2) The ballot boxes are not opened until a contest is actually filed and then by order of court.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

Q. R. M.—We do not give advice to persons under a physician's care.

MRS. A. B.—To stop the itch from which you suffer at night try rubbing dry sulphur on the affected parts.

DISGUSTED.—Your tonsils, or a collection of pus in your throat, could be the cause of your stomach ailments. It would be well to have a careful examination.

AL.—After two or three salvarsans the injections are supposed to be incapable of conveying the disease, but it is too serious a matter to take any chance.

EDITH.—Styes are caused by infection and resulting ones from astonishing the eye, so far as the most cleanliness should be observed a good antiseptic solutions should be used.

SICK.—Friction, combined with moisture in the form of perspiration, are the causes of the burning sensation. Thorough washing and rinsing of the parts, followed by careful drying and dusting with a good quality of talcum powder is usually sufficient. If anything more is required dab on and let dry a lotion of zinc oxide and calomine.

GLORIA.—Before varnishing or enameling wicker furniture it should be cleaned thoroughly either by scrubbing with soap and water, or by rubbing it with steel wool. White enamel can be purchased at any paint store. It should be thinned considerably before using.

GERTRUDE.—To preserve flowers, they should be dipped in melted paraffine which should be hot enough to maintain its fluidity. The flowers should be dipped one at a time, held by the

SALESMEN WANTED

WANTED—A SALESMAN WHO HAS NOT "RETIRED"

Some salesmen retire at 60, some at 50, some at 40 and some are without funds and with a beaten look in their eyes. They find themselves in a little salaried job and call it "retire." They forget their early ambitions to get somewhere once had something. They start out deliberately to seek Safety and a Sure Thing.

Then there is the other kind—the fellow who believes in his ability per cent. and thinks enough of himself to say so. He likes the idea of going into partnership with himself and capitalizing on his own ability. He knows that when the Other Fellow does his earnings.

If a Salesman thinks he is worth only a measly salary it is a cinch he is not worth more than that. BUT if he's hungry to earn $20,000 a year, and really asks that he be given the continuous opportunity to sell that has the earning possibilities to that end, who will be earning his own home and riding around in the limousine of these days and nothing and nobody can hold him back.

The first fellow is afraid of himself and afraid of anybody—position that doesn't spell S-A-F-E-T-Y. The second has confidence in his ability to sell and respect himself. Naturally he isn't afraid to hire him at exactly the same reasons, because he knows himself better than we know him.

The second fellow has confidence, courage, self-reliance, ability and he radiates those qualities so convincingly to us and he will convince the Prospect.

All that Boy will let us offer him is a liberal commission basis, the best Proposition in St. Louis to sell, thorough training, A1 Leads, Bonuses, and he will do the rest.

We have been in business many years. We are on a sane, substantial well-rated company. All of our salesmen are prosperous.

We can use anybody, they endorse us and profit by what we offer.

We can use and make real salesmen for this business—out of those experienced in vacuum cleaner, sewing machine and kindred lines. Also the men dissatisfied with a Selling Job on a commission basis.

If you are not afraid to tackle a man's job on a commission basis, willing to be shown, can learn, believed in St. Louis at least two years, and have the nerve to ask for and get your personal manager Monday or Tuesday and Wednesday, 10 AM to 3:30 PM. MAGRAY REALTY CO., 2004 Wainwright Bldg., 7th and Chestnut sts.

HOME OF WASHINGTON'S ONLY SISTER DEDICATED AS SHRINE

Pageant Depicting Pre-Revolutionary Days Marks Exercises at Fredericksburg, Va.

By the Associated Press.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 9.—A pageant depicting styles and customs of pre-revolutionary days today marked the dedication to the nation of "Kenmore," home of Betty Washington Lewis, only sister of George Washington. Descendants of her friends and neighbors participated.

The event marked the successful culmination of a three-years' campaign to save the historic mansion from destruction.

Built in 1752 by Col. Fielding Lewis as the home of his bride, the building finally was sold as a sacrifice to the Revolutionary cause.

Gets $100,000 Verdict for Arrest.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 9.—George E. Orr, Chicago broker, today was awarded $100,000 damages against Charles E. Havener, mine owner and promoter of Kansas City and New York, the judgment going by default when Havener failed to appear. Havener is alleged to have caused Orr's arrest in 1921 on a charge of obtaining in a fraudulent manner $100,000 worth of Colorado-Utah Mines Holding Co. stock. Orr was acquitted when arraigned on charges of embezzlement, confidence game, obtaining property by false pretenses, larceny by bailee and larceny.

$87,000 PAID ON ORAL DAM REPAIR CONTRACT

Hearing Reveals $37,000 Profit on Land Sold to East Side Levee Board.

The H. H. Hall Construction Co. of East St. Louis was paid $87,152.20 for repair work on a dam under an oral contract with the Board of Trustees of the East Side Levee and Sanitary District which went out of office last December, testimony at a hearing at Belleville yesterday before County Judge Weber disclosed. The hearing is being held by Judge Weber to determine whether he should approve the 1924 financial report of the Levee Board. If the facts disclosed at the hearing which was not completed yesterday, warrant such action, the case will me presented to a St. Clair County grand jury, Judge Weber has stated.

It was also shown at the hearing that John J. Pelley of Chicago, a vice president of the Illinois Central Railroad, sold a tract of land to the Levee Board for approximately $37,000 more than he paid for it 18 months before, and that the Hall Construction Co., of which G. Locke Tarlton, a former president of the Levee Board, is a heavy stockholder, and the East Side Construction Co. were given other oral contracts at prices which the Levee Board's chief engineer did not believe justifiable.

Judge Grills Witnesses.

Direct examination of the witnesses was made by P. K. Johnson, a Belleville attorney, appointed by Judge Weber to conduct the hearing. The Levee Board's attorney, John L. Flannigen, of East St. Louis and Chicago, cross-examined the witnesses and Judge Weber, on several occasions, grilled the witnesses.

Testimony as to the numerous contracts of the two construction companies was given by Elmer R. Rodenberg, chief engineer of the former Levee Board. Pelley and others testified to the land transaction.

Rodenberg testified that he reported to the Levee Board late in 1922 that repairs were needed on a concrete dam on Project No. 1 of the Levee Board in Madison County. He related thkat he was instructed by the board to hire a contractor to do the repair work, without advertising for bids.

Monthly Rental Paid.

"I asked President Baker who he wanted me to have do the work and he told me to get the Hall Construction Co.," Rodenberg testified. "I came to an oral agreement with the Hall Construction Co. by which we were to pay a monthly rental on equipment, and we were to pay them for the work on a basis of cost plus 15 per cent. The rental on the machinery was paid monthly regardless of whether any work was done."

Levee Board records showing that $63,814.18 of the total for the dam repair work was paid in the fiscal year 1924 were introduced at this point.

A claim of $8168.41, presented by the Hall Construction Co., in addition to its regular contract for work on a bridge over the southern portion of Project No. 12, the $8,000,000 "Baby Panama" drainage canal being constructed adjacent to East St. Louis and surrounding communities, was settled by the Levee Board for $3972.12 against his advice, Rodenberg testified.

The claim, he stated, was settled last November at the last meeting of the former Levee Board. The bridge was not finished until last Saturday and Rodenberg testified that he could not understand why the claim was presented six months in advance of completion of the bridge.

Contract Let for $80,000.

Judge Weber brought from the witness the statement that he estimated the cost of construction of the bridge at $65,000 and the contract was let for $80,000.

Several other oral contracts, on which more than $23,000 was paid the two contractors, were let in 1924 by the Levee Board to Hall Construction Co. and East Side Construction Co. without bids being taken upon the work, Rodenberg testified.

Pelley, the next witness, testified that he purchased 21.5 acres of land near Seventy-seventh street, just north of State street, in East St. Louis, in November, 1922, and sold the land to the Levee Board in July, 1924, at a profit to him of $30,005.14. He paid slightly more than $21,000 for the land and sold it for $58,737.70 to the Levee Board, he testified.

"I purchased the land for subdivision purposes and did not know at the time I bought it that it would have to be purchased later by the Levee Board for use in construction of its drainage canal," Pelley related.

Pelley said his attention was first called to the property by Earl Davenport, superintendent of special assessments for the City of East St. Louis. Davenport, he testified, completed the deal for him.

ment to the Court in which he said: "It has been insinuated here that I advised Pelley to buy this tract of land. Such an insinuation is false. I didn't know that he owned the land until the Levee Board opened negotiations with him for its purchase."

Pelley said all negotiations for the purchase of the land were made with President Baker. He testified that he and his wife were the only ones to share in th profit made on the deal.

Davenport followed Pelley to the witness stand and corroborated Pelley in his version of how the purchase by Pelley was made.

WIFE OF EAST ST. LOUIS COMMISSIONER ENDS LIFE

Mrs. Edna Chase Murray Drinks Poison—Was to Have Gone to Sanitarium.

Mrs. Edna Chase Murray, 42 years old, wife of M. Paul Murray, Commissioner of Finance and Accounts in the East St. Louis city government, ended her life by drinking poison at her home, 418 North Eleventh street, East St. Louis, Friday night, it became known yesterday. She died at St. Mary's Hospital at 11:50 Friday night.

Dr. J. G. Beykirch, who had treated Mrs. Murray for a nervous affliction, told reporters that plans had been made to remove her to a sanitarium yesterday. Going home Friday night, her husband found her in collapse on the floor of her bedroom. One daughter, Elizabeth, survives.

Em Dalton—Ex-Badman

Demands One Million Dollars

For Damages To His REPUTATION

"There's three of them gone," said Bob Dalton. "I can whip the whole damn town."

By Harry R Burke

THEY faced each other across the counsels' table in a Federal courtroom—the man who had made a reputation by shooting clay pigeons and the man who had won a reputation for killing men.

A million dollars was at stake. For Emmett Dalton, youngest and only surviving member of the Dalton gang of outlaws, had pleaded in Federal Court that his reputation had been damaged in that sum when Wilbur Fawcett, expert shot and millionaire Minneapolis publisher, had printed in one of Fawcett's publications a story recounting the exploits of the Dalton gang in the "Southwest country," about 30 years ago. The case came up for trial in Minneapolis last month. The story had been printed in 1922. It had been signed by one "Bob Dalton Jr."

When five desperate outlaws gave battle to the town of Coffeyville, Kan., on the morning of Oct. 5, 1892, the Dalton gang was all wiped out save one. That one, Emmett, youngest of the lot, might have escaped had he not tried to recover a dying brother. He fell wounded in hip and arm by a charge of buckshot, recovered and was tried and paid his penalty at law. Bob, leader of the gang; Gratton, eldest of the brothers; Bill Powers and Richard Broadwell, had been killed.

Now, with heavy, inscrutable face, Emmett Dalton fingered his wide sombrero as he sat in a baggy suit of blue across the attorneys' table from the aggressive, dapper publisher.

He had been damaged, his attorneys said, $1,000,000 worth because: Bob Dalton had no son. The same signed to the story cast opprobrium upon the plaintiff's brother.

Emmett Dalton had paid his debt to society by his long imprisonment and had maintained "a high code of honor even in his career of crime" and was entiled to live without being pointed out in public thus to scorn.

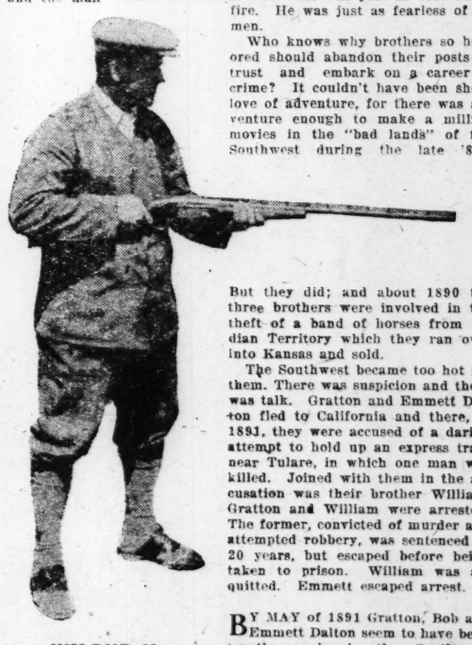
It took in that court an unprecedented time to get a jury. Almost every man called had heard of the Dalton gang. Almost every man had read something about these notorious outlaws, somewhere. Some of them had even read "Beyond the Law," a book purported to have been written by Emmett Dalton to give his version of the history of the Dalton gang.

A BLOODY history that was. The Daltons went "Beyond the Law" at first from "within the law." Their careers as expert horsemen, gunmen and killers began with service as Deputy United States Marshals in the Indian Territory. The eldest of the eight Dalton brothers, Frank, was a brave, honest and efficient officer and a terror to the "bad men" of the Territory in the late '80s. While rounding up horse thieves with his posse at Fort Smith, Ark., in 1887, he was killed in a hand-to-hand fight. Bob Dalton was with Frank in that fight.

After Frank's death the Government gave his brother, Gratton, Frank Dalton's job. Bob Dalton was made a Deputy United States Marshal for the courts at Fort Smith and at Wichita, Kan. He was cool under fire and a dead shot.

Into their posses, sometimes by Gratton, sometimes by Bob, the youngest of the three brothers was drafted. Emmett was just as deadly a shot as Bob. He was just as cool under fire. He was just as fearless of all men.

Who knows why brothers so honored should abandon their posts of trust and embark on a career of crime? It couldn't have been sheer love of adventure, for there was adventure enough to make a million movies in the "bad lands" of the Southwest during the late '80s.



WILBUR H. FAWCETT, millionaire publisher. He shoots only clay pigeons.

But they did; and about 1890 the three brothers were involved in the theft of a band of horses from Indian Territory which they ran over into Kansas and sold.

The Southwest became too hot for them. There was suspicion and there was talk. Gratton and Emmett Dalton fled to California and there, in 1891, they were accused of a daring attempt to hold up an express train near Tulare, in which one man was killed. Joined with them in the accusation was their brother William. Gratton and William were arrested. The former, convicted of murder and attempted robbery, was sentenced to 20 years, but escaped before being taken to prison. William was acquitted. Emmett escaped arrest.

BY MAY of 1891 Gratton, Bob and Emmett Dalton seem to have been together again in the Southwest. Three train robberies in a little over a month were laid to their skill and daring. Kansas, Oklahoma Territory and Indian Territory were terrorized. By that time the three Daltons had gathered followers, and the gang was made up of from five to eight men. At Adair, Indian Territory, they were recognized while battling with police and passengers in an attempt to rob an M., K. & T. train. They fled, scattered, and though for a year they were not heard from again, the country lived in fear of their raids. Then came Coffeyville.

In their youth the Dalton boys had lived in Montgomery County, Kan., where Coffeyville is situated. They determined now to hold up Coffeyville's two banks. Two trusted men they gathered to them from their former band. They were five against 3000. "What's the odds," said Bob Dalton, laughing, as they rode along the country road that took them into town just about 9 o'clock of a sunlit October morning.

Their plans were simple. Two would visit one bank and three another. They counted on their own preparedness and the villagers' surprise.

"Why," said Bob Dalton, encouraging his followers, "Jesse James in all his time never did a thing so big as this. In 15 minutes it will all be over, and we'll be gone."

His words were lost as he spurred on his horse. They were at the village square. They whirled at one corner, rode down half a block and turned into an alley close to the home of Judge Munn.

PEOPLE who had seen them riding with their Mexican saddles a-glitter with silver, with their hair-covered saddlebags and rolls of slickers tied behind, might have taken them for travelers. Broad-brimmed black hats helped hide their eyes. Bob wore a false mustache and goatee, and both were black. Emmett had a heavy and Gratton a scraggly beard. They recognized old friends, did the three Dalton boys come back to the old home town on a mission like this, with Winchester rifles hidden carefully under their coats.

With Powers and Broadwell, Gratton Dalton sauntered into the Condon & Co. Bank. Bob and Emmett rushed across the street to the First National. That quick movement arrested the attention of a Coffeyville merchant, who was wondering where he'd seen those faces before. Like a flash it came: "The Daltons." Through the window he saw Grat Dalton point a Winchester at the cashier's head in the Condon bank.

He rushed to the doorway. "The bank's being robbed. The bank's being robbed," he called. The cry was taken up along the street. The stores threw open their gun cases. Every man who would, was armed.

People rushed into the street. "What is it? Where are they?"

"The Dalton gang," was the answer. Some men went white. But determinedly they rushed on.

Shots fired through the windows of the banks were the Dalton gang's first warnings. The bullets missed the outlaws. They came near killing the bankers. Within the Daltons continued calmly at their work. They were gathering gold and silver and currency into the bags they had brought along. Altogether they seized $31,000. Then the two younger Daltons started to rush through the door of the First National. Twenty bullets were fired at them. Under that hail they turned and, locking the door, rushed out the back way.

Grat Dalton and his comrades gained the Main street while the posse watched for his brothers. They were sighted as they ran for the alley where their horses were.

In the alley was Lucius Baldwin, running toward the Daltons with a gun. "Drop it," cried Bob. "Hands up there, you." Baldwin heeded not and was stopped by a bullet. Bob also killed George Cubine, a shoe dealer, who came from his shop with rifle raised. Charles Brown, his shoemaker, picked up the gun. He, too, crumpled up with one of Bob Dalton's bullets.

"Go slow," said Bob. "I can whip the whole damned town. There's three of them gone. Get to the horses."

The Baseball Player's Life Is a Happy One

By J. Roy Stockton

George Sisler

WHAT sort of business is this baseball, wherein one man, by virtue of a contract of doubtful legality, can sell another man, a flesh-and-blood human being, and pocket the money?

What a business, wherein a man can't pay an employe what he pleases, without having the public howling at him and gathering in a mob in front of his box at the ball park and hooting him and jeering him and giving cheers for the ballplayer, for the Bill Jacobson!

But this baseball is everybody's business, and it has become a very big business, too. Two years ago the New York Yankees put $3,000,000 into a new stadium. A few years previous to that expenditure the same club made the business world, the whole country, in fact, gasp when it paid $125,000 for George Herman ("Babe") Ruth. But that price would not stagger the baseball world today.

No, baseball has grown until it takes more than a $100,000 price for a player to cause a ripple. Right here in St. Louis we have a player for whom the New York Nationals two years ago offered $300,000. Just that—three hundred thousand dollars for the services of Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals. Cogitate on that offer and the fact that the purchasing club also would assume the obligation of a salary of about $25,000 a year and you have an idea of the magnitude of the business of baseball.

Spread that $300,000 purchase price over 10 years—and that is conceding a long life of usefulness to Hornsby—and figure $25,000 a year for the player's salary and you have the club under the obligation of paying $55,000 a year for 10 years, or $550,000, for the services of one player.

There are not many business enterprises which could undertake to shoulder that "nut" of $55,000 a year, just for one player. And the club must have 25 or more players to carry on.

HORNSBY does not stand alone in the baseball world as a big money man. There are many of them. Three years ago George Sisler would have brought a top price. If he were to regain his former skill he again would rank with the most expensive. St. Louis would then have two players whose combined services, if sold on the open market, would bring nearly half a million dollars.

Walter Johnson would make the bidding high on the auction block. He is ageing now and old players are risky gambles. But if a team were near pennant strength and Johnson were available that club could well afford to pay an enormous price. If Johnson were a youth again he, too, would make a club dig deep to purchase him. Perhaps $100,000 would be the price, for pitchers do not seem to bring as much on the hoof as regular players. The pitcher can toil only one day in four at the most, whereas the regular player, the slugger, is a box-office attraction every day of the season.

PHILIP BALL, owner of the Browns says: "Jacobson was offered $6000 for working six months—that's $12,000 a year—that's 12 per cent on $100,000. Do you think Jacobson is worth $100,000?"

BRANCH RICKEY, manager of the Cardinals, says: "I was not even tempted by the New York offer of $300,000 for Hornsby. I think the owner who takes cash for a player is as culpable as the player who takes money for throwing a game."

That is why the Boston Americans turned Babe Ruth into an outfielder when he began to develop his home-run hitting ability. He was a fine pitcher, but as a pitcher he was able to perform only once in four or five days. As a pitcher he was not worth $100,000, but when he became an outfielder, a colorful player who was liable to knock the ball out of the park any day in the week, the fans swarmed through the turnstiles every day to see him, and the price that the New York club paid, $125,000, soon rolled back many times over into the coffers of the Yankees.

THE spectacular player is the high-priced player. For baseball is a show game. The public wants to see the spectacular. An old pitcher recently wrote an article about his experiences. He was a good pitcher, a man who gave his best every day and who won many games. But he did it quietly and as a matter of duty. He never fought umpires. He never showed fits of rage. He always was trying to retire each batter.

He wrote of other pitchers, not as good, perhaps, and certainly no better than he was, who used showman's tricks. He mentioned one who made it easy for batters to hit until the situation became tense. Every game he pitched was a thriller. Sometimes he lost games by making them too exciting. But his games always were thrillers and he was a great box-office attraction. Let the club advertise that he would pitch and the stands would be filled. And his smart showmanship resulted in his drawing a salary more than double that earned by the pitcher who toiled always to win without color.

Ruth is the best example of the colorful player. He is always in the public prints. He excites the fans always. If he hits a home run he is cheered and idolized. If he goes into what baseball calls a slump, and does not hit home runs, his very apparent discomfiture delights the fans and they hoot him and jeer him and laugh uproariously as he swings that mighty bat and hits only the air. And then the next time at bat, perhaps, when his mighty bludgeon connects with the ball and sends it sailing over the grandstand wall, the same fans rise and cheer him. There is always color to "Babe" Ruth, and that is why he is the greatest box-office attraction that baseball has ever known.

PERHAPS no case in baseball caused more comment in St. Louis than the recent case of William ("Baby Doll") Jacobson and the Browns. Jacobson

"How did you feel when the New York Giants offered $300,000 for you?"

"There was nothing to it," said Rogers Hornsby. "I can't say I was greatly impressed by that offer. Nor was I disappointed when it was turned down. I broke in in St. Louis and I like the city. I'd rather play here than anywhere else. I never stayed awake thinking I was a $300,000 wonder. I just went out and tried to get my base hits and win as always."

A REMARKABLE THIEF—He Stole

By ELEANORE BROWNE.

IN ALL the records of the great police bureaus of Europe and America, the romance and tragedy of jewels occupies many pages in the blue and gray envelopes which sheath the dossiers of international adventures. There is, for example, a packet of official documents in the huge steel cases in the "Police Presidency" of Vienna; another in the Surete in Paris, and others in Berlin and even in Moscow, marked quite simply "The Bluebird Pearl."

It would seem as if a "bluebird" pearl should bring its gentle owner happiness. The very fantasy of it suggests beautiful women and gallant men, ardor of the lips and heart, intrigues under the rose, perhaps, and fathomless pride of possession. To the international police, however, the "Bluebird Pearl" stands for tragedy, mystery and a thief hunt that spread across Europe. It is these things that are written most plainly in the records in the strong box at Vienna; the romance, though, is vivid between the lines of the formal documents.

The last entry in these records of the "Bluebird" was made but a little while ago. The first was written more than 20 years ago, in Moscow—then the second city of the Czars.

Before that, of course, there was the history of the "Bluebird" that led back across centuries. Ghengis Khan removed it from the finger of one of his favorite houris and presented it—some say with his compliments, others declare he threw in a kiss—to a beautiful Princess of the Orlof family of old Russia. In Russian legends one may follow the course of the "Bluebird" down to Napoleon, then to Germany, then back to old St. Petersburg. It is interesting to observe the similarity between the description of it in the Vienna police records of today and the poetic tradition of it as found in the old Slavic manuscript written during the time of the first Czar Nicholas. And then, with this description in mind, to follow its course from one beautiful woman to another—and through the life of the most startling criminal the world has ever dealt with.

THE old manuscript, now in the Moscow archives, bears the signature of Prince Sartai, who describes himself, quite simply, as "Khan of Tartary and Potent Lord of the Middle Horde." One thinks of this ancient recorder as a bloodthirsty Tartar, yet of the Bluebird Pearl, which was then called "The Moon of Caucasia," he set down:

"This precious bauble was formed from the song of a maiden who lifted her silver voice to the Moon in an invocation of love. The heavenly spirits that direct the witcheries of the opalescent orb that dominates the night ordained that the maiden's prayer be answered and that a token of her virtues be sent down to her. Whereupon the moon gods made her wishes into a great round pellet and varnished it with the rays of night. This token of the night orb's favor for the gentle maiden was carried down to her on a moonbeam, whereupon she was received with appreciations by the mighty ancestor of Ghengis Khan and taken by him into the household of his best women."

The 20-years-ago President of Vienna's police put into his records a description of the "Bluebird" which reads:

"This pearl is of perfect symmetry, flawless, and of little more than ten millimeters (about half an inch) in diameter. It is of rich, iridescent sheen, of velvet softness, its hues varying with extraneous light. Under lamp or gas light it is pale. In the daytime its colors reflect the warmth of the sun. In this respect it is unique and thus may be immediately identified. It is the property of the Baroness Lili Schukowsky of Austrasse Gate, and is to be returned, if recovered, to her."

Delving into the bottom of this dossier of the "Bluebird" in the Vienna archives, one comes upon this opening paragraph on one of the latest sheets in the folder:

"It is reported by Maj. Lyfertz, Director of Investigations, that the pearl generally known as The Bluebird was stolen on the night of Fifth March from the Countess Marie Mindszenty, now attached to the State Opera, while she was entertaining a party of guests in the foyer of her private suite of opera apartments. The Countess reports certainty of the time and manner of the theft because of her recollection that she examined the pearl, which is fastened to a platinum neck chain, before she placed it round her neck and is, therefore, certain of having hung it there. Immediately thereafter she entered her foyer and spoke with her guests. She did not leave the room before she missed the pendant. A search of the apartment was made at once, with no result. Certain facts noted below indicate to Maj. Lyfertz that Paul Seviers has once more stolen this pearl."

AND in that last observation of Maj. Lyfertz, one of the youngest of internationally famous detectives, is the 20-year story of the "Bluebird Pearl" and of Paul Seviers, who began to steal the "Bluebird" 20 years ago and stole it regularly, from the most beautiful throats and slenderest fingers in Europe, one after the other. For Paul Seviers was no ordinary gem thief. There is scant record of his ever having committed any crime other than his thefts of the "Bluebird." This has been the 20-year mystery of him, the mystery that has baffled the police of half a score of European capitals. A romanticist would conjure him as some blood descendant of that ancient maiden whose wish was granted into a jewel by the moon and who was received with appreciations in the arms of her sentimental lover. Any sort of imagination could describe the coursing in his veins of his maiden ancestor's fascination for the "Bluebird," a fascination come down to him through centuries. For since the first time his eyes rested on the "Bluebird," on the hand of Baroness Schukowsky, he has stolen it from every owner, collected a ransom for it when he ran out of funds, escaped the police and gone into hiding—until he wanted it again.

PAUL SEVIERS—called "the world's most startling criminal"—persisted in stealing the priceless Bluebird Pearl until all Europe's Police were close upon his trail. Another true story from the official records.

COUNTESS MARIE MINDSZENTY, one of the most beautiful women in Europe, the last owner of "The Bluebird Pearl" to lose—and regain it.

As he left a complete record of himself, with positive identification, each time he filched his treasure pearl, this strange adventurer spent his time in the interim between his amazing thefts in changing his personality. It was a workman on her estate who disappeared with the pearl when it belonged to Baroness Schukowsky. After a year's employment this workman, whose forged credentials declared that he had been a gardener on an imperial estate outside Vienna, was gradually promoted in the confidence of his mistress until he cared for her own private garden, just outside her apartments in the palace at Austrasse Gate. He seemed not to be an intelligent fellow, except in the matters of his garden. When he entered the Baroness' boudoir, one morning, and took her "Bluebird" from its golden jewel box, he left no subterfuge behind him. He left even his cap and his coat in the dainty, gilt-and-brocade bedroom of the absent Baroness.

The police soon traced the workman's antecedents and discovered the forgery of his references. They identified him as Paul Seviers, an Anglo-Austrian, who had lived in Vienna for two years. Beyond that period he was untraceable. It seemed a common theft, rather crudely managed. Yet no police bureau of Europe could trace the fugitive.

ALMOST a year later a mysterious passenger from Rome arrived at the police in Austrasse Gate and announced that the "Bluebird Pearl" might be had by its beautiful owner if she would be pleased to pay a sum of $20,000 to a jeweler in Rome, in whose possession it had come. There was no treaty by which stolen goods, honestly purchased in Italy, could be commandeered by Austrian police, and the Italian jeweler seemed able to prove that he had bought the pearl innocently. The police knew he hadn't, but what they knew and what they could prove would be different. The ransom was paid. The Viennese police put the photograph of Paul Seviers, which had been attached to his forged references, as in the Austrian custom, into his dossier, and, for a time, forgot it.

The "Bluebird" passed, at the sudden death of the young Baroness Lili, to her sister, Fraulein Delvig, in Berlin. This pretty young fraulein wore the moon gem proudly at a command concert given by singers favored by the Kaiser at the concert hall in the Kaiserhoff. Here were gathered the elect of pre-war Germany, diplomats resplendent in their gold lace, women of the fashionable set, smart young officers and gouty Generals. And among them was a distinguished foreigner, pompously bearded, immaculately groomed and wearing half a dozen blazing orders that suggested high favors from many Continental court. Especially this distinguished stranger, whose name escaped her for the moment, was attentive to the little fraulein, who was wearing the "Bluebird Pearl" of the moon maid for the first time in public. He held her hand gallantly at their parting and begged permission to make his compliments at Fraulein's reception hour at her home.

A romance budded and almost blossomed, for Fraulein Delvig found her new admirer most entertaining as well as ardent. He had traveled much and was, apparently, rich. There was some talk of a conference between him and members of her family. This event was posponed hurriedly, however, when the Fraulein was prostrated by the sudden discovery that during a stroll with her suitor through the gardens of Potsdam her fingers had lost their "Bluebird."

Her companion on that stroll, who had identified himself as a Frenchman of high position, was sympathetic. He reported the incident to the police himself, calling upon the President of the bureau with great show of concern. He was received with that profound consideration which the old regime of Berlin police accorded anyone of claim to distinction. The Herr President of those days promised to use his utmost resources and begged his visitor to help prepare a detailed description of the jewel to be sent out in a continental alarm.

THE President's caller agreed gratefully. His description of the lost gem was eloquent and colorful; almost as perfect as it could have been had he pulled the "Bluebird" from his waistcoat pocket, where it was at that moment safely reposing. To his memorized description of the jewel he added the incident of its having been stolen once before, from the throat of Baroness Lili, in Vienna. He described the manner of its theft and its recovery. He related the details of its travels after the workman stole it, and confided that the Italian jeweler who had sold it back had really been a party of the theft plot, and had worked in collusion with the thief, one Seivers, whose photograph might be secured from Vienna.

The Police President was thankful for all this information. He was somewhat interested, too, when he learned in the routine way of inquiries that much of what his visitor, the intended fiance of Fraulein Delvig, had told him of the history of the former theft was totally unknown to either the police of Vienna or the relatives of the Baroness Lili. He was further interested when the distinguished Frenchman was discovered to have completely disappeared. Fraulein, it seemed, had lost not only the "Bluebird Pearl" but her lover as well.

A short, although belated, investigation of Fraulein's suitor revealed him, mockingly, as Paul Seviers himself, not a workman, this time, but a sonorous-voiced, perfectly bred, deft-mannered drawing room knight. His decorations, like his personality, had been forged—and so clumsily, or carelessly, that they left behind them their record of his real name and identity. But even the police could not believe that the photograph of him, which he had presented the Fraulein, was the same man as that pictured by the earlier one in the files at Vienna.

NO PRESIDENT of a great metropolitan police bureau is pleased by such a joke as had been played upon Herr Superintendent in the Berlin headquarters. The resources of the Berlin police were concentrated upon the hunt for the whimsical Paul Seviers and the fated pearl. Huge rewards were offered, totaling almost the entire value of the jewel, for both Berlin and Vienna were determined to halt the career of this dangerous thief. He remained gayly at liberty, however, and this time, when a gem dealer of Brussels sent a messenger to Fraulein Delvig, with a proposition for the return of the "Bluebird" for $20,000, the messenger brought unimpeachable proofs that his employers had purchased the pearl from a patron of unquestionable standing, who had himself a record of his purchase of it from an acquaintance who had been introduced to him in London.

The search back to the "acquaintance from London" revealed Paul Seviers, this time a well-known figure in Mayfair, but Paul had disappeared, leaving a new photograph behind him, and the sale to the jeweler had been, undoubtedly, "in good faith." Their patron had been imposed upon. There was nothing for Fraulein's family to do but pay the ransom demanded, which they could not afford to do. A little later Fraulein was compelled to part with the "Bluebird" to a Berlin collector.

Another year passed. The "Bluebird" was stolen from a new owner. This time the director of a Paris bank. Perhaps the financier had some little lady in mind when he made the purchase, but, if so, she had been fickle. The pearl remained in his strong box, which was rifled by a butler who had been employed upon the best of recommendations. Again Paul Seviers was disclosed, and a new photograph of a new personality.

The police of every capital now got down to a hard task with deadly intent. They decided, after communication with each other, that the elusive admirer of the "Bluebird Pearl" must be caught. They awaited impatiently the arrival of a messenger from a foreign jeweler at the bank of the director. A policeman was stationed at the bank, another at the home of Monsieur le Director, and one of these accompanied him wherever he went. The appearance of a messenger with talk of a compromise over the lost pearl was to be the signal for an instant and arbitrary arrest.

THEN, one morning, the banker notified the police that the pearl had been returned to him and that he would not require further efforts at prosecution. The Paris archives relate the matter briefly, and include an observation by a petulant Inspector, who berates the ways of men with the ladies.

This Inspector adds to his memorandum:

"It appears that Monsieur le Director became enamored of a mademoiselle with apartments in Rue St. Honore and became a frequent caller at these lodgings. At a time which the mademoiselle believed to be the psychological moment she discovered to him the 'Bluebird' among her effects and made his purchase of it from her, at what I believe to be a figure much higher than its value, the price of her neglect to inform his family and his colleagues at the bank of his nocturnal attentions to her. Be that as it may, Paul Seviers seems to have other methods of ransoming his pearl than those which require a male messenger."

PEARLS, like women, are said to be faithless. However, Napoleon sent the "Bluebird," which had been presented to him by a courtier, to Queen Louise of Prussia, whom he tried to buy. The Princess Louise kept the pearl and sent Napoleon a glove from her left hand with the explanation that this was the best she could do, since she didn't wear mittens. Two women, after the "Bluebird" found its way back to its native Russia, were killed by admirers who had kissed the fingers which wore it.

At last came the time when it proved fickle to the strange devotee who enjoyed it whenever he wished by the mere process of stealing it.

The Countess Mindszenty remembered, that night at the opera, that among her visitors was a portly, handsome man, of much more than middle age, who had not been among her friends. She was puzzled, somewhat, by his appearance with the others to pay his respects to her after a particularly successful rendition of the aria with which she had ornamented the night's performance. She concluded that the stranger, who was in faultless evening clothes and who spoke fluently the language of her country, although with a decided foreign accent, must have come in to her foyer under the patronage of one of the directors of the opera.

So she was pleasant to him, and smiled gayly at his compliments. The Countess is winsome, as well as beautiful, and wears easily the laurels that belong to one who has been proclaimed the most beautiful woman in Central Europe. Her jewels are famous, some of them as much so because of their donors as because of their value. Of them all she is proudest of the "Bluebird."

WHEN Maj. Lyfertz, Director of Police Investigations, examined the list of those who had been in the room to pay the Countess their compliments, he asked particulars about one who was remembered by the others present, but whose name was not registered on the vistors' list at the opera door. Those inquiries were made hurriedly, almost immediately after the loss of the "Bluebird" was discovered, and long before the final fall of the curtain on the evening's opera program.

While the Director of Investigations was making these inquiries of doormen and stage attendants and the Countess' secretaries, an assistant brought him from the Police Presidency the dossier of the "Bluebird Pearl." On its index page were the notations of various thefts of the pearl, and after them the illuminating entry: "Find Paul Seviers."

The name recalled to him the favored story of the drill rooms of the young detectives, who learned, as fast as they could, the legends of the great mysteries of their profession; the 20-year story of the adventures of the "Bluebird," with this Paul Seviers as its shadowy nemesis. Just when the great orchestra in the pit began the cadences of its final score, Maj. Lyfertz gave an order to the assistant:

"There is no place to seek the thief if he do be this same Seviers, except where no man would expect him to be. Surround the exits quickly. Make all patrons pass from their seats through the grand arch that opens into the marble corridor. Let the Countess scan them closely. It would be like this cynical admirer of a pearl to see the balance of the peformance through."

The Countess, hidden behind palms in the corridors, saw her visitor emerge, dauntless, confident. When Maj. Lyfertz tapped him on the shoulder he went pale, at first, then laughed ironically and with a gallant bow brought the pearl from his pocket and handed it to its beautiful mistress.

He was not put away for a lengthy time. The police of Europe soon will have to begin anew, perhaps, their watchfulness over "The Bluebird Pearl."

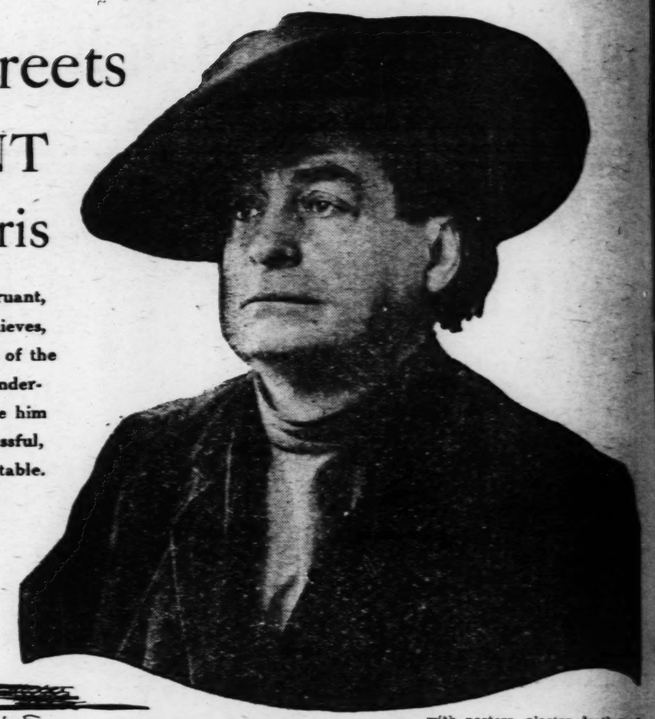
Poet Of The Streets

ARISTIDE BRUANT

Sings No More to Paris



Aristide Bruant, Poet of Thieves, whose songs of the Parisian underworld made him rich, successful, and respectable.

BRUANT is dead! Aristide Bruant, the poet of thieves. Bruant, who made fun of Edward of England to his royal face; Bruant, the anarchist, who spat his insult into the very teeth of a Russian Grand Duke: "You dirty Cossack murderer!"

He died at 73, in the odor of sanctity and respectability . . . He, who so often had mocked at both. They buried him in Pere la Chaise—this gutter-poet—where the great of France are buried. Aprilian sun gilded the chestnut blooms until they seemed like candles all aflame. How he had loved the sun!

For 30 years he had been a legend . . . a legend of Montmartre. Once he was thief, poet, anarchist. After that showman, editor and farmer. Now and then the legend came to life and sang in the French music halls the songs that Aristide Bruant used to sing. And then—as last year—there was wild acclaim for him.

HE WAS a peasant lad with a gift of song, and he came to Paris and fell among thieves. He was one of them. He knew their life. He knew the sordid women of the gutter, their lovers and the bullies who preyed on them. He found himself making chansons out of their miseries, their hopes, their morbid passions and their fears. The soul of the Paris underworld was pictured in those plaintive tunes. You may have some idea of them if you recall "Mon Homme," which Fanny Brice used to sing.

On the Mount of Martyrs in those days lodging and food and wine were cheap. There students elbowed thieves. Young painters, writers and musicians lived upon the Butte and dreamed youth's dreams of fame and love.

TWO such artists stumbled one night into a drinking place—a boite—with a zinc bar and tables made of planks that rested on empty barrels. A picturesque youth was singing of a girl and her love, of her jealousy and a grave digger who would end it all.

"What a mug he has!" Bruant cried when Edward of England came to mingle with thieves and their women and hear their songs.

It was a song Francois Villon might have sung. The words were the slang of the gutter, the argot of thieves. Its very frankness was appalling. But out of misery and degradation the verses evoked beauty and provoked pity and wonder. "This," said the students, "is art."

The singer was of heavy, big-boned peasant build, of medium height. His long blonde hair, combed back in a cataract from a massive brow. Penetrant eyes, under heavy eyebrows, were set close to the thin bridge of a long, straight nose, with delicately carved nostrils. His upper lip was long; his mouth wide, straight, generous and sensitive. His lower lip was full and his chin thrust forward with fighting determination.

Strange was his costume, even for Montmartre. Corduroy trousers were tucked into high varnished boots. He wore a velveteen coat and vest, a scarlet scarf and a red shirt. His wide-rimmed hat was square crowned—the hat of a mountaineer.

The place was "Le Mirliton," in the Boulevard Rochechouart. The chansonnier was Aristide Bruant.

Edward VII of England, then Prince of Wales, traveling incognito as "Baron Renfrew," visited "Le Mirliton." It was a rite to enter there.

Bruant dressed in brown corduroys and polished boots. He wore a sombrero and a scarlet scarf, and garbed thus in his fighting clothes he insulted princes, dukes and tourists and made them pay to enjoy his scorn

A commissionaire, dressed as a policeman, rapped for England's future King. Bruant, when quite ready, opened a little panel and looked on the visitors through a grating. He approved and unbarred the door to a rattle of chains and a rasping of locks. The Prince saw a tiny, low-ceilinged room filled with smoke and fantastic grotesqueries. Sketches and unframed oils were on the walls, with posters, plaster death-masks and beer mugs . . . a thousand things.

For each entrant was a traditional greeting at "Le Mirliton." For a woman a burst of melody, for a man a snatch of song; both in chorus. For a policeman, representing the State's authority, the guests blared out a tooting parody on the fanfare with which army buglers heralded the public appearances of France's President.

Bruant signaled for the fanfare. "Et toi, Edouard," he cried. "You are welcome, too. Voila!" Again the fanfare.

Albert Edward was annoyed. This might be diplomatically embarrassing. He had been caught offguard by the familiarity. His genial smile turned to a frown.

"Oh, la, la! c'tte gueule qu'il a!" cried Bruant. "What a mug he has!" And with that for its first line he improvised a song about the Prince.

MORE unpleasant was the visit of the Grand Duke Constantine. He entered with all the dignity of military trappings and fanfare pleased him not. Nor did he enjoy sitting among brute-faced thieves and outcast women.

Bruant began his "A Biribi," a song of the sorrows of those recalcitrant soldiers exiled to duty in the African battalion. "That song," says Alvan Francis Sanborn in his "Paris and the Social Revolution," "has done more to arouse the common people against the army than all the antimilitarist meetings of the anarchists and socialists combined."

The Grand Duke heard and flared in anger. "Come here, you," he beckoned the singer; and Bruant came there, still singing:

". . . it's there you die of hunger and of thirst"——

"Stop it! Stop that song, you. I won't listen to it."

Aristide Bruant looked His Highness in the eye and thrust out his fighting chin.

"You dirty Cossack murderer," he remarked.

BRUANT tired of showing himself before people. He hired understudies who sang his songs, men of his age and height and build, with manes of hair and baritone voice. He dressed them as he dressed himself, appearing only on some great occasion. Usually he was writing new songs, editing the little paper La Mirliton or counting cash in his little office.

The sale of his songs, his little paper, had weaned Bruant from his cabaret. He retired to live in Belleville, which adjoins Montmartre. He prepared for publication two volumes of his songs, which were illustrated by Steinlen, and his dictionary of slang, "L'Argot aux XXme Siecle," which was published in 1901. Then he decided on a career.

Bruant, the anarchist, asked Belleville to send him to the Chamber of Deputies. He failed—it was said.

So he moved to Courtenay, which is not far from Paris, where he cultivated his garden, hunted over his timberlot, and drank his good wine.

"I have always loved the sun," Bruant once sang. "He smiles on me each time he shines. I don't want the evil luck to have to push off in a fog."

His wish came true. The sun shone down on Pere la Chaise when they buried him. How he had loved the sun! He whose life was spent among shadows!

Strange Marriage Performed In Prison

Sentenced to Die, Pittman Is Wed Through Bars

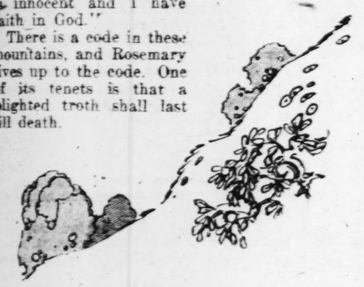
ROSEMARY KEENAN is college-bred, a girl 19 years old.

Holland Pittman, born and raised in the South Carolina mountains, is condemned to die. A jury in the District Court at Greenville convicted both Holland and his 56-year-old father, Alexander Pittman, and ordered them to the electric chair.

Then why should Rosemary Keenan marry the mountain slayer?

"Because," she has told the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, "I promised him. I know he is innocent and I have faith in God."

There is a code in these mountains, and Rosemary lives up to the code. One of its tenets is that a plighted troth shall last till death.



BOY and girl sweethearts they were, to begin. And now they are married. The wedding took place the other day in the Greenville Jail. Through the bars the condemned youth clasped his bride by the hand as a minister pronounced the wedding service.

The only witnesses were prisoners in the jail. None of Rosemary's kin was there. They didn't know of the young girl's plan.

Seven years ago, when Rosemary first met Holland Pittman, her grandfather, with whom the girl lived, forbade her keeping company with a mountain boy.

"They're a tough lot," the old man said. Not even he could have then foreseen the end of Holland Pittman.

But Rosemary Keenan's spirit was the spirit of Ruth. She had, although but a little girl, given her heart to Holland Pittman. "Whither thou goest I will go," she might have quoted from her Sunday school lesson. "Thy people shall be my people. . . ."

DESPITE the years of separation while Rosemary was attending Erskine College at Due West, S. C., her promise held true. When she returned to her mountain home it was not less sacred.

Nor did the fact that Holland was arrested and then convicted of the murder of J. W. Howard, State Prohibition Enforcement Officer, make any difference, except, perhaps, to strengthen the tie that bound the girl to her lover.

So, knowing that he must die, knowing that their married life would be but a series of visits, twice each week, to the county jail, where she could see him for a minute through the bars and give him her message of love in the presence of witnesses, Rosemary Keenan became Mrs. Holland Pittman.

After the wedding Rosemary went out and bravely got a job in Greenville. "I don't care what I do," she said. "I'll clerk. I'll wait tables. I'll be someone's hired girl. Only, I've just got to have a job in Greenville so I can see my husband twice a week.

"I want to get some comforts for him and his father. And I want to send some money every week to his mother. It's pretty hard for her up there in the hills. And she's the only mother I have got."

Rosemary Keenan never knew a mother of her own.

SHE was born in St. Joseph, Mo., in 1904. When she was three months old her mother died and she was taken down to Henderson County, N. C., where a home was found for her with an aunt, her mother's sister.

The aunt's home was on Metcalf Farm, which lies on the slopes of Hogback Mountain, one of the Saluda ranges on the boundary between North and South Carolina. Just across the ridge, on the other slope of the same hill, was the farm home of the Pittmans.

Rosemary was only 12 years old, a school girl, with pigtails hanging down across her gingham apron, when first she met Holland Pittman at a spelling bee between the Big Rock District School in North Carolina, on the northern slope, and the "Dark Corner" District School in South Carolina, on the south slope of Hogback Mountain.

She was quick at books, and, that day she spelled down the children of the two schools. Holland Pittman looked in wonder on the red-cheeked, chubby maid. Even then he was a head taller than she—he is more than that now. And Rosemary, on her part, looked in wonderment at the tall, brown-faced boy who could out-leap, out-run and out-wrestle all the other boys of the two schools.

She smiled at him as she started to leave and he blushed red and dug his hands in the pockets of his homespun trousers while a big toe marked idle traceries in the schoolyard dust.

"TILL DEATH DO US PART . . ." Photo taken just after Holland Pittman and Rosemary Keenan were married in the prison at Greenville, S. C.

THEN Holland started coming across the mountain to Sunday school on Sabbath mornings. He'd walk barefooted across the ridge, with his shoes slung over his shoulder, going by trails that only a mountain boy knows. But when he reached the main road that led to the little meeting house a half a mile away he'd jam his feet into thick leather shoes and limp on down to Sunday school for even the slightest glimpse of Rosemary, her stiff pigtails tied with bright blue ribbon, her starched white dress all beflounced and tied with a bright blue sash.

They began to speak, and then shyly to exchange notes when the Sunday school teacher's eyes were elsewhere. It was in a note, scrawled with stiff fingers that Holland first told Rosemary that he loved her.

"Maybe," it said, "I can see you home."

He could. He did. They loitered along the mountain trails until they reached the gate of Metcalf Farm.

"Reckon I cain't go furder," said Holland.

"Reckon yo-all cain't," Rosemary said.

Two or three Sundays they went home that way. Then gossip started.

"I hear you're keepin' company with one of them boys from over the ridge," said the girl's grandfather one day. "Yo-all cain't do that. They're a bad lot over there. You leave 'em alone. I won't have no kin of mine mixin' up with them folks."

"But Holland's a good boy, and he goes to Sunday school every Sunday. He always has his tex'," Rosemary said. "I help him to git it."

"Don't ever let me hear of your speakin' to him again," the old man said. If he comes a-hangin' 'round here I'll sic the dawgs on him."

ROSEMARY went to her room up under the gable of the log cabin where she lived. She sobbed her heart out on the narrow bed with its old-fashioned woven counterpane of red and blue. Then she wrote a note and carried it over her heart until next Sunday, when it slipped across to Holland as they sat in the little meeting house.

After Sunday school Rosemary walked alone, loitering on her homeward way to gather flowers. Holland, knowing a short cut through the woods, was waiting for her at The Forks.

They had a long talk, those two children.

"Ef I was just a man," said Holland, "I'd show 'em. Wait"——

"I'll wait," she said. "I'll wait till you grow up."

"After that," Rosemary explained to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine reporter, "every time I saw my sweetheart I had to slip off." Holland quit coming to Sunday school, but in the woods as she passed Rosemary would hear a Bob White call, or in the evening, near her home, a whip-poor-will. 'Twas thus she met her lover.

Then her grandfather sent her off to college. She didn't graduate. Her father, who was sending the money for her education, stopped it. That was two years ago. Her father, after he had placed the girl with her aunt, had joined a circus. He became an animal trainer with Ringling Brothers. Rosemary hasn't heard from him for two years now.

MEANTIME Holland Pittman had grown to manhood in "Dark Corners." Some folks thought the Pittmans were making whisky. State constables had found a still in the deep woods on their farm. That scarcely was remarkable. There is a tradition down in the Carolina mountains, and it wasn't born of the Volstead act. "We-all plant our corn. We plow it and we shuck it. So hit's our corn. Hit ain't the Guvamint's."

That's why some folks down there can't see why they can't make whisky. That's why, before the prohibition days, they used to moonshine just as they do now. They refused to pay a tax on whisky made by them from corn that they had grown.

It's a rugged country up there on Hogback Mountain. The woods are filled with underbrush. The trails are hidden. One night Chief Constable J. W. Howard was leading a posse up the slopes of the mountain. He was fired upon. Out of the dense thickets came the bullets. The "revenuers" replied—but fruitlessly. Howard fell, a bullet through his body. His comrades pushed on. They drove the mountaineers from their ambuscade and got, they said, a good description of the men.

Upon that description Holland Pittman and his grim-faced father were arrested. Their conviction followed quickly.

Later, on a charge of "moonshining," Holland's younger brother was arrested. That left his mother alone in her cabin up on Hogback Mountain.

Rosemary Keenan came to Greenville to arrange bond for him. It took several trips before she got the boy released.

ON THE mountain they began to gossip. It was Fred Pittman—not Holland—that she loved, the busybodies said.

"When I heard that," Rosemary said, "I just came down to Greenville and went to the jail. 'They're tellin' this thing up yonder on the mountain,' I told Holland. 'It isn't true. If you're willing I'll get a preacher now and marry you to show you.'"

Holland had no money to buy a ring, so they dispensed with that. The wedding march was the monotonous tramp of incurious prisoners pacing their cells.

A curious wedding, but they're happy. And hopeful.

"If Holland had killed Mr. Howard he would have told me," says his faithful bride. "So I know he didn't. And I'm trusting to the Lord."

PAUL BUNYAN. The Gian… Socks O… a Sa…

BY Harry P. Burke

NEITHER before, nor since, was ever such a fight in all America. The Pioneers knew nothing like it, though they used to sing—

"about the fight I had with Davy Crocket, Half b'ar, and half man, and half sky-rocket."

Nor have the movies ever dreamed of such a struggle.

High on a mountain-top it occurred—two miles up in the air. But the mountain was standing on its head and its base loomed up, above the surrounding plain, a perfect circle, 127 miles in its circumference. Round and round and round the two men milled, until the mountain was demolished in the battle and there remained only its heaps of ruins which today are called by some The Black Hills of Dakota.

Now came the conqueror down. "And this conqueror," writes James Stevens, who is chronicler of the struggle, "this victor of that tourney of the Titans, that battle of behemoths, that riot of the races, that Herculean, jaw-hammering, chin-mauling, nose-pounding, side-stamping, cheek-tearing, rib-breaking, lip-pinching, back-beating, neck-choking, eye-gouging, teeth-jerking, arm-twisting, head-butting, beard-pulling, ear-biting, bottom-thumping, toe-holding, knee-tickling, shin-cracking, heel-bruising, belly-whacking, hair-yanking, hell-roaring, supreme and incomparable knock-down-and-drag-out fight of all history, was the mighty leader of the new race of loggers—Battling Paul Bunyan."

FOR generations in the logging camp of America the saga of Bunyan has been told when men, through long winter evenings, gathered about the redhot stoves of the long, low bunk shanties and talked of logging—the one trade they knew—and of famous exploits in that rough and dangerous field of labor. The original Paul Bunyan was a French Canadian from the shores of Tonnere Bay. Stories of him, drifting down through the Maine woods, were adopted by Americans with characteristic exaggerations of Yankee humor, and Paul himself became a real American, changing his name from Bunyon to Bunyan and the name of his famous Blue Ox from "Bebe" to "Babe."

IN the Great Northwest the Bunkhouse Bards will tell you these tales of Paul Bunyan, Logger de Luxe; Babe, his Blue Ox; Hels Helsen, his Huge Foreman; and Johnny Inkslinger, his Peerless Timekeeper.

The famous Canadian logger who as a living man had fought through the Papineau Rebellion of 1837 and whose exploits had been honestly exaggerated by the naivette of French-Canadian admirers became as a Gulliver among Liliputians in comparison with other loggers when Yankee humor began to play with his fame. He gathered around him other famous characters and there resulted a great Paul Bunyan saga, as riotous in its fancies as the tales of Rabelais. From East to West it traveled, through Michigan and Wisconsin woods out to the Pacific coast. Now by James Stephens, who has spent several years in the logging camps, the stories have been gathered and published under the name of "Paul Bunyan" (Alfred A. Knopf).

BUNYAN was "a kingly figure," writes Stevens, "as he mushed through the pine trees, looming above all but the very tallest of them. He wore a wine-red hunting cap, and his glossy hair and beard shone under it with a blackness that bleeded the cap's color perfectly. His unique eyebrows were black also, covering a fourth of his forehead above his eyes, they narrowed where they arched under the temples, and they ended in thin curls just above the ears. His moustache had natural twirls and was never disturbed. He wore a yellow muffler over his virile curly beard. His mackinaw coat was huge orange and green checks. His Mackinaw pants were sober, being tan and light-gray checks, but some crimson showed and crosses brightened them. Green wool socks showed above his high black boots, which had buckskin laces and brass eyelets and toes. And he wore striped pants tens of white and pink color. Paul Bunyan was a glorious picture this morning in the frosty fields and forests, all covered with blue snow which sparkled in a pink gold light."

For that was the Winter of the Blue Snow. But ture was more variable in those days. There was also the Year of the Hot Winter, the Year of the Winters and the Spring that the Rain Came Up From China, just to mention a few meteorological freaks that Battling Paul Bunyan saw.

The Winter of the Blue Snow Bunyan was musing over his books in his great cave on Tonnere Bay. His dog Niagara, who usually did his hunting for him had gone out in the blue snow and become confused with fright at the panic of all the animals, even running the bears and moose until he reached the darkness of Arctic winter and ran head-on into the North Pole. His speed threw Niagara whirling high in the air and when the dog fell it was with a force that crashed through 90 feet of ice and left the polar ice fields convulsed with the animal's struggles to get to the air again.

Paul had searched fruitlessly for Niagara. Then one night a thunderous crash brought him to the door of the cave. Out in the icy waters he saw two struggling, pointed ears. A mile from shore he found a new-born calf, "Bebe," the Blue Ox in appeared. As he nursed that monstrous orphan to health, Paul saw a vision of "Real America" and invented the logging industry, determining to come over into the United States and log off the land with his ox as the motive power.

"An ordinary man in front of the Blue Ox had to use a telescope to see what his hind legs were doing. Between his horns he measured 42 ax handles and a plug of chewing tobacco."

THE mature Babe was fit servant to such master. "It must be remembered," observes Stevens, "that the Blue Ox measured 42 ax handles and a plug of chewing tobacco between the horns; an ordinary man at his front had to use a telescope to see what he was doing with his hind legs, he was so long; he had so much energy and such delight in labor that no one could hold him when he started for the woods in the mornings, he was so fast that Paul Bunyan's foreman, the Bab Babbitson alone stuck to his error. He who might have been a great logger, is singing paeans to the climate and selling real estate in Los Angeles now.

And once in the stonewood timber of Utah, Paul forgot about the climate's treachery and almost drowned his men in the torrents of his perspiration, so that they fled before him as from a flood.

That is how they came to the Kingdom of Kansas, where the rough, but beautiful country was covered with whisky trees, beer vines and cigarette grass. There were five baseball games every morning and seven horse races every afternoon, and besides the horse races all manner of games and sports. The royal palace at Topeka had tables on every hand for poker, solo, rummy, pool and craps. These tables were encircled with a bar so long a man would grow a beard while walking the length of it. On the bar was always a great quantity of free lunch—peppery and piping hot.

That was a Paradise, but Duke Dryface and the farmers were revolting against King Bourbon. They banished the King to Kentucky and enslaved the loggers. Paul Bunyan came and released them, but he took a contract for logging off the whisky trees and beer vines. The country was flattened for the farmers by hitching Babe, the Blue Ox, to each section of the logged-off land and turning it over. "As Duke Dryface had surmised, the land, though rolling on top, was flat underneath. So the one-time sinful soil of Kansas now lies deeply buried."

"THERE were giants in those days," the true lumber-jack will tell you with Biblical phrase when he speaks of Paul Bunyan. Besides Paul and Hels Helsen, "the Bull of the Woods," there were others. The greatest of these was Johnny Inkslinger. Johnny was almost as big as Paul. He was timekeeper for the master logger.

So big was Paul's business, so fast did Johnny Inkslinger have to write, that he was forced to fix a rubber hose to his fountain pen and attach it at once to 24 barrels of ink. On the end of his long pen he had affixed a piece of rubber hose. Johnny Inkslinger was the first great efficiency expert. Thus while writing, to make a correction, he could shake his head negatively, and erase the error.

Johnny was also a doctor of parts, and his efforts to cure Babe, the Blue Ox, when the ox was at death's door resulted in what the world now knows as Snake River, Coos Bay, Pudget Sound, Mount Ranier, and the Cascade Range. A story that is too long to tell here. But the Blue Ox recovered, thanks to eloquence and alcohol, and the logging industry was saved.

ONLY in their camps do the loggers talk of Paul Bunyan. He is a creature of the bunkhouse confabulations when work is done. Yet the other day in St. Louis a group of heavily-built, sluggish-faced and roughly-dressed men were seated about a table clinking steins. I observed to a companion: "If those big fellows had stagged pants I'd know they were lumber-jacks."

A little man, shuffling through the room, broke in on our conversation.

"What do they know about loggin'?" he said. "Where would they find real woods near here?"

"Oh, then," said I, "you've been in the big woods?"

"Sure. I helped log off the big fir tract between Eugene, Ore., and Coos Bay. I'm a lumber-jack, believe me, even though I'm only swampin' here."

"Maybe, then," I said, "you can tell me about Paul Bunyan?"

"Paul Bunyan?" he retorted. "They used to call me Paul Bunyan in the Oregon woods.

"I'd just been paid off, so I took my check and went down to Portland. I was in Ericson's. In Burnside street. You know the North End? Cheap eating houses . . . dance halls then . . . and just around the corner Greek coffee houses and Chinatown.

"My name is Weakley, Frank B. Weakley. . . . I was at the bar drinking and I heard my name called outside. Loud! . . . It was like the whole town called it.

"I went out. . . . You never saw such a mob. . . . Great bearded men in mackinaws and stagged pants and calked boots with brass hooks and eyes. . . . Just in from the woods.

" 'Hello, Frank.' . . . 'That's the boy.' . . . They was calling me."

"So I asked them in to have a drink.

" 'They're on me,' I says to the bartender. 'Give 'em anything they want.'

"They was more than a thousand of them. They could hardly pack into the place. They served 'em in relays.

"Some of 'em was thirstier than the others and maybe took two or three, but that was all right.

" 'Here's how,' I'd say.

"I'd been working for the Booth-Kelly outfit at Eugene. . . . Know them?

"So after the boys had had their drinks I ordered up another round and put my check on the bar.

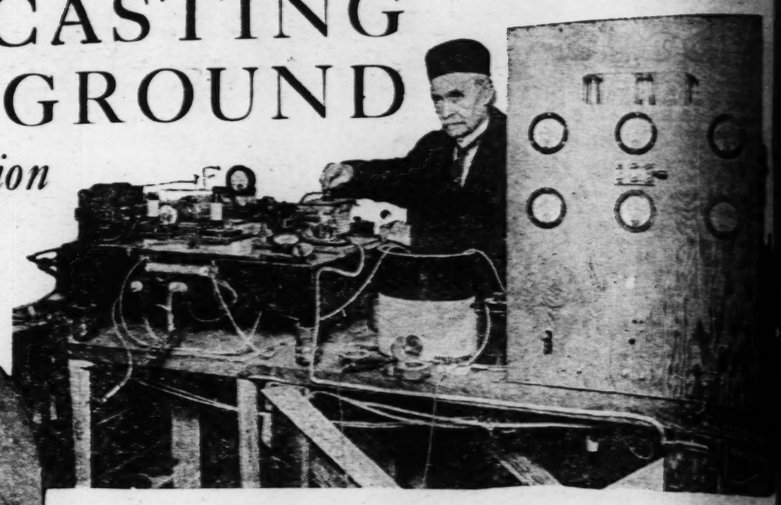
"Three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000)! . . . 'I guess that will pay for them,' I said. 'Just keep the change'."

He looked at me with a sort of quizzical twinkle in his eye.

"After that," he said, "out there they all called me Paul Bunyan."

BROADCASTING UNDERGROUND

Is Latest Invention In Radio



DR. J. HARRIS ROGERS and the transmitter used in sending radio waves underground. With the use of two amperes of current he has succeeded in radiating radio signals through the earth for a distance of more than 1000 miles.

UNDER the earth's crust, or through the air—where do radio waves travel?

Experts for the most part say the ether is the medium of transmission—but an aged Maryland inventor has obtained from antennae run underground results which threaten to revolutionize modern ideas of radio. He is Dr. James Harris Rogers of Hyattsville, Md., who with his underground apparatus, has reached from Los Angeles on the west to the great French radio station at Toulon. For 17 years he has been conducting his own experiments and making his own inventions, always basing his scientific investigations on the theory that science first accepted—that electrical waves, like light waves, always travel in a direct tangent.

Dr. Rogers is not a prophet without honor in his own country. The Maryland Academy of Science has recommended him for the Nobel Prize in physics and given him its inventors' medal and the degree of honorary fellow. The Maryland General Assembly has tendered him a vote of thanks for his contributions to science and his service to his countrymen in the World War. Georgetown University in 1919 bestowed upon him the degree of doctor of science in recognition of his work.

Yet he has continued every day in his laboratory, thinking, planning, designing, testing—and now at 74 he believes his life's activity is crowned by a success in radio transmission that is not less than revolutionary. Skeptics have become interested. Even the Government is lending its official ear to his theories.

Can electric waves curve in great arcs to carry through the ether around the world? That has been his problem.

DR. ROGERS says they cannot. He recalls the day when other scientists, accepting the old Hertzian law were willing to evaluate Marconi's discovery of "wireless" as a fascinating experiment in physics, but refused to accord it practical value. Carvature of the earth's surface, they declared, would prevent sending long distance messages from point to point upon that surface. Hertz, the discoverer of the Hertzian waves which carry radio messages, had demonstrated to the satisfaction of scientific thought that those waves traveled only in a horizontal manner and would not turn a corner, as it were, at the behest of man.

Agreeing with Hertz, Dr. Rogers differed from Marconi. "Electrostatic waves," he concluded, "may travel through the air, but the best results will come from underground transmission."

And for 17 years he has conducted upon that theory his extensive experiments. Through his unique transmission station at Hyattsville he has sent messages through the earth to every part of the United States and to Europe.

SINCE 1908, when he first actively experimented with underground radio communication, Dr. Rogers has spent most of his time improving his original devices for broadcasting. His laboratory at Hyattsville is replete with machines and mechanisms which are a mystery to the layman, and to not a few of the most ardent radio fans. Dr. Rogers conducts personally most of his tests and has but few helpers.

On April 11, this year, Dr. Rogers announced the success of an experiment which he had planned and prepared for months—Europe picked up a message transmitted from the underground antennae of his radio station. For he received a cablegram from Toulon, France, which, Dr. Rogers asserts, proves that his communication not only traveled underground for hundreds of miles, but also under the entire wide expanse of the Atlantic Ocean. The cablegram read:

TOULON, France.

Dr. James H. Rogers, Rogers Research Laboratories, Hyattsville, Md.: Heard your station 3XR at Capitol 01 HOS GMT (1 a. m., Greenwich Meridian time), about 98 meters calling CQ (any station which hears). Audibility QSA (very loud). Letter confirms. SACAZES M.

After receiving the notice from overseas Dr. Rogers said:

"Having attained this result, I feel that the practicability of underground transmission, heretofore considered scientifically impossible, has been demonstrated to the world and that my theories have been vindicated."

The successful results in transoceanic broadcasting were led up to by Dr. Rogers' success in sending radio waves across this continent. Last July the inventor succeeded in transmitting underground messages more than 1400 miles. During last winter he improved his broadcasting apparatus until in March, after a test extending over several weeks, he announced that his messages had traveled as far west as Weston, Kan. And on March 29 he broadcast to the Pacific coast, meanwhile receiving hundreds of notices from operators in all parts of the country reporting that they had received his messages. All of the tests were carried on in code, as it attained better results than the human voice.

B. F. McNAMEE, St. Louis production engineer and authority on radio, commented as follows upon this experiment with underground antennae:

"It is very difficult to determine whether the energy which Dr. Rogers picks up is due to currents which travel from the transmitting station through the ground only, and are induced in his underground antennae, or whether the greater part of this energy reaches the receiving station through the ether, because, in the latter case, these ether waves traveling along the surface of the earth would induce ground currents, which would likewise affect Dr. Rogers' antennae.

"Assuming only the ground currents, it is difficult to explain the variation in signal strength between night and day, and the 'fading' with which we are all so familiar. These phenomena are now fairly well explained by the ether wave theory and the Heaviside layer.

"The generally accepted theory is that the electrical impulse is transmitted from the sending station through the ether to this thin topmost layer of the atmosphere called the Heaviside layer, is reflected back to earth, then is reflected again to the Heaviside layer, and so on, as a ray of light would be reflected by a series of mirrors. In this way the signal follows the curvature of the earth. The reflecting properties of the Heaviside layer are affected by sunlight.

"There must be some way of utilizing the conductivity of the earth for electrical communication purposes. I believe that Dr. Rogers is doing a wonderful work in investigating this possibility. There is no question in my mind but what we have room for every possible means of communication."

Previous to the success of his transcontinental experiment, Dr. Rogers and his assistants had devoted most of their tests to receiving messages on an underground outfit. They reported hearing London and other European cities.

DR. ROGERS' sending set consists of four cables each 50 feet long, laid three feet underground and arranged so as to point out from a center like one to each cardinal point of the compass—north, south, east, west. The cables are made of terra cotta pipe, 18 inches in diameter. In their center run a length of copper tubing three-quarters of an inch thick and surrounded by layers of glass insulation. The radio waves are sent out through the ground from these cables. If the broadcasting is in a northerly direction, Dr. Rogers uses the north cable, southerly, the south cable, and so on. He believes that by pointing the antennae in the direction of the receiver, a gain is made in effectiveness and efficiency. For his transmission to Europe, the north cable was used.

The rest of the equipment employed by the inventor in his tests is much the same as ordinary aerial transmitting sets. Dr. Rogers uses one 250-watt tube, producing four or five amperes' radiation with a wave length of 170 meters. This is used rather than the electric energy of Government transoceanic stations, which use transoceanic wave lengths varying from 10,000 to 24,000, he contends. Dr. Rogers' theory, as he explains it, is as follows:

"Radio energy is propagated, in my opinion, through the medium of the crust of the earth. It is possible to send electrostatic waves through the air, but they follow light waves in a perfectly horizontal direction and are not bent down to the earth. The greater portion of the energy used in the present form of transmitting thus goes in a tangent from the earth, misses the receiving aerials and is dissipated in the air. Some of the energy goes through the grounded base plates into the earth and is lost. The energy, I believe, that sends radio waves from the base plate of one station to the base plate of the other."

Because his radio waves are sent through the earth rather than through the air, there is no fading in transmission, Dr. Rogers claims. Violent storms in the sun, which are accepted as the cause of fading, cannot enter the earth and therefore cannot affect his messages, the scientist explains. He contends that his method, improving over aerial radio, can be used as well in the daytime as at night, for the sun is no drawback to the successful transmission of underground messages. Dr. Rogers says that many of the cards sent to him by operators who have picked up waves from the Hyattsville station report "no fading, less static and very loud."

Before sending his message to Europe Dr. Rogers tried out his broadcasting theory in the United States—and met with success in all of his tests. Early in March his messages were received in Greenville, Tex., and Albuquerque, N. M. Encouraged by these results, he strengthened his sending apparatus and reached a set in Los Angeles, which reported that the code was "coming in finely."

"SO FAR as my instruments are concerned," Dr. Rogers said after the last test was over, "the end of their development virtually has been attained. I am engaged now, however, in the construction of another transmitter giving a wave length of 85 meters. I hope thereby to determine the relative sending power of an 85-meter wave length as compared to one which measures 170 meters. I believe that wonderful possibilities may be realized with the use of a very short wave length.

"In addition to the saving of electrical energy by employing shorter lengths, there would be a great economy in the construction of radio stations. The giant aerials at the transatlantic stations now cost $1,000,000 or more. Underground stations can be built for a few thousand dollars. The terra cotta piping is the chief expense. Furthermore, such stations will not be liable to damage by windstorms or lightning.

Building a Promised Land in Texas

A Community of Homes Made From Stretches of Prairie

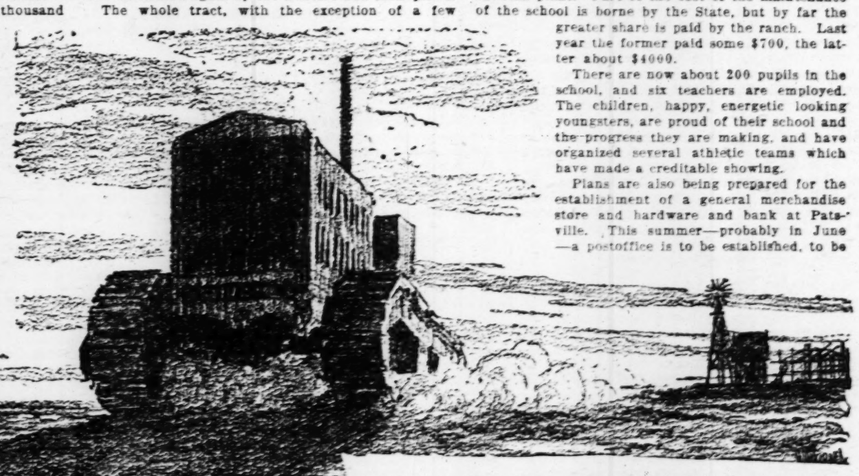
Some of the school children in front of one of the dwellings which serve temporarily as a school building.

BY ALBERT HERNDON.

THE clang of hammers, the drone of saws and the reverberating exhausts of giant tractors are combining to beat out a requium for an era that is fast passing in Texas—the day of the frontier, the pioneer and the sullen stretches of virgin land.

Down in the gulf coast country the ghosts of the men who broke the Texas trails must look on in awe as one of the largest agricultural developments that even the Lone Star State has ever known moves along on the road to completion. Forty thousand acres of land that rivals in richness the delta of the Nile is yielding to the man with the plow. For ages it has lain sleeping, disturbed only by the tramp of the occasional herds of cattle that knew it as a feeding ground. Today it blossoms with the promise of wealth; its hitherto unfenced acres are dotted with shining new homes—the homes of happy and prosperous farmers.

But, symbolically enough, the Chapman ranch still supports its herd of cattle. Twenty-six hundred head, a pitiful remnant of other days, still wander across the unplowed acres; each day they are being driven back and back by the tractors, rumbling across the fields with their broods of plows. They are making their last stand, and fancy can conceive that they realize it, for they mill about uneasily and gaze with seeming resentment as the man-made machines rob them of their own.



With the coming of the motor tractor a new era is ushered in and the great herds that formerly grazed the prairies are slowly being driven off.

THE story of the Chapman ranch, in its essentials, is the story of all Texas—the story of the accumulation and the later breaking up of the great estates. Until three years ago the tract was a part of the old Laureles ranch, owned by Mrs. Henrietta M. King, one of the country's richest women and the owner of the world's largest ranch—1,250,000 acres in seven South Texas counties.

Then there came a man who saw and understood the opportunity that awaited the agricultural pioneer, and who possessed the wealth to capitalize that opportunity. P. A. Chapman, Waxahachie (Tex.) oil man, paid a million dollars in cash for the 40,000 acres and prepared to spend other millions in the development of his holdings.

He planned and dreamed of a great community of small farmers, who would put the land to work; he dreamed of a sort of modern paradise for the tenant farmer, for the man who was just "getting a start" in agriculture; he dreamed of mile after mile of highly cultivated fields available to those who cared to come. And he began the improvement that would make his dreams come true.

Death intervened before he could complete his work, but his son, J. O. Chapman, administrator of the estate, is carrying on the work on the scale laid down by his father.

Carpenters, well drillers, tractor men, artisans and laborers, all of the craftsmen who are taming the wilderness, were recruited by the hundred. Surveyors laid out broad roads; mile after mile of fence was strung; machinery and implements came in by trainload, and the struggle had begun.

For almost three years now the work has been progressing, yet is far from finished; the wonders that have been wrought are but the forerunners of the wonders to be, but even now South Texas speaks in amazement of the Chapman ranch.

THE ranch itself is an irregularly shaped tract of land lying in Nueces County, its south boundary the Nueces-Kleberg county line, and extending northward from four and one-half to seven and one-half miles and east and west 10 miles. Located 16 miles south of Corpus Christi, it may be reached by a broad, well-graded road which, it is said, will soon be hard-surfaced. Except for a few scattered patches, it is level prairie land, with little mesquite—only small brush and sod that is being crushed and unearthed again by the tractors and their plows.

The whole tract, with the exception of a few acres near the center, is being divided into smaller tracts — 160 acres, for the most part, but some of 320 acres. These are equipped with modern, comfortable homes, barns and outbuildings. Approximately 400 of these houses have been built, and between 160 and 170 barns.

The owners offer these tracts to tenant farmers—only married men may rent them—who are operating farms upon the crop-share system, turning over to the ranch one-fourth of the cotton and one-third of the feed produced. Rental is by yearly agreement. The ranch furnishes the land, the improvements and the tenant provides other necessary equipment.

Cotton, of course, is the principal crop, the mainstay. However, there is a considerable acreage of feedstuffs. Then, too, nearly every home has its little vegetable garden.

Last year the ranch produced only 1077 bales of cotton. This year, with 19 sections, or 12,600 acres, of land in cultivation, the output will be a great deal larger. Just how large is a matter of conjecture, but it is said that the land is easily capable of producing a bale to the acre. Last year the yield was little more than one-fourth bale.

To care for the needs of the farmers the owners of the ranch have installed and operate a 10-stand gin, which last year ginned 681 bales of the cotton produced on the ranch. As more land is put under the plow and new facilities for ginning are needed, it is planned to build additional gins.

NEAR the center of the ranch there has sprung into existence the little town of Patsville; here are the gin, the school, the planing mill, the offices and the neat, precise rows of houses which are the homes of the ranch employes—the carpenters, the painters, the ginners, the tractor men and the score or so of men who look after the business details of the ranch. There are some 200 of these on the company pay roll.

The school at this time is housed in three dwellings, but plans have been drawn for a model educational plant. Part of the cost of the maintenance of the school is borne by the State, but by far the greater share is paid by the ranch. Last year the former paid some $700, the latter about $4000.

There are now about 200 pupils in the school, and six teachers are employed. The children, happy, energetic looking youngsters, are proud of their school and the progress they are making, and have organized several athletic teams which have made a creditable showing.

Plans are also being prepared for the establishment of a general merchandise store and hardware and bank at Patsville. This summer—probably in June—a postoffice is to be established, to be served through the postoffice at Corpus Christi, the nearest railway station.

WHERE so many and so varied activities are under way, there is apt to be efficient management. There is. At the head of the management there is a two-fisted, level-headed son of the breed of men who do things in a big way—P. F. Gallagher, known to everyone on the ranch as Mike. His first name has been perpetuated in the name of Patsville.

Laboring under the watchful eyes of Mike are the gangs of carpenters and others whose work is necessary to the building and upkeep of the project. Most interesting, perhaps, is the work of the carpenters.

They operate much as do the mechanics in a great industrial plant—each man doing his own specialized bit toward the assembly of the whole, and each moving with machine-like precision.

Lumber is ordered, and consumed in carload lots. Each piece is cut ready to be fitted into place. Nails, too, come by the carload. Water is piped to each house, being supplied from wells, equipped with windmills and reservoirs.

Nine machines of the 10-ton caterpillar type make up the tractor fleet. Each tractor jerks five plows through the sod as easily as a child would propel a toy wagon.

It was the dream of the founder of all this that he should set an example which future generations could point to as the beginning of a new era. His dream has come true.

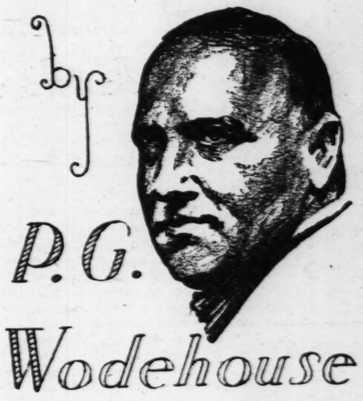
ARCHIE--ART CONNOISSEUR



by P. G. Wodehouse

THE summer morning was so brilliantly fine, the populace popped to and fro in so active and cheery a manner, and everybody appeared to be so absolutely in the pink that a casual observer of the City of New York would have said that it was one of those happy days. Yet Archie Moffam, as he turned out of the sun-bathed street into the ramshackle building on the third floor of which was the studio belonging to his artist friend, James B. Wheeler, was faintly oppressed with a sort of a kind of feeling that something was wrong. He would not have gone so far as to say that he had the pip—it was more a vague sense of discomfort. And, searching for first causes as he made his way upstairs, he came to the conclusion that the person responsible for this nebulous depression was his wife, Lucille. It seemed to Archie that, at breakfast that morning, Lucille's manner had been subtly rummy.

Musing thus, he reached the studio and found the room empty. The studio had seen the last of J. B. Wheeler for that day; but Archie, not realizing this, and feeling that a chat with Mr. Wheeler, who was a light-hearted bird, was what he needed, sat down to wait. After a few moments, his gaze, straying over the room, encountered a handsomely framed picture, and he went across to take a look at it.

J. B. WHEELER was an artist who made a large annual income as an illustrator for the magazines, and it was a surprise to Archie to find that he also went in for this kind of thing. For the picture, dashingly painted in oils, represented a comfortably plump young woman who was plainly intended to be the goddess Venus. Archie was not much of a nib round the picture galleries, but he knew enough about art to recognize Venus when he saw her; though once or twice, it is true, artists had double-crossed him by ringing in some such title as "Day-Dreams" or "When the Heart Is Young."

He inspected this picture for a while, then, returning to his seat, lighted a cigarette and began to meditate on Lucille once more. Yes; the dear girl had been rummy at breakfast. There had been in Lucille's manner that curious, strained sweetness which comes to women whose husbands have failed to match the piece of silk or forgotten to post an important letter. If his conscience had not been as clear as crystal, Archie would have said that that was what must have been the matter. But when Lucille wrote letters she just stepped out of the suite and dropped them in the mail chute attached to the elevator. It couldn't be that. And he couldn't have forgotten anything else, because——

"Oh, my sainted aunt!"

ARCHIE'S cigarette smoldered, neglected, between his fingers. His jaw had fallen, and his eyes were staring glassily before him. His memory was weak, he knew; but never before had it let him down so scurvily as this. This was a record. For a man may forget many things—he may forget his name, his umbrella, his nationality, his spats and the friends of his youth; but there is one thing which your married man, your in-sickness-and-in-health lizard must not forget, and that is the anniversary of his wedding day.

Remorse swept over Archie like a wave. His heart bled for Lucille. No wonder the poor girl had been rummy at breakfast! He groaned hollowly and sagged forlornly in his chair, and, as he did so, the Venus caught his eye. For it was an eye-catching picture. You might like it or dislike it, but you could not ignore it.

Archie had the whole thing neatly worked out inside a minute. He scribbled a note to Mr. Wheeler, explaining the situation and promising reasonable payment on the instalment system; then, placing the note in a conspicuous position on the easel, he leaped to the telephone—and presently found himself connected with Lucille's room at the Cosmopolis.

"Hullo, darling!" he cooed.

There was a slight pause at the other end of the wire.

"Oh, hullo, Archie!"

Lucille's voice was dull and listless, and Archie's experienced ear could detect that she had been crying.

"Many happy returns of the day, old thing!"

A muffled sob floated over the wire.

"Have you only just remembered?"

Archie, bracing himself up, cackled gleefully into the receiver.

"Did I take you in, light of my home? Do you mean to say you really thought I had forgotten? For heaven's sake!"

"You didn't say a word at breakfast."

"Ah, but that was all part of the devilish cunning. I hadn't got a present for you then. At least, I didn't know whether it was ready."

"Oh, Archie, you darling!" Lucille's voice had lost its crushed melancholy. She trilled like a thrush, or a linnet, or any bird that goes in largely for trilling. "Have you really got me a present?"

"It's here now—the dickens of a fruity picture. One of J. B. Wheeler's things. You'll like it."

"Oh, I know I shall! I love his work. You are an angel. We'll hang it over the piano."

"I'll be around with it in something under three ticks, star of my soul. I'll take a taxi."

IT IS not far from Washington Square to the Hotel Cosmopolis, and Archie made the journey without mishap. There was a little unpleasantness with the cabman before starting—he, on the prudish plea that he was a married man with a local reputation to keep up, declining at first to be seen in company with the masterpiece. But, on Archie giving a promise to keep the front of the picture away from the public gaze, he consented to take the job on, and, some 10 minutes later, having made his way blushfully through the hotel lobby, Archie entered his suite, the picture under his arm.

He placed it carefully against the wall in order to leave himself more scope for embracing Lucille, and when the joyful reunion was concluded, he stepped forward to turn it round and exhibit it.

"Why, it's enormous!" said Lucille. "I didn't know Mr. Wheeler ever painted pictures that size. When you said it was one of his, I thought it must be the original of a magazine drawing or something like—— Oh!"

Archie had moved back and given her an uninterrupted view of the work of art, and Lucille had started as if some unkindly disposed person had driven a brad-awl into her.

"Pretty ripe—what?" said Archie enthusiastically.

Lucille did not speak for a moment. It may have been sudden joy that kept her silent. Or, on the other hand, it may not. She stood looking at the picture with wide eyes and parted lips.

"A bird, eh?" said Archie.

"Y-yes," said Lucille.

"I knew you'd like it," proceeded Archie, with animation.

"Phone down to the office, light of my soul, and tell them to send up a nail, a bit of string and the hotel hammer."

"One moment, darling. I'm not quite sure"——

"Eh?"

"Where it ought to hang, I mean. You see"——

"Over the piano, you said. The jolly old piano."

"Yes; but I hadn't seen it then."

A monstrous suspicion flitted for an instant into Archie's mind.

"I say, you do like it, don't you?" he said, anxiously.

"Oh, Archie, darling, of course I do! And it was so sweet of you to give it to me. But what I was trying to say was that this picture is so—so striking that I feel that we ought to wait a little while and decide where it would have the best effect. The light over the piano is rather strong."

"You think it ought to hang in a dimmish light—what?"

"Yes, yes. The dimmer the—I mean, yes, in a dim light. Suppose we leave it in the corner for the moment—over there—behind the sofa, and—I'll think it over."

"Right-o! Here?"

"Yes; that will do splendidly. Oh—and Archie!"

"Hullo."

"I think perhaps—— Just turn its face to the wall, will you?" Lucille gave a little gulp. "It will prevent its getting dusty."

IT PERPLEXED Archie a little during the next few days to notice in Lucille, whom he had always looked on as pre-eminently a girl who knew her own mind, a curious streak of vacillation. He suggested various spots on the wall as suitable for the Venus, but Lucille seemed unable to decide. Archie wished that she would settle on something definite, for he wanted to invite J. B. Wheeler to the suite to see the thing. One morning, encountering him on Broadway, he expressed his appreciation of the very decent manner in which the other had taken the whole affair.

"Oh, that!" said J. B. Wheeler. "My dear fellow, you're welcome." He paused for a moment. "More than welcome," he added. "You aren't much of an expert on pictures, are you?"

"Well," said Archie, "I don't know that you'd call me an absolute nib, don't you know, but, of course, I know enough to see that this particular exhibit is not a little fruity. Absolutely one of the best things you've ever done, laddie!"

Mr. Wheeler's eyes bulged.

"What are you talking about, you Tishbite? Are you under the impression that I painted that thing?"

"Didn't you?"

Mr. Wheeler swallowed a little convulsively.

"My fiancee painted it," he said, shortly.

"Your fiancee? My dear old lad, I didn't know you were engaged. Who is she? Do I know her?"

"Her name is Alice Wigmore. You don't know her."

"And she painted that picture?" Archie was perturbed. "But I say! Won't she be apt to wonder where the thing has got to?"

"I told her it had been stolen. She thought it a great compliment, and was tickled to death. So that's all right."

"And, of course, she'll paint you another."

"Not while I have my strength, she won't," said J. B. Wheeler, firmly. "She's given up painting since I taught her golf."

"But laddie," said Archie, puzzled, "you talk as though there were something wrong with the picture. I thought it dashed hot stuff."

The miscreant collapsed under him with a squashy sound, like the wind going out of a pair of bellows, and Archie, taking a firm seat on his spine, rubbed the other's face in the carpet and awaited the progress of events.

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY

BY STEPHEN LEACOCK

THE month on which we have just entered is one which is popularly known as the Merry Month of May. The winter is now over except in the city of Quebec, in Butte, Mont., and in the Back Bay region of Boston. The gathering warmth of the sun calls all nature to life.

In the older almanacs of the kind that used to be made for farmers, the first items under this month always dealt with the aspect of the heavens. The farmer was told that in May the sun, passing out of the sign of Taurus, moved into the constellation of Gemini; that the apparent declination of the sun was 15 degrees and 4 minutes, and that the neap tides fell on the thirteenth and twenty-seventh of the month. He was also informed that Mars and Mercury during May are both in opposition and that Sirius is the dog star.

In the city this information is now useless. Nobody can see the heavens even if he wants to; the open space between the skyscrapers formerly called the sky is now filled with electric lights, pictures of motor wheels turning round and men eating breakfast food with a moving spoon.

We doubt also if the up-to-date farmer is really concerned with the Zodiac. We will therefore only say that in this month if the farmer will on any clear night ascend to the cupola of his pergola with his binoculars and with his radio plugs in his ears and his insulators on his feet and view the heavens from midnight till 3 in the morning, he will run a first-class chance of getting pneumonia.

FOR those to whom gardening—even in the limited restrictions of a city back yard—is a hobby and a passion, the month of May is the most enticing month of the year. It seems strange to think that so many men with a back yard at their disposal—a back yard, let us say, 20 feet by 15—should nevertheless spend the long evenings and the Saturday afternoons of the month of May striding up and down the golf links or wandering along a trout stream. He'd much better to be out in the back yard with a spade and hoe, pickax and sledge hammer and a little dynamite, preparing the exuberant soil for the luxuriant crop.

In the amateur garden in the back yard no great technical knowledge is needed. Our citizen gardener who wishes to begin should go out into his back yard and, having stripped himself to his waist, all but his undershirt, should proceed first to dig out his ground.

He must excavate a hole 10 by 15 by 10 by 2; of course, the hole won't be as big as that, but it will seem to be. He must carefully remove on his back all large boulders, volcanic rocks and other accumulated debris. These, if he likes, he may fashion tastefully into a rockery or a rookery, or also, if he likes, he may throw them over the fence into his neighbor's back yard. He must then proceed to fill the hole half full of sweet-smelling fertilizer.

"The amateur gardener should economize by being his own roller.

THIS will almost complete his first evening's work. In fact, he will be just about filling in his stuff when the other men come past on their way home from golf. He will then finish his task by putting back a fourth of the soil, which he will carefully pulverize by lying down and rolling in it. After this he can then take a bath (or two baths) and go to bed.

The ground thus carefully prepared, the amateur gardener should wait a day or so and then, proceeding to his back yard, should draw on his overalls up to his neck and proceed to plant his bulbs and seeds.

The tulip is a favorite flower for early planting owing to its fine raucous appearance. Excellent tulip bulbs may be had of any florist for $1, which, with proper care, will turn into a flower worth 30 cents. The dahlia, the most handsome of the ganglions, almost repays cultivation, presenting a splendid carboniferous appearance with unsurpassed efflorescence. The potato is not bad, either.

When the garden plot is all filled up with buried bulbs and seeds, the gardener should roll the dirt down flat by rolling it, and then, for the rest of the month of May, sit and look at it.

THE month of May is the time of year when dandelion wine, owing to the presence of dandelions, is perhaps easier to make than at any other time. An excellent recipe is as follows:

1. Pluck, or pick, a small basketful of dandelion heads.
2. Add to them a quart of water and leave the mixture stand for five minutes.
3. Pour off the water, remove the dandelions and add as flavoring a quart of 1872 champagne.
4. Drink it.

IT IS in the month of May that the countryside, for the true lover of nature, is at its very best. For one who knows by name and can distinguish and classify the flora of the lanes and fields, a country walk among the opening buds is a scene of unalloyed joy. The tiny hibiscus is seen peeping out from under the grass, while everywhere in the spring air is the sweet scent of the ornithorhyncus and the megalotherium. One should watch in this month for the first shoots of the spigot, while the trained eye will easily distinguish the lambswart, the dogsfoot and the cowslip.

Nor are the birds, for anyone who knows their names, less interesting than the flowers. The corvex americanus is building its nest in the tall trees. The sharp whistling notes of the ilex and the pulex and the index are heard in the meadows, while the marshes are loud with the song of the ranunculus. But, of course, for those who do not know these names nothing is happening except that a lot of birds are singing and the grass is growing. That, of course, is quite worthless and uninteresting.

FOLLOWING are some of the great May events:

May 1. Birth of Shakspeare.
May 5. End of the Trojan War.
May 10. Birth of Shakspeare.
May 15. Beginning of the Trojan War.
May 20. Shakspeare born.
May 25. Trojan War ends again.
May 30. Death of Shakspeare and beginning of the Trojan War.

ARCHIE--ART CONNOISSEUR

"Bless you!" said J. B. Wheeler.

AT BREAKFAST next morning Archie once more brought up the question of the hanging of the picture.

"Touching the jolly old masterpiece," he said, "how about it? I think it's time we hoisted it up somewhere."

Lucille fiddled pensively with her coffee spoon.

"Archie, dear," she said, "I've been thinking."

"And a very good thing to do," said Archie.

"About that picture, I mean. Did you know it was father's birthday tomorrow?"

"Why, no, old thing, I didn't, to be absolutely honest. Your revered parent doesn't confide in me much."

"Well, it is. And I think we ought to give him a present."

"Absolutely! But how? I'm all for spreading sweetness and light and cheering up the jolly old pater's sorrowful existence, but I haven't a bean. And, what is more, things have come to such a pass that I scan the horizon without seeing a single soul I can touch. I suppose I could get into Reggie Van Tuyl's ribs for a bit, but—I don't know—touching poor old Reggie always seems to me rather like potting a sitting bird."

"Of course, I don't want you to do anything like that. I was thinking—Archie, darling, would you be very hurt if I gave father the picture?"

Archie had always thought Lucille the dearest and most unselfish angel in the world, but never had the fact come home to him so forcibly as now. He kissed her fondly.

"By Jove! You really are, you know! This is the biggest thing since jolly old Sir Philip What's-his-name gave the drink of water to the poor blighter whose need was greater than his, if you recall the incident. Well, of course, it's up to you, queen of my soul. If you feel like making the sacrifice, right o! Shall I bring the pater up here and show him the picture?"

"No; I wouldn't do that. Do you think you could get into his suite tomorrow morning and hang it up somewhere? You see, if he had the chance of—what I mean is, if—yes; I think it would be best to hang it up and let him discover it there."

"It would give him a surprise, you mean—what?"

"Yes."

Lucille sighed inaudibly. She was a girl with a conscience, and that conscience was troubling her a little. She agreed with Archie that the discovery of the Wigmore Venus in his artistically furnished suite would give Mr. Brewster a surprise.

ARCHIE whistled merrily on the following morning as, having driven a nail in his father-in-law's wall paper, he adjusted the cord from which the Wigmore Venus was suspended. He had just completed his work and was stepping cautiously down when a voice behind him nearly caused him to overbalance.

"What the mischief?"

Archie turned beamingly.

"Hullo, old thing! Many happy returns of the day!"

Mr. Brewster was standing in a frozen attitude.

"What—what"—— he gurgled.

He stared at the Venus dumbly. Unlike most hotel proprietors, Daniel Brewster was a connoisseur of art. Even the public rooms of the Cosmopolis were decorated with taste, and his own private suite was a shrine of all that was best and most artistic. His tastes were quiet and restrained, and it is not too much to say that the Wigmore Venus hit him behind the ear like a stuffed eelskin.

"It's a birthday present from Lucille, don't you know."

"Lucille gave me—that?" he muttered.

He swallowed pathetically. He was suffering, but the iron courage of the Brewsters stood him in good stead. Presently the rigidity of his face relaxed. He was himself again. Of all things in the world, he loved his daughter most, and if, in whatever mood of temporary insanity, she had wrought herself to suppose that this beastly daub was the sort of thing he would like for a birthday present he must accept the situation like a man. He would, on the whole, have preferred death to a life lived in the society of the Wigmore Venus, but even that torment must be endured if the alternative was the hurting of Lucille's feelings.

Archie was not a man who readily allowed himself to become worried, especially about people who were not in his own immediate circle of friends, but in the course of the next week he was bound to admit that he was not altogether easy in his mind about his father-in-law's mental condition. He had read all sorts of things in the Sunday papers and elsewhere about the constant strain to which captains of industry are subjected, a strain which, sooner or later, is only too apt to make the victim go all blooey, and it seemed to him that Mr. Brewster was beginning to find the going a trifle too tough for his stamina. Undeniably he was behaving in an odd manner, and Archie, though no physician, was aware that when the American business men—that restless, over-active human machine—starts behaving in an odd manner, the next thing you know is that two strong men, one attached to each arm, are hurrying him into a cab bound for Bloomingdale. He did not confide his misgiving to Lucille, not wishing to cause her anxiety. He hunted up Reggie Van Tuyl at the club, and sought advice from him.

"I say, Reggie, old thing, present company excepted, have there been any loonies in your family?"

Reggie stirred in the slumber which always gripped him in the early afternoon.

"'Loonies?'" he mumbled sleepily. "Rather! My uncle Edgar thought he was twins."

"Twins, eh?"

"Yes. Silly idea! I mean, you'd have thought one of my uncle Edgar would have been enough for any man."

"How did the thing start?" asked Archie.

"'Start?' Well, the first thing we noticed was when he began wanting two of everything. Had to set two places for him at dinner, and so on. Always wanted two seats at the theater. Ran into money, I can tell you."

"He didn't behave rummily up till then?"

"Not that I remember. Why?"

Archie's tone became grave.

"Well, I'll tell you, old man, though I don't want it to go any further, that I'm a bit worried about my jolly old father-in-law. I believe he's about to go in off the deep end. Dashed weird his behavior has been the last few days."

"Such as?" murmured Mr. Van Tuyl.

"Well, the other morning I happened to be in his suite—incidentally, he wouldn't go above $10 and I wanted switch on the light, did so, and, turning after completing this maneuver, was greeted by the spectacle of his father-in-law seated on the floor in a breathless and disheveled condition, blinking at the sudden illumination. On the carpet beside Mr. Brewster lay a long knife, and beside the knife lay the handsomely framed masterpiece of J. B. Wheeler's fiancee, Miss Alice Wigmore. Archie stared at this collection dumbly.

"Oh, what ho!" he observed at length, feebly.

A distinct chill manifested itself in the region of Archie's spine. This could mean only one thing. His fears had been realized. The strain of modern life with all its hustle and excitement, had at last proved too much for Mr. Brewster. Crushed by the thousand and one anxieties and worries of a millionaire's existence, Daniel Brewster had gone off his onion.

ARCHIE was nonplussed. This was his first experience of this kind of thing. What, he asked himself, was the proper procedure in a situation of this sort? What was the local rule? Where, in a word, did he go from here? He was still musing in an embarrassed and baffled way, having taken the precaution of kicking the knife under the sofa, when Mr. Brewster spoke. And there was in both the words and the method of their delivery so much of his old familiar self that Archie felt quite relieved.

"So it's you—is it?—you wretched blight, you miserable weed!" said Mr. Brewster, having recovered enough breath to go on with. "I might have expected it. If I was at the North Pole I could count on you butting in."

"Shall I get you a drink of water?" said Archie.

"What," demanded Mr. Brewster, "do you imagine I want with a drink of water?"

"Well"—Archie hesitated delicately—"I had a sort of idea that you had been feeling the strain a bit. I mean to say, rush of modern life and all that sort of thing"——

"What are you doing in my room?" said Mr. Brewster, changing the subject.

"Well, I came to tell you something, and I came in here and was waiting for you, and I saw some chappie biffing about in the dark, and I thought it was a burglar or something after some of your things; so, thinking it over, I got the idea that it would be a fairly juicy scheme to land on him with both feet. No idea it was you, old thing. Frightfully sorry and all that. Meant well."

Mr. Brewster sighed deeply. He was a just man, and he could not but realize that, in the circumstances, Archie had behaved not unnaturally.

"Oh, well," he sighed, "I might have known something would go wrong."

"Awfully sorry!"

"It can't be helped. What was it you wanted to tell me?" He eyed his son-in-law piercingly. "Not a cent over $20," he said, coldly.

Archie hastened to dispel the pardonable error.

"Oh, it wasn't anything like that," he said.

"I was dining with Lucille just now, and, as we dallied with the foodstuffs, she told me something which—well, I'm bound to say it made me feel considerably braced. She told me to trot along and ask you if you would mind"——

"I gave Lucille a hundred dollars only last Tuesday."

Archie was pained.

"Adjust this sordid outlook, old thing," he urged. "You simply aren't anywhere near it. What Lucille told me to ask you was if you would mind at some tolerably near date being a grandfather. Rotten thing to be, of course," proceeded Archie commiseratingly, "for a chappie of your age, but there it is!"

Mr. Brewster gulped.

"Do you mean to say"——

"I mean, apt to make a fellow feel a bit of a patriarch. Snowy hair and what not. And, of course, for a chappie in the prime of life, like you"——

A curious change had come over Mr. Brewster. He was one of those men who have the appearance of having been hewn out of the solid rock, but now, in some indescribable way, he seemed to have melted. For a moment, he gazed at Archie, then, moving quickly forward, he grasped his hand in an iron grip.

"Awfully good of you to take it like this," said Archie cordially. "I mean being a grandfather"——

MR. BREWSTER smiled. Of a man of his appearance, one could hardly say that he smiled playfully, but there was something in his expression that remotely suggested playfulness.

"My dear old bean," he said. And started. "My dear old bean," repeated Mr. Brewster, firmly, "I'm the happiest man in America!" His eyes fell on the picture which lay on the floor. He gave a slight shudder, but recovered himself immediately. "After all," he said, "I can reconcile myself to it with that thing for the rest of my life if I feel it doesn't matter."

"I say!" said Archie. "How did you that? Wouldn't have brought the thing up if you hadn't introduced the topic, but, speaking as man to man, what led you up to when I landed on your head just now?"

"I suppose you thought I had it off my head."

"Well, I'm bound to say"——

Mr. Brewster cast an unfriendly glance at the picture.

"Well, I had every excuse, after living with that infernal thing for a week."

Archie looked at him, astonished.

you don't like that jolly old work of art."

"Like it!" cried Mr. Brewster. "It's nearly driven me mad. Every time it caught my eye, it gave me a pain in the neck. Tonight, I felt as if I couldn't stand it any longer. I didn't want to hurt Lucille's feelings by telling her, so I made up my mind I would cut the blamed thing out of its frame and tell her it had been stolen."

Archie was thinking.

"Well, all this rather gets past me," he said. "Personally, I've always admired the thing. Still, of course, if you feel that way"——

"You may take it from me that I do."

"Well, then, in that case—you know how clumsy I am—you can tell Lucille it was all my fault"——

"Golly!" said Archie, regarding the wreckage remorsefully.

Mr. Brewster did not share his remorse. For the second time that night, he gripped him by the hand.

"My boy!" he quavered. He stared at Archie as if he were seeing him with new eyes. "My dear boy, you were through the war, were you not?"

"Eh? Oh, yes—right through the jolly old war!"

"What was your rank?"

"Oh, Second Lieutenant."

"You ought to have been a General!" Mr. Brewster clasped his hand once more in a vigorous embrace. "I only hope," he added, "that your son will be like you."

There are certain compliments, or compliments coming from certain sources, before which modesty reels, stunned. Archie's did. He swallowed convulsively. He had never thought to hear those words from Daniel Brewster.

"How would it be, old thing," he said, almost brokenly, "if you and I trickled down to the bar and had a spot of sherbet?"

THE Wigmore Venus smiled up at Archie, it seemed to him, with a pathetic, pleading smile. For a moment he was conscious of a feeling of guilt; then, closing his eyes and hardening his heart, he sprang lightly in the air and descended with both feet on the picture. There was a sound of rending canvas and Venus ceased to smile.

EM DALTON—EX-BADMAN

GRAT DALTON and the other two men ran shooting toward the Isham store. Cashier Ayers of the First National Bank, who was leading their pursuers, fell.

The men of Coffeyville were frontiersmen, then, and frontiersmen shoot straight. Emmett Dalton had reached his horse. He looked down. There was Gratton lying dead, white and still. Near by was Powers, his hands thrown out in the form of a cross. Back of him lay Bob Dalton, blood oozing from his nostrils. He raised on his belly and sighted his rifle.

Before Emmett Dalton lay freedom. Back of him was his brother. He turned to Bob. Meantime Broadwell reached his horse, but just as he mounted he was hit by two charges, buckshot and a rifle bullet. His frightened horse dashed up the road. The man clung to it. Then his grip loosened and he toppled to the ground.

But Emmett Dalton rode toward the posse. He whirled his cow pony around, then bent above his brother, and, reaching down, tried to raise the dying leader.

Bob Dalton tried to say something, but the next moment Emmett Dalton toppled from his horse. He had been struck by buckshot in the hip and arm.

Bob Dalton had missed his calculation: In just 12 minutes—not 15—the Dalton gang was gone. All but one.

THAT was the story that the farmer jury in Federal Court in Minneapolis heard, while its members leaned forward in their chairs as though they were listening to some dime novel.

And this last member of that gang wanted a million dollars for hurt to his reputation! They looked again at Emmett Dalton sitting there. They had their dinner and were out an hour.

"We find for the defendant," was their verdict.

Baseball Player's Life a Happy One was not a colorful player until this year. He plodded along year in and year out, accepted his contract without much argument and was so reasonable that for four years, from 1921 to 1925, he toiled for $6000 a year.

Then the "Baby Doll" had a good year. He did not bat as well as in some previous years. But he chased flies in the outfield with such success that he set a new record for total chances accepted. Perhaps his pitchers were being hit harder than usual and straighter than usual. Perhaps he thought it was time to step up out of the doldrums of mediocrity and join the players of color, the record breakers. At any rate, the flies came to his territory and he sped after them in his awkwardly efficient way until he set a new record.

And in reflecting over his great record-breaking performance Jacobson decided that he would toil no longer for $6000 a year. And so he returned the $6000 contract and asked for $10,000. Phil Ball decided it was a case of holdup, as well as holdout, and he declared and reiterated that Jacobson could accept the $6000 offer or find other employment.

Ban Johnson, president of the League, stepped in and finally settled the case, signed Jacobson at a salary not disclosed, but before that happened there was many a hot argument in barber shop, restaurant and in family circles over the business of baseball.

Everybody sympathized with Jacobson. That was natural.

Much has been said about this "human chattel" feature of the ballplayer's contract. Once a player signs a contract he gives up all right to say where he shall play. He cannot leave one club to accept a better offer from another club. If all major league clubs waive rights to his services his employer can send him to a minor league. He must go to the minor league or give up baseball.

But this contract feature, which may seem unfair, is the corner stone, the keystone and the foundation of organized baseball. Without it club owners could not risk their millions, for they might wake up some morning and find that their players had quit and gone to another city to accept better baseball jobs. There would be an annual fight among the owners, a grand bidding scramble for the services of the stars. Baseball could not survive without that contract feature, the reserve clause as it is called, and therefore it always will be a feature of baseball contracts.

And it is as good a friend to the player as to the magnate. For if there were no insurance that a club could build surely and with confidence the owners would not risk their money. They could not contract to pay high salaries. Leagues would fall and the young men who now drape themselves over the costly linen in the dining rooms of the best hostelries would be taking their nourishment in the "one-armed" restaurants where, if you're not careful, the spoons will poke you in the eye.

La-May Stays On Better than Any Other Face Powder

Do you know you can now get a pure face powder that really stays on—that stays on until you wash it off—that beautifies wonderfully — that does not show noticeably as make-up? And it does not contain a single harmful ingredient! Every thing used to make it stay on is recommended by doctors and skin specialists to benefit and beautify the skin. No cold cream that might grow hair—no white lead to poison the skin—no rice powder to cause enlarged pores, blackheads and eruptions.

This delightful powder is called La-May (French, Poudre L'Ame). It is the successful creation of a specialist who spent twenty years to perfect a beauty powder to prevent and banish enlarged pores instead of producing them, to keep the skin young instead off ageing it, and to prevent and remedy eruptions instead of causing them.

Thousands of beautiful New York women are gratefully praising La-May; they have confidence in its purity; they refuse to take a chance in using another powder, even when offered by a friend. Girls, if you honestly value the charm of a lovely complexion, you will never be satisfied until you give your skin the lasting benefit of this real beauty powder. Millions of women are devoted to it; they say it goes on smoother, looks better and it stays on marvelously well.

You can get La-May in any of the good stores at sixty cents, one dollar and three dollars per box, in White, Flesh, Brunette and Tan. All stores sell the special generous trial size, enough for a month, for only thirty-five cents. Remember, you are offered five thousand dollars if you can buy a better, a finer, a smoother, a purer or safer powder than La-May anywhere at any price. Save this notice.

It's Safe to Use La-May—It's Pure!

There's a hint of Paris boulevards in this smart coupé by Rollin

GLISTENING shop-windows along the Rue de la Paix . . fashionable throngs in the Champs . . supper at the Cafe de Paris . . you will sense what we mean the instant you glimpse the Rollin. That distingué Continental air . . that savoir vivre of one to the manner born.

For the Rollin makes an instant appeal to those accustomed to the best life holds. It was designed for that new generation of motorists whose demand is for the quality of the bigger, costlier cars without the bulk and without the penalty of price.

Engineers have called the Rollin, "The only fine small car being built in America"—the voiture de ville.

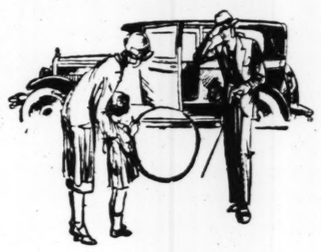
Certain it is that no motor-car, regardless of size, price or reputation, uses finer materials than the Rollin. No car on the road has had the benefit of better engineering. No car can boast finer coach-work. Of course, the Rollin is unabashed in any company.

For some the Rollin is a second car for the crush of city driving, for the run out to the country club, while the "big car" stands in the garage. But for the great majority, it answers every purpose. And why not? It has the looks. It has the ability.

The Rollin chassis is a symphony in mechanical perfection. For Rollin H. White, its designer, has builded something of himself into this really fine car. The motor embodies the best of aircraft technic. It extracts 25 to 30 miles from every gallon of fuel, and is good for 100,000 happy, care-free miles.

The bodies are of custom type and in keeping with the fineness of the chassis. Finished in durable Duco, in striking color-combinations. Deep, inviting cushions collaborate with the riding ease of the 3-point-suspension springs and balloon tires. Doors close with a quality "clunk," revealing substantial fittings.

See the Rollin. Drive it. Notice how it handles in the thickest going. How it darts in and around clumsier cars. See how it parks in space that larger cars wouldn't even attempt. Sense the safety of those 4-wheel brakes, especially designed for the Rollin by our own engineers. Watch the Rollin flatten the hills and make the landscape blur on the straightaway.



Yes . . you'll be proud to own the Rollin. To take your friends in it, knowing that it will not fail you at a critical moment; knowing that there will be no occasion to blush in any competition. And the price is a pleasant surprise! Convenient payments arranged on request. The Rollin Motors Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

For the sake of personal charm and comfort—let Blue-jay end that corn.

. . . . .

Blue-jay is the delightful way to end a corn. A tiny cushion, cool as velvet, fits over the corn—relieving the pressure. The pain ends at once. Soon the corn goes. Blue-jay leaves nothing to guess-work. You do not have to decide how much or how little to put on. . . . Each soft downy plaster is a complete standardized treatment with just the right amount of the magic medication to end the corn.

To Prove How to Restore

Gray Hair

I personally request every gray haired person to write for my patented Free Trial outfit, and let me prove how easily, quickly, surely gray hair can be restored.

This offer would be impossible if I couldn't guarantee results. But I perfected my Restorer to get back the original color in my own prematurely gray hair. I know what it will do.

My Restorer is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water. Doesn't interfere with shampooing. Nothing to wash or rub off. Renewed color perfect.

MAIL COUPON TODAY

Send today for the special patented Free Trial outfit which contains a trial bottle of my Restorer and full instructions for making the convincing test on one lock of hair. Indicate color of hair with X. If possible, enclose a lock of your hair in your letter.

FRECKLES

Don't hide them with a Veil; Remove them with Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil or waste time on lemon juice or cucumbers; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back proposition.

We recommend Othine Complexion Soap for use with Othine, also as a shampoo—it's wonderful for bobbed hair—25c a cake at all drug or department stores or by mail. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Have a "Different" Vacation This Summer!

RESPOND to the lure of majestic, snow-clad mountains, of Rainier and other dazzling snow-capped peaks; beautiful lakes, placid inland seas, rushing Alpine streams and such a diversity of recreations that you will be puzzled how to crowd them all into one vacation.

Take this vacation you owe yourself. Make this a summer "Out West," on the rim of the Pacific, the storied Northwest, brimful of interesting cities, people, sights and experiences.

Here you will find, surrounding Seattle, a region all Nature combined to make the Summer Playground, par excellence, of the Nation. Escape summer heat. Come where you will be comfortable, every day and every night.

Write Room 112, Chamber of Commerce, Seattle, Washington, for free, illustrated "Charmed Land" booklet, describing Wonderland, with its rejuvenating allurements for every member of the family. Remember the railroads grant special low round-trip summer excursion rates to Seattle and the Pacific Northwest.

Special low summer round trip to Seattle and return, only $81.50. Make reservations NOW!

PROPER EXPOSURE puts detail in a picture. With this camera proper exposure is easy. A sliding scale picks the stop or speed that suits the light. The Diomatic shutter works at 1/10, 1/25, 1/50, 1/100—precisely.

Kodak Anastigmat negatives are sharp, which means sharp prints and enlargements.

And convenience! Open the bed and the front springs to picture position. A fingertip turn of the lens sets the focus.

You'll enjoy using the 1A Pocket Kodak, Series II. And its pictures, well-timed and well-defined, are the kind of pictures you like.

To the Ladies—

The secret of a business woman's success, so "they" say, is brains but the knowing woman of today will tell you that a business woman's success, be it the business of conducting her home or following a career, depends on a proportionate admixture of brains and BEAUTY, and "beauty" in this respect means—well-kept skin, well-kept hair and well-kept hands, all of which may be attained and retained through the use of suitable creams, lotions, etc.

In this connection we are prepared to offer the well-known brands of Toilet Preparations produced by RICHARD HUDNUT of New York and Paris—cleansing, nourishing and protecting creams; face powders fine of texture and exquisitely fragranced; milk-white lotions for the care of the hands; refreshing toilet waters; bath preparations that soften and perfume the bath water (which serves to preserve the youthful transparency of the skin), and a full line of all the necessary make-up specialties, such as powder and rouge compacts, lip sticks, eyebrow pencils, etc., etc.

Questions and Answers

Mrs. J. R. asks: "I am 52 years old and am very nervous. Suffer a great deal with pain in head and back of neck. Have no ambition and am always tired and depressed. Am pale and listless."

Answer: Anemia is definitely one of the important conditions which produce the symptoms you describe. Poor blood gives one a tired, run-down feeling, pretty much as poor fuel gives poor steam. Cadomene tablets are taken for the improvement of anemia, and for quickening the flow of the blood, and thus restore the normal health of the body organs and nervous system.

• • •

J. D. asks: "I am seventeen and have weight for my age and am not. Am troubled with constipation and pimples and boils on face and body. Would like to know what to take."

Answer: To correct and the bowels and rid the blood of the poisons causing pimples and boils, take Sulpherb Tablets as a tonic laxative. To increase weight try Hypo-Nuclane Tablets as a nutritional tonic. They may be taken at the same time.

• • •

H. A. S. asks: "I have bladder and kidney trouble and often have dull aches and stiffness of muscles and joints. Can this condition be helped?"

Answer: This condition is sometimes due to constipation in which case take Sulpherb Tablets as a bowel and kidney regulator. To the functional recovery of the kidneys take Balmwort Tablets as a diuretic tonic and soothing agent to tone up the kidneys and overcome the bladder irritations.

Answer to Mrs. E. M. H.: Where high blood pressure exists the personal attention of a physician is necessary.

• • •

Answer to Mrs. E. E.: For your child's obstinate cough try Mentho-Laxene. Sustains by creating a healthy appetite, aids digestion, tones up the system and puts the whole ordinary cough to flight.

• • •

Mrs. K. R. asks: "Will you please advise a remedy for nasal catarrh and bad breath?"

Answer: Obtain antiseptic Vilane Powder and use as per directions as a nasal douche; mouth wash and to gargle throat twice or more daily. Also apply Mentho-Laxene Salve in nostrils morning and night. This is the most effective treatment when used regularly for several weeks.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director of the Baker-Roberts Institute, has been recommending trustworthy remedies to the people through the newspapers and doubtless has helped to relieve the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single physician in the world. Tactfully and by an inexpensive method.

The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit forming drugs. They represent the best in the world wisdom and experience of physician and chemist.

Progressive druggists can supply them.

By reading his answers to others you may find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to any one sending for same, postpaid.

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

Letters to Dr. Baker

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Richard Schaefer, engineer, 6437 Smiley Ave., writes: "A couple of years ago I had typhoid fever which left me in a run down, weakened condition. At times I had to quit work. I was so weak I began to use Cadomene tablets and in a short time I could see I was being made stronger. In all I took four boxes, gained about eleven pounds in weight, quit having the weak spells and I ate and slept better than I had for months before taking them. Cadomene is my standby tonic, and I recommend it most highly, etc."

• • •

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Mrs. L. Gastmann, 3648 Salena St., writes: "My husband had a very bad backache for years. In the mornings he could hardly get up and always felt so tired. We tried everything until I read about Balmwort tablets and he used just one box and to this day he never has had any more backache, etc."

• • •

MOBERLY, MO.: Miss M. A. Brewer, Lock Box 227, writes: "I saw your Answers to Health questions in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and as a case similar to mine, itching skin, rash and blotches, had appeared a boy of eighteen, I sent for a box of Sulpherb tablets at once. Have taken 4 packages and there is a wonderful change for nothing rash and blotches have disappeared. Also tried Minyol for my hair and scalp, as I was annoyed with dandruff and received splendid results and am telling my friends, etc."

• • •

FAIRBANKS, IND.: Mrs. E. Price Thomson, R. R. No. 1, writes: "I am 46 years old and have been troubled with indigestion for over two years and had doctored with several doctors. They said they couldn't do much good and I would have to suffer it out. I would have spells of belching, heavy feeling in stomach, bloating and at times could scarcely get my breath. One day I read your answers and saw that someone else had suffered as I did and had got relief from taking Trioperton Tablets. I used them and have not been troubled since and I will gladly tell others of their goodness, etc."

• • •

MARSEILLES, ILL.: M. Valen, 754 Lincoln St., writes: "Have had wonderful results from Sulpherb tablets for pimples (acne). I can not praise them too highly, etc."

• • •

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Mr. Ed. A. Wallace, 2948 Railway Exchange Bldg., writes: "I don't know whether a testimonial regarding Mentho-Laxene will interest you, as I presume you obtain thousands, but want to let you know that your excellent remedy has conquered many a bad cough for me. I am a showman, and am out in all kinds of weather, but never worry when I have Mentho-Laxene with me—the immediate relief given is almost like magic, etc."

• • •

WATERVLIET, MICH.: L. Mack, Box 140, writes: "I want to tell you I had catarrh for a number of years. I tried triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve and Vilane powder and they have rid me of Catarrh, and I cannot praise your treatment enough. Use this letter, etc."

• • •

KANSAS CITY, MO.: Mrs. Grace Bray, 903 W. 18th st., writes: "I think Arbolone Tablets are wonderful. I have reduced 25 pounds in past five weeks. I did weigh 168. Am still taking them. You are surely welcome to use my letter, etc."

• • •

VALLEY FALLS, R. I.: Mary Cummings, 56 High st., writes: "Your Sulthol Tablets for relief of pain are wonderful. I never had anything no matter what price I paid for it, that worked so very mild and wonderful."

• • •

WEBSTER GROVES, MO.: Mrs. A. H. Haugh, 7913 Weil Ave., writes: "My little girl has been helped wonderfully by Mentho-Laxene. She had coughed for 3 years. I've also tried Mentho-Laxene Salve and wouldn't be without it. Also Balmwort tablets have been very beneficial to me."

THE BLACKBURN PRODUCTS CO.
DAYTON, OHIO

The Wolff-Wilson Drug Company have, for many years, sold the trustworthy products recommended by Dr. Lewis Baker and have always found them to give the utmost satisfaction to the Public.

A VALUABLE SOUVENIR
AS OUR ANNIVERSARY REMEMBRANCE

Forty years ago when this business started—the Pioneer standing beneath a tree with a mirror hanging thereon, shaved with that wonderful old straight blade, the last word in steel hardness and temper, a famous Sheffield product, the Wade and Butcher Razor, a blade that never had been equaled until the famous Durham-Duplex Double-Edge Blade, "the blade men swear by, not at," became America's Standard.

This great blade has revolutionized shaving and thousands of St. Louis men have purchased it at our store. Today most of the shaving men of St. Louis know not only its value, but the comfort of the Durham Duplex Shave. Whenever you see a happy, smiling St. Louisan he, too, belongs to the D. D. Family.

Have you been missed? If so, we want you to visit our store this week, purchase one package of Durham Duplex Blades at the manufacturer's advertised price 50c, and we will give you free a Durham Duplex Razor in a beautiful case with our Compliments as our Anniversary Remembrance.

Merely make the statement, "I would like to try the Durham-Duplex and if I like it will join the army of 'Good Morning' shavers."

Our clerks will serve you.

Remember! The Durham-Duplex Blade is America's Standard.

"The Blade Men Swear By, Not At."

A Quality Product for the Hair and Scalp

For twenty-five years, Newbro's Herpicide has maintained a place of leadership among hair preparations because of superior quality and excellence. Pure and clear, free from grease and oil, without stain or dye, Herpicide may be used upon the most sensitive scalp and may be relied upon to successfully eradicate dandruff and prevent hair loss.

Directions for use:

At the first symptom of trouble, usually dandruff or itching of the scalp, give the hair a thorough shampoo with Herpicide Tar Soap. Follow this by an application of Newbro's Herpicide carefully massaged into the scalp. If the hair has already begun to comb out freely, do not rub too vigorously at first—wait until Herpicide has had a chance to revive its natural strength and vigor. Continue the Herpicide applications every other day for several weeks and the shampoo about once a month. When all dandruff has disappeared and the scalp again appears normal, applications of Herpicide once or twice a week will suffice to keep it strong, healthy, and vigorous.

Of proved merit

Thousands of men and women have received permanent benefit from use of Newbro's Herpicide and a single trial bottle will convince you of its merit. Sold at all drug counters. Applications at any barber shop.

We Guarantee to Stop Falling Hair

IN THREE WEEKS! Or Your Money Refunded

Van Ess Scalp Massage has grown new hair for more than one million users! It will do the same for you Note the amazing change in the scalp of Mr. Scully!

4501 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., October 15, 1924.

I was bald since the World's War. I tried H..... K..... L..... P..... and others without results. In February, 1924 I started using Van Ess daily; by April, after finishing my third bottle, I had a good crop of hair showing.

Thinking my baldness conquered, I became neglectful, using Van Ess about twice a week. My new proud possession began to disappear. I quickly resumed the daily use of Van Ess, now my hair is getting thicker and longer with new hair appearing daily.

I have impressed on my mind that Van Ess once a day makes the hair stay.

Gratefully,
THOMAS F. SCULLY

Mother Nature — as Health's Guardian

THIS IS the age of the athletic girl, the girl of fair complexion, bright eyes, rose-tinted cheeks. This is the day of HEALTH, and women and girls allow their systems to become clogged by impurities must see the piper. Facial blemishes, sallow skins, headaches, constipation, biliousness—a thousand and one toy-destroying ailments follow in the wake of a neglected portal duty. Nature here properly needs such neglect.

Nature's Remedy is really Mother Nature in a pleasantly helpful form—all vegetable and a gentle, tested, yet very potent plan of insuring health. The use of NR Tablets means less than that an all-wise Mother Nature is ever present, ready to help you in any way which you may not be doing for yourself—only then with more than mere natural assistance.

Fashionable women are always slender

Can you wear the modish clothes which you see in the shops? Or must you deny yourself pretty things because you know they will not fit—because your figure is no longer slender?

The smartest costumes all require a slender figure—a smooth unbroken silhouette.

Yet many fashionable women who now wear original models, once suffered from overweight. They found the pleasant way to reduce—Marmola Tablets (thousands of men and women each year regain healthy, slender figures this way). With these tablets you, too, can have a slender figure—no exercises or diets.

Proud Of His Playmate

PROUD of the admiring glances inspired by her exquisite loveliness. Proud to have her as his companion in the zestful gaieties of a social life, far removed from the dull, drab, colorless existence of the woman who neglects her personal appearance.

Hers the poise, the queenly grace of the fascinating woman, sure of herself because she has developed to the utmost the charms that nature gave her.

One of the carefully guarded secrets of many women famous for their beauty is now available to you to enhance your attractiveness.

You need do only one thing more than you are doing now, but, oh! what a difference it makes.

You use face creams now, but with these alone you are stopping far short of the beauty that can be yours.

The secret—this one thing more, is that blue-gray magic—Boncilla Clasmic Beautifier.

This Beautifier is now used in Beauty Salons throughout the world.

Your chemist has it or can easily get it for you. Use it twice each week. You will see improvement the first time you use it. Its consistent use will impart a perfection of skin texture and natural color of which you will be proud; a complexion beauty that will excite the envy and admiration of others.

It relieves the plainness that robs so many faces of distinction and attractiveness.

No face so fair that Boncilla Clasmic Beautifier will not improve it. And when the stress of social engagements and every-day worries give the face that tired feeling and appearance, give yourself up to one-half hour of relaxation and the smoothing ministrations of its magic.

As the tired tissues drink in its rejuvenating balsams they respond almost instantly, and you go forth after this brief respite, refreshed, your face tingling with renewed vitality, verve and youthfulness.

We are so certain you will be pleased with what Boncilla Clasmic Beautifier will do for you that we give you this assurance: If after a fair trial you are not satisfied, return the empty container and your money will be refunded.

Norida Vanitie for Loose Powder

Use any loose powder you prefer. Carry it with you wherever you go. The powder cannot spill.

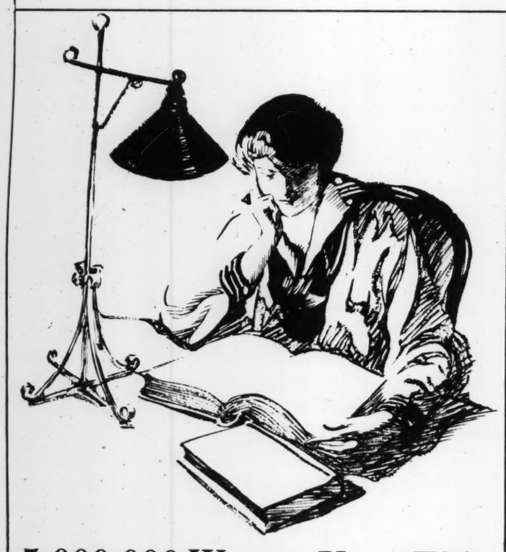
The Norida Vanitie for Loose Powder is a dainty, handsomely finished case, equipped with a mirror and small puff.

Comes filled with a liberal supply of Fleur Sauvage (Wildflower) Poudre.

$1.50

It Works So Easy
Simply open cover, turn powder plate, take up loose powder with puff and apply. Takes only a few seconds to refill with loose powder.

It's Economical!
The first cost is practically the last. With proper care it will last for a long time, much longer than ordinary powder cases. One case is all you need—the same case for any loose powder you wish to use. No waste powder—every bit is used. No more powder cakes to drop and break.



5,000,000 Women Urge This

A new scientific way in personal hygiene, approved by doctors, nurses. Now improved by a new laboratory secret

Five million women urge that you, too, try this new way in personal hygiene which they have adopted within the past few years.

To them it has brought a new immaculacy, unhandicapped freedom—has banished embarrassment and uncertainty.

This new way they recommend is Kotex. The scientific successor to the old-fashioned sanitary napkin.

Doctors and nurses approve Kotex, because the old makeshifts were dangerous to health, unhygienic.

Now Kotex has been improved by science. As a result of years of laboratory experiments, a new deodorant has been discovered. And each pad of Kotex is treated by this new secret formula. Women will be quick to appreciate the amazing sense of security this new feature brings.

Why women changed their habits overnight

Doctors say 60% of ills common to women are directly traceable to makeshift sanitary methods. 80% of the loss of charm, they say, of the feminine immaculacy expected at all times, is chiefly due to the same reason. Every woman knows this to be true.

Kotex is a sanitary pad made of Cellucotton, the world's super-absorbent. It absorbs 16 times its own weight in moisture. It is five times as absorbent as cotton.

Another important advantage that women value highly is that it can be discarded easily, just like a piece of tissue—without bother or embarrassment.

Kotex is germ-proof, packed in sanitary sealed packages of twelve. In two sizes, the regular and Kotex-Super.

Easy to get—anywhere

All drug and department stores have Kotex, deodorized—ready-wrapped in plain paper. There are no questions to ask or answer, no needless conversation. Simply pay the clerk and walk out, that is all.

Today, get Kotex and learn what it has come to mean to millions of women who have adopted it. It must at least be worth a trial!

Now Kotex Deodorized

Every pad of Kotex today is deodorized! The new deodorant with which it is treated is our secret invention. It is found exclusively in Kotex—only.

After years of laboratory research it has been tested, proved. There is nothing like it. Added to the many other features of Kotex, remember this positive protection.

Insist on Kotex at all better drug and department stores.

Get this Protection for Your Teeth and Health

There's a definite relation between an engaging smile and this new, scientific, tooth-saving brush. For without sound teeth, good health—the rewards of your twice-a-day brushings—your smiles would be fewer and less pleasing; your disposition would suffer; your personality lose much of its charm.

Tooth decay, the enemy of your smile, starts in the less-exposed spots and crevices of your teeth. Germs seek out these hiding places. Food particles collect. To avert trouble they must be continually brushed away.

Dr. West's Tooth Brush was designed especially for this purpose. Its convex brushing surface establishes contact with the INSIDE contour of your teeth as no other brush can—at the same time cleaning thoroughly all OUTSIDE surfaces. And its bristles, tufted and trimmed into wedge-shaped "brooms," penetrate the inter-dental spaces and rid them of all decay-producing elements.

Your smile is charming when brightened by white teeth. Keep smiling—happy—good natured—have a pleasing personality. Insure your teeth, your health and your SMILE with a Dr. West's Tooth Brush. At all good dealers!

There's a Dr. West's Tooth Brush for every member of the family. Prices: Adult's, 50c; Youth's, 35c; Child's, 25c; Gum Massage, 75c.

The only tooth brush with the health curve

The curve above makes cleaning every part of every tooth so much simpler and easier that dentists and users have named it "The Health Curve." It is a patented feature, hence can be had in no other tooth brush.

Please try this Shaving Cream we made

By V. K. CASSADY, Chief Chemist

GENTLEMEN

We have spent a lifetime studying soaps. Our success is known to all. One of our creations — Palmolive — is the leading toilet soap of the world.

We asked men — hundreds of them — what they most desired in a Shaving Cream. Then we set out to perfect it.

We worked 18 months. We made up and tested 130 separate formulas before we attained our ideal.

Men applauded

But then we had a Shaving Cream which all who know applaud.

We offered samples which millions accepted. And they flocked to this new-day Cream. Tens of thousands wrote to thank us. Men don't often do that, as you know.

Men talked about it, urged others to try it. Thus in two years Palmolive Shaving Cream became the sensation in this field.

Now your turn

Now it's your turn, if you have not tried it. We made this Cream for men like you—made it to delight you. Now we claim the test you owe to yourself and to us a test.

Make it in fairness to yourself. Make it in kindness to us. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

5 Reasons

1—It multiplies itself in lather 250 times.
2—It softens the beard in one minute.
3—It maintains its creamy fullness for ten minutes on the face.
4—Strong bubbles support the hairs for cutting—a new, important factor.
5—The blend of palm and olive oils brings fine after-effects.

To add the final touch to shaving luxury, we have created Palmolive After Shaving Talc—especially for men. Doesn't show. Leaves the skin smooth and fresh, and gives that well-groomed look. Try the sample we are sending free with the tube of Shaving Cream.

There are new delights here for every man who shaves. Please let us prove them to you. Clip coupon now.

SHE HAS NEW HAIR GROWTH
Kotalko Did It

Frances Lonsdale has thick, wavy hair now. KOTALKO did it.
"My daughter was nearly bald," writes her father. "Although she had tried many things her hair would not grow. We thought the roots were dead.
"We sent for KOTALKO as a final test. We thought it would be like the other preparations she had used without results. But now I am glad to state that after using KOTALKO faithfully, she has thick, wavy hair, as you will see by her photograph. Unless I had seen it myself I would not have thought it possible.
Men also who were bald-headed for years report new hair growth by KOTALKO. Many testimonials from men and women.

A PLEASANT WAY TO TAKE EPSOM SALTS
A Missouri chemist has perfected a new and agreeable method of taking Epsom Salts in pleasant tablet form. You can chew them up like candy, swallow whole or place on tongue and take a drink of water. They are known as Luly's Epsom Salts Tablets and are made by the Continental Drug Corporation of St. Louis, Mo. Two of these tablets are as effective as a tablespoonful of Epsom Salts and yet they have no drastic after-effects. You can get them at Wolff-Wilson's Anniversary (25 tablets), 25c.

The Nationalists have decreed the red, white and black flag Kaiserism is to be spread over city while Von Hindenburg the oath of the republic and ore allegiance to the red, black gold of republicanism.

There will be no Republican in the procession, for the Re- blicans have refused to greet They announced they would see if Von Hindenburg were Republican before they honored as leader of the republic.

The Communists have issued clamations for a general strike soon as he enters the city.

Not since the days of the war the Kaiser has one man re- ved the tributs organized for Hindenburg. Stopping just side the city, he was met Chancellor Luther, Gen. von et and all the important mem- rs of the Government. Then he s escorted in an open automo- e to ride six miles through ets lined with enthusiasts to the sidential palace.

Cheerleader youths were instructed to ry rubber blackjacks for possible controversies with communists. The police have issued sweeping ers forbidding the monarchist patriotic societies from having their ds of welcome play "Frederick" or any other stirring marches reminiscent of the days of the Kai- r power. They also have pro- ited the communists and their patriotic societies from staging their monster open-air demonstra-
